Prof. Ellsworth Huntington says that during a recent geological trip through an almost unvisited part of the Taurus mountains in Turkey he heard of a peculiar electrical phenomenon. One of the natives told him that one mountain near his village fought with another mountain on the other side of the Euphrates river. The weapons were balls of light, which the mountains threw at each other. Prof. Huntington thought at first, as the region was one of volcanic activity in comparatively recent times, and as hot springs and extinct craters are still to be seen, that this must be a traditional account of a volcanic eruption. He was, however, convinced subsequently that the story had its origin in a meteorological phenomenon. The story as detailed to him by ten or twelve men whom he saw at five different places within an area of 40 miles was as follows: A ball of fire would start from one mountain and go like a flash to another. At the same time there is a sound like thunder. This occurs by night or by day, although by day no light is seen. It always occurs when the sky is clear, and never when it is cloudy. It sometimes happens two or three times in a year, and then again it is not seen for several years. For the last two years it has not been seen. It hardly ever happens except in the fall, at the end of a long dry season of three months. One of the mountains which he visited was composed of metamorphic schistose shale of the cretaceous age. Its height is 7,350 feet, and its top is comparatively flat. According to one account the ball of fire was at first small, but grew larger as it passed over, and then grew smaller again. Prof. Huntington believed that in this case the observer was standing between the two mountains. While meteorologists have not been ready with explanations of these mysterious lightnings, it is mentioned that there are peaks on the Rocky mountains on which almost continuous electrical discharges have been observed, but they pass off into the air quietly, like St. Elmo's fire, and never in great flashes from peak to peak. It is also known that a cloud or a mass of electrified air that has not quite attained the cloudy condition may lie between two peaks, and flashes may proceed from it simultaneously to the two peaks in such a way as to lend a careless observer to say that one peak discharged over the other. If this should be the approximate explanation of the Euphrates phenomenon, then it will happen only when the wind is in certain directions, such as to cause the formation of an incipient cloud and thunderstorm between the two peaks, and this wind direction will depend upon the relation of the peaks to the course of the river valley below. So that if the phenomenon is attributable to this source, it is not so very rare. On the other hand, if it is a myth, based upon some historical event or some misinterpretation of ancient names, the explanation will at all events be most interesting to students of history and philology.

Snow Shoes for Horses.

When a man tells about putting snow shoes on his horse one immediately thinks that there is some joke on or that the man is talking about the arctic region, but it seems that such things occur nearer home. A farmer from Sidney was in Augusta, who said he came without much difficulty, as he had trained his horse to wear snow shoes. He said that without the aid of these it would have been almost impossible for him to have made the trip.—Lewiston (Me.) Journal.

CATARRH THIRTY YEARS.

A Remarkable Experience of a Prominent Statesman.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON GIVES PE-RU-NA A HIGH ENDORSEMENT.

CONGRESSMAN MEEKISON, OF OHIO.

Hon. David Meekison is well known, not only in his own State, but throughout America. He began his political career by serving four consecutive terms as Mayor of the town in which he lives, during which time he became widely known as the founder of the Meekison Bank of Napoleon, Ohio. He was elected to the Fifty-fifth Congress by a very large majority, and is the acknowledged leader of his party in his section of the State.

Only one flaw marred the otherwise complete success of this rising statesman. Catarrh with its insidious approach and tenacious grasp, was his only unconquered foe. For thirty years he waged unsuccessful warfare against this personal enemy. At last Pe-ru-na came to the rescue, and he dictated the following letter to Dr. Hartman as the result:

"I have used several bottles of Pe-ru-na and feel greatly benefited thereby from my catarrh of the head. I feel encouraged to believe that if I use it a short time longer I will be able to fully eradicate the disease of thirty years' standing. Yours truly,

"David Meekison."

Many people can tolerate slight catarrhal affections. A little hoarseness, a slight cough, a cold in the head, or a trifling derangement of the digestive organs, do not much disturb the average person in his business. But this is not true of the public speaker or stage artist. His voice must always be clear, lungs perfect, digestion undisturbed. Hence the popularity of Pe-ru-na among the leading actors and actresses of this country. They have come to regard Pe-ru-na as indispensable to their success. Their profession is so exacting that it requires perfect health in every particular. They regard Pe-ru-na as their friend and safeguard. Many letters are received from this class of people.

Miss Carrie Thomas.

Miss Carrie Thomas, in speaking of Pe-ru-na, says: "I have used Pe-ru-na with splendid results. Would not be without it. No money would hire me to have a settled cold or chronic cough, or hoarseness. Catarrh is the most dreadful thing that could happen to one of my profession. Pe-ru-na is my shield and protector against this most undesirable disease."—Carrie Thomas.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Pe-ru-na, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

MAGNIFICENT SPECTACLE.

People traveling to the Pan-American exposition from the direction of Niagara Falls will get their first view of the Electric tower from a distance of 12 or more miles. From the river side of the steam or electric cars, the Electric tower is seen looming up in the southern sky high above nil other objects on the horizon. As the tower nears completion, says the exposition bulletin, the eyes of passengers on the trains and trolleys feast upon its magnificent height of 391 feet and obtain an impressive intimation of the mammoth proportions and beauty on which the exposition is being built. The magnitude of the Electric tower and its graceful lines cannot fail to impress all with the conviction that when it is illumined by the thousands of lights given lifa by the transmitted energy of the wonderful dynamos of Niagara, it will be a truly gorgeous spectacle, surpassing in its royal beauty anything of the kind ever erected by man. It will delight every eye that sees it. It will stir the hearts and minds of all with admiration for the men that conceived it and carried the plans to such glorious perfection. In every department the Pan-American will portray the progress of the Americas up to the present time, and when people view the electrical splendor of the exposition they will feel satisfied no matter what the century has in store in the way of additional progress, to have lived in an age when such results were possible of accomplishment. In these results the old and young will find education and entertainment, and their admiration of it all, which they will express on their home-going, will be simply reflective of the wondrous electric effects.

Dating Ahead.

An example of the danger of dating a publication ahead of the actual time of issue was illustrated by the London Modern Society, which came out with a date line reading "January 26," and an article saying that the queen was improving. The queen died on January 22.

STUDENTS MUST PRAY.

The University of Chicago Council Passes a Law Affecting the Recreants.

Unclassified students at the University of Chicago who have been purposely missing the daily prayers at chapel hours will hereafter be required to attend religious services and to comply with all the requirements which are in the regulations for regular students. The university council has passed a law which revokes all the special privileges of special or unclassified students.

Chapel prayers, physical culture, division lectures and other minor college requirements become so irksome to many students that in order to escape what they termed "useless red tape" they gradually changed their registration cards from regular students to special students. The result was that the university found itself with several hundred special students and with only a corporal's guard of regulars.

Consequently the university council took the matter up and passed such a rule that there is now no advantage in being an unclassified student. The result is that the students are now changing back to their regular positions on the university roster. One discrimination only has been made against unclassified students and that is that such students, members of athletic teams, could never be captains. This rule has almost caused a rupture in the athletic teams on several occasions and in order to avert trouble in the future the council ruled that "eligibility for membership in any athletic team or musical club implies afigibility to any office or honor within the gift of the team or club."

A Little Fable.

There was once an eminent statesman, who was always ready to file the initiative or do anything else that was not chained down. One day another eminent statesman charged upon him while he was busily writing.

"What are you doing?" asked the second statesman.

"Framing a bill to disfranchise the illiterates," responded the first. "And, by the way, I am glad you dropped in. How do you spell illiterates?"

It Is a Good Thing.

Everyone should be glad to say a good word for an article that deserves it, which accounts for the universal endorsement of the Sterling Remedy Co., makers of the famous Cascarets. Within five years the sale of Cascarets has grown from a single box until last year it reached the enormous sale of over 6,000,000 boxes. This is a matter of pride to newspaper men because Cascarets has been very largely and persistently advertised in newspapers for a number of years, and it shows that advertising of the right kind will certainly bring success. All druggists report an enormous demand for Cascarets that is steadily increasing. They are put up in convenient form and the prices are 10c., 25c., and 50c. a box. A 50c. box is enough for one month's treatment. Anyone who has the slightest liver or bowel trouble is urged to give them a trial.

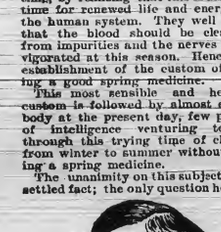
ANCIENTS HAD SENSE.

Dated Beginning of Year from Opening of Spring

When All Things in Nature Start Afresh.



Some Other Things in Which the Ancients Have Given Us Points.

The ancients began their year with the advent of spring. How much more appropriate thus to begin the New Year with the new life of nature in the awakening spring. At this season all processes throughout the natural world start afresh.

The ancients also showed their sagacity and appreciation of the great changes and active processes of spring-time, by realizing that this is also the time for renewed life and energy in the human system. They well knew that the blood should be cleansed from impurities and the nerves revitalized at this season. Hence the establishment of the custom of taking a good spring medicine.

This most sensible and healthy custom is followed by almost everybody at the present day, few people of intelligence venturing to go through this trying time of change from winter to summer without taking a spring medicine.

fore has been in regard to what is the best thing to take. The people have now become unanimous in their decision that as a spring tonic and restorative, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is pre-eminently the best.

Year after year Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has proved itself the surest, most positive and reliable remedy. Made from pure vegetable medicines, it invariably cleanses, purifies and enriches the blood, making the blood rich and red, and at the same time, by its invigorating effects, giving strength, power, vitality and energy to the nerves.

In fact, Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy has proved itself the most perfect of medicines and just what everybody needs for a spring remedy. Try it this spring.

Mr. Stoughton L. Farnham of Manchester, N. H., says:

"Some time ago I was troubled with lassitude and a feeling of fatigue. I did not have the ambition to do anything that demanded unusual physical exertion.

"I was recommended by a friend to try Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. I took two or three bottles and am prepared to say that it did me good. I can recommend it as a tonic, for I know it helped me."

Remember Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy is recommended by physicians, in fact, it is a physician's prescription, the discovery of the well-known specialist in nervous and chronic diseases, Dr. Greene, of 35 W. 14th St., New York City, who can be consulted free of charge, personally or by letter.

CUBAN TOBACCO DUTY

It Will Be Abolished on and After the First of April.

This Abolition of Duty Effects Cigars and Cigarettes, as Well as Tobacco in Leaf, Filler or Cut.

Washington, March 9.—The president Friday issued an order abolishing the Cuban export duty on tobacco from April 1 next. This action was taken on the earnest recommendation of the Cuban economic committee, which recently visited Washington, indorsed by Gen. Wood. A previous order had been issued fixing an export duty of 50 per cent. on Cuban tobacco from April 1. Friday's action removes the export duty entirely.

Gen. Wood's approval of the abolition of this export duty is practically an expression of his belief that the Cuban revenues from other sources are sufficient for the needs of the insular government. The original idea was that the tobacco was necessary to fully meet the financial requirements of the government.

The abolition of duty affects cigars and cigarettes as well as tobacco in leaf, filler or cut, all of the various classes of tobacco, raw and manufactured, having heretofore been subject to various rates of duty. That on cigars has been $1.35 per thousand; on cigarettes in boxes, 90 cents per thousand; cut tobacco, $3.75 per hundred kilos; leaf or filler tobaccos, $6.35 per hundred kilos, except that harvested in the province of Santiago de Cuba and exported through the customs houses at Santiago, Cibara or Manzanillo, which paid $2.20 per hundred kilos. All of these duties are abolished under the order.

It is estimated by the war department officials that the abrogation of the tobacco duties will cause a loss of revenue of about $800,000 or $1,000,000 per year. But it is said that this loss will be more than offset by the encouragement given to the planters in Cuba to increase their production.

The extent of the trade affected by the order is very large, the tobacco exports amounting to about $20,000,000 a year. Of this, by far the largest part came to the United States. The total value of manufactured tobacco exported within the seven months ended July 21 last was $3,020,000, and of this the export to the United States amounted to $1,875,000. In the same period the export of Cuban cigars was largest to Great Britain, the United States coming second. The total value of the cigar exports for the seven months was $6,030,000.

PRESENT FOR KING EDWARD.

The Finest and Largest Opal in the World—Estimated to Be Worth Upwards of £50,000.

London, March 9.—Mr. Maurice Lyons, a lawyer of Queensland, intends to give King Edward what is believed to be the largest and finest opal in the world. In the opinion of London lapidaries its only rival in size and beauty is one possessed by Emperor Francis Joseph.

The Lyons gem was shown privately Friday in the office of Sir Horace Tozer, agent general of Queensland, to the other Australian agents general. It is an oval in shape, two inches long and an inch and a half deep and weighs 250 carats. When found in Queensland it was an inch longer, but it was broken in the process of removal. It is estimated to be worth upwards of £50,000 and Mr. Lyons desires that it should be set in the king's regalia of the Australia federation.

One morning last week about 3 o'clock some persons who were attending a dance here in town discovered a fire which they thought to be destroying the residence of Frank Smith, about a mile below town, for many years the residence of the late L. F. Jackson. Several persons hastened to the scene arousing the neighbors along the road. When they reached Mr. Smith's it was found that the building on fire was a large log meat house, and stood so close to the residence that it took the hardest kind of work to save the dwelling. The wind carried the flames and sparks over the residence and ignited a lot of dead, dry limbs in the top of a large oak tree near the barn, and to save that building it was necessary to fell the tree. All of Mr. Smith's meat and lard and numerous other articles were burned. It was with difficulty that Mr. and Mrs. Smith were aroused from their sleep by the first arrivals, in fact they had to break into the house and pound on the door to their bed room before they were awakened. It is very likely that their lives were saved by the timely discovery of the fire by persons here in town. The origin of the fire not known.

Mrs Mary Carpenter has sold her farm near Union, to Richard Head. Price $8,800. Mrs. C. will move to Covington.

David Utz, formerly of this county but for several years a resident of Kansas, is visiting his relatives in this neighborhood.

Uncle E. D. Crigler came out of his winter quarters a little while Saturday. We hope that there is no indication of six weeks more winter weather.

J. H. and Perry Aylor, who are great lovers of fine stock, have ordered from the northern part of Canada, four Shorthorn cattle, which will be delivered in a few days.

The candidates for the various offices certainly deserve to be commended for the manner in which they are conducting the campaign, and while it is impossible for them all to be elected, they are all deserving gentlemen of high principles, and those who are fortunate in getting the nominations ought to be supported by every true Democrat in the county.

Dr. A. A. Murat takes this method of thauking the Democratic voters of Boone county, for their support of him in the past, and words are inadequate to express his gratitude to them. It was not his intention to become a candidate for Coroner, but his friends have compelled him to do so, uet that he does not appreciate the honor to represent the banner Democratic county in any capacity. Hoping the Democratic voters will remember me in this electiou as they have in the past by voting for me. I remain yours,

"I was troubled several years with chronic indigestion and nervous debility," writes F. J. Green, of Lancaster, N. H., "No remedy helped me until I began using Electric Bitters, which did me more good than all medicines I ever used. They have also kept my wife in excellent health for years. She says Electric Bitters are just splendid for female troubles; that they are a grand tonic and invigorator for weak, run down women. No other medicine can take its place in our family." Try them. Only 50c. Satisfaction guaranteed by Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. Grant, Grant.

The route of the proposed new road for which Chas. E. Stephens and others have been working, has been changed considerably and it is the general opinion that the road will be established by the county court. The new route begins at a point in the Big Bone and Garnett's mill road, thence in a northerly direction to Chas. E. Stephen's; thence following the old Huey passway and intersecting the county road immediately in front of Albert Conner's residence. This will make a good road from Burlington to Rabbit Hash.

Evans for Assessor and by thus doing secure a good, needy and worthy man to serve the people. [ad]

At Hickman a church was blown down and a drug store partly demolished. In the vicinity of Maxin's Mills, McCracken county three churches and many houses, barns and stables were destroyed. At London, Ky., a residence was demolished and the Blue Bennett College damaged by a storm.

It's absolutely guaranteed to cure Coughs, Colds, La Grippe, Bronchitis and all Throat and Lung Troubles. Price 50c and $1.00. Trial bottles free at Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. We certify that on the 9th day of March, 1901, we were called upon by A. B. Rouse, chairman of the Boone county democratic executive committee to fix, by lot, the position on the ballot of the several Democratic candidates for county and district nominations for this county, to be voted for at the primary election on the 6th of April, 1901, and we did proceed to do so as follows: The name of each of the candidates written on a small piece of paper and folded, was placed in a jury wheel tin so it could not be seen. These tins were then placed in a pile and were well stirred and mixed. One of these tins was then drawn out, the paper taken from it and the name read off, and entered as No. 1 on the list of candidates for the nomination for which he is running. We then stirred the tins and drew another tin, and read and recorded the name as before, and so proceed until all the names were drawn. We agreed, before drawing any names, that the candidates for the several nominations should be placed on the ballots in the order drawn. The drawing resulted as follows:

1,000,000 RELIEVED WOMEN

has brought permanent relief to a million suffering women who were on their way to premature graves. Mrs. Mitchell was fast declining in health, when Wine of Cardui performed a "wonderful cure" in her case. She suffered with the agonies of falling of the womb, leucorrhoea and profuse menstruation. The weekly appearance of the menses for two months sapped her vitality until she was a physical wreck. Her nervous system gave way. Then came the trial of Wine of Cardui and the cure. Mrs. Mitchell's experience ought to commend Wine of Cardui to suffering women in words of burning eloquence.

is within the reach of all. Women who try it are relieved. Ask your druggist for a $1 bottle of Wine of Cardui, and do not take a substitute if tendered you.

Mrs. Willie Mitchell, South Gaston, N.C.: "Wine of Cardui and Thedford's Black-Draught have performed a miraculous cure in my case. I had been a great sufferer with falling of the womb and leucorrhoea, and my menses came every week for two months and were very painful. My husband induced me to try Wine of Cardui and Black-Draught, and now the leucorrhoea has disappeared, and I am restored to perfect health."

Edward VII., though, in accordance with the precedent set by George IV., has relinquished his position as most worshipful grand master of English Free Masons, will retain a position more or less active by becoming the protector of English Free Masons. The duke of Connaught, now a past grand warden, will succeed to the grand mastership.

Everybody is talking of the harness worn by the eight cream-colored horses that conveyed the king and queen at the opening of parliament. It is really very beautiful, and was made for one of the jubilee celebrations of the late queen. Few know how valuable it is, all the metal on it which looks brass being of gold, the whole set of harness having cost no less than £15,000.

Ex-Gov. Lee, of South Dakota, has notified the state authorities that he has returned the office chair recently given him by the legislature in accordance with the custom. He says that he is opposed to giving away state property, and it is an easy step from taking presents of small value, at the state's expense to a gift of large value, involving grave abuses and gross corruption.

Senator R. R. Butler, of Washington county, Tenn., is the oldest member of the Tennessee legislature in point of service. He is now serving his eleventh session in the senate, and before that he had served six years in the house. Besides this experience in state legislation, Senator Butler served ten years in the national house of representatives. He served in the union army, and was lieutenant-colonel of the Thirteenth cavalry.

Should King Edward VII. visit Ireland this year, as may happen, he will be the first king, with his consort, who ever visited the country since it became part of the British kingdom. During that time six kings of England have visited Ireland, but unaccompanied by their queens. Henry II. paid the first visit in 1172, and held a court outside Dublin. The other kingly visitors were Richard II., Henry V., James II., William III. and George IV.

Miss Olive Monalsen, daughter of a European resident of Bombay, has just been married to the young rajah of Jhind, lord of a native state in India. The wedding took place according to the Sikh rites, the bride being fully aware that the groom already had at least two wives. The marriage contract provides the lady with a definite and handsome income and makes stipulations as to how many other wives the potentate may have.

Three million geese are brought regularly to the October market in Warsaw, Poland. Often coming from remote provinces, many of these geese have to travel over long distances upon roads which would wear out their feet if they were not "shod." For this purpose they are driven through tar poured upon the ground, and then through sand. After the operation has been repeated several times the feet of the geese become covered with a hard crust.

Systematic protection of the forests against fire is an issue before the New Jersey legislature. The total forest area of New Jersey is more than two million acres, which is believed to be larger in proportion to its size than that of any other middle state. The proposed preventive measure will follow the general lines of a suggestion made by Gifford Pinchot, an authority on forestry, which involves a system of fire lines, to be patrolled daily by wardens.

Dr. John B. Murphy, the Chicago surgeon, who was in consultation with Dr. A. J. Stone during the last illness of the late Senator Cushman K. Davis, has filed in the probate court his bill for medical services against the estate. The Chicago surgeon made two trips to St. Paul. He charged $1,000 for each trip. On each occasion he arrived in St. Paul in the morning and left for Chicago in the evening, and was with Senator Davis not more than half an hour each trip.

An effort is to be made to do away with the military feature of the state university of Alabama, as it is believed that it has been the cause of all the recent trouble at that institution. The president and the commandant had to resign, and the boys rebelled against the military discipline, which they said was irksome and tyrannical. It is now thought that an effort will be made to make the institution strictly an educational and classic one, and that all the military and objectionable features will be abolished.

A WAR CLOUD APPEARS

Opposition to the Seizure of Manchuria by the Russians.

Such Action Will Be Taken That Russia Will Have No Alternative But to Recede From Her Position.

London, March 9.—A crisis has arisen in far eastern affairs which in the opinion of the British government is graver almost than the troubles which originally turned the eyes of the world toward the orient. In this crisis secret negotiations are going on between the United States and Great Britain with a view to thwarting what both governments appear to consider a determined attempt on the part of Russia to plant herself permanently in one of the richest provinces of the Chinese empire.

The conference held Wednesday between United States Ambassador Choate and Lord Lansdowne, the foreign secretary, had nothing to do with the Nicaraguan canal affair. To quote from a British official, "the Nicaragua controversy is a minor matter compared with the present situation." What Mr. Choate did was to receive from Lord Lansdowne an important message declaring that Great Britain was not satisfied with Russia's declaration regarding Manchuria, as delivered to Sir Charles Stewart Scott, British ambassador at St. Petersburg, by Count Lansdorf, and asking the United States if they were prepared to take joint action of such a decisive nature that Russia would have no alternative but to recede from her position.

Almost simultaneously the United States government instructed the various ambassadors to take similar steps.

The answer of Secretary Hay has apparently not yet been received in London, although the fact that almost concurrent instructions were issued from Washington is taken here to be a sufficient guarantee that Russia's action in Manchuria will not be tolerated by the United States.

Japan is relied upon to take a line in harmony with the United States and Great Britain. Germany, in spite of the Anglo-American compact, is regarded as rather doubtful, owing to Emperor William's friendship for the czar. France, of course, will side with her ally.

Lord Lansdowne is using every effort to bring the powers into line, in order to present to Russia such a menacing front that, without any ambiguity in regarding temporary or other occupation, she may give up all designs upon Manchuria.

Berlin, March 11.—The war office has received the following, dispatch from Count Von Waldersee:

"Peking, March 10.—Col. Ledebur's column stormed a gate of the Grand Wall, 80 miles west of Pao-Ting-Fu, Friday, March 8, capturing four guns."

Shanghai, March 11.—Dispatches from Lan-Chau assert that Gen. Tung Fu-Hsiang, with 20,000 men and Prince Tuan with 10,000 men are at Ning-Hsu prepared to resist arrest.

The China Gazette announces that Sheng, the teotai, has memorialized the throne in favor of the abolition of the Likin duties and that all the viceroys and governors support him.

Peking, March 11.—Li Hung Chang is again seriously ill and his physician says his life hangs by a thread.

Prince Ching and Earl Li seem to think that by spreading rumors of the court's unwillingness to return to Peking unless this or that is done before they can influence the deliberations of the ministers of the powers. As a matter of fact, according to reliable reports from Sian Fu, the imperial personages are extremely uncomfortable at Sian Fu, where they live in the house of the governor, which is only a small structure. French missionaries, who have just returned here from Sian Fu believe the empress dowager would bring the court back to Peking on the first offer of the allies having as a basis the removal of the troops, except the legation guards.

The foreign envoys will not hold a general meeting until Tuesday owing to the absence of M. Pinchon, French minister, at Pao Ting Fu.

London, March 11.—"It is likely that the powers will oppose the schemes of Russia," says the Peking correspondent of the Morning Post, wiring Saturday. "The situation is regarded as very gloomy. Even the Chinese plenipotentiaries declare openly that intervention by the powers is not desirable unless they are prepared to back up the protests.

"There are reports from the province of Shan Si that the Chinese are constructing extensive fortifications and mobilizing large bodies of troops to resist an advance of the allies.

"Gen. Chaffee refuses to allow the decapitation of several notorious Boxer chiefs, guilty of murder, whom a Chinese judge has condemned. The Americans are the only foreigners who have carried out no executions in Peking."

Railway Offices Damaged.

New York, March 11.—The building owned and occupied by the New York & Hartford Railroad Co. for the general offices of the several departments on Willis avenue was damaged by fire early Sunday evening to the estimated extent of $250,000. Thirty clerks escaped with difficulty.

The Alabama Did Not Sail.

Pensacola, Fla., March 11.—There was a severe storm on the gulf Saturday night and on account of the high seas Sunday the battleship Alabama did not sail on her final trial trip.

GEN. HARRISON'S CONDITION.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 11.—The condition of ex-President Benjamin Harrison may be stated in one word—serious. His family for a number of days have thought it advisable to say little to the newspapers regarding the seriousness of his condition, but Sunday Dr. Jameson stated that the upper part of Gen. Harrison's left lung was inflamed. There is some danger of the congestion extending to the rest of the lung and to the right lung.

Until 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon Gen. Harrison was resting easily but at that time he became slightly worse and Dr. Jameson was called. He said he was certain nothing was to be apprehended for the next 48 hours but the age of the patient renders all calculations uncertain. At 8 o'clock Sunday evening Gen. Harrison was suffering some pain but resting comparatively easy.

Monday morning there was no change in the condition of Gen. Harrison either for the worse or the better. He was still resting easy with little pain, but rather a high fever. His temperature at midnight was 103¾. Dr. Francis O. Dorsey remained at the residence all night to be in readiness should any unfavorable symptom be noticed in the condition of the patient.

TOWN TERRORIZED.

Two Hundred Soldiers Started a Rough House at Highwood, Ill.—One Man Seriously Beaten.

Chicago, March 9.—Two hundred soldiers of the 5th infantry, stationed at Fort Sheridan, created a veritable panic in the little town of Highwood, which adjoints Fort Sheridan on the south. The soldiers were on leave, and after visiting the saloons of Highwood many of them became drunk and fights among them were numerous. Frank Hughey, a private of Company F, was terribly beaten in one of the fights, and is said to be in a serious condition. Two saloons were wrecked and the residents of the village were compelled to keep off the streets. The Highwood authorities were utterly unable to cope with the soldiers and ten extra officers were sworn in.

GEN. LOGAN STATUE.

It Will Be Unveiled With Appropriate Military Ceremonies in Washington April 9.

Washington, March 9.—It has been arranged that the equestrian statue of Gen. Logan in this city shall be unveiled with appropriate military ceremonies Tuesday, April 9, next. All the regular troops in Washington and probably the District national guard will participate. The president will attend with his cabinet and probably make a short address.

PRIZE FIGHTS.

A Bill Introduced in the Upper House of the Minnesota Legislature Legalizing Them.

St. Paul, Minn., March 9.—Prize fighting in Minnesota is legalized by a bill introduced in the upper house by Senator Ryder, of Polk county. No limitation is placed on the number of rounds but the minimum weight of the gloves allowed is five ounces. The effect of the bill is to allow fights under the auspices of any "association" that may incorporate for the purpose in Minnesota.

Insurgents Captured.

Manila, March 9.—Capt. Duncan, of the 4th infantry has captured a squad of insurgents and 12 rifles near the town of Imus, in Cavite province, 12 miles south of Manila. Gen. Lloyd Wheaton, commander of the department of Northern Luzon, reports the troops of his department to be in excellent health. Less than 8 per cent. of them are sick.

Death of Capt. Paddock.

Washington, March 11.—The war department Sunday received word of the death of Capt. Richard B. Paddock, of the 6th cavalry, at Tien-Tsin, China, Saturday from pneumonia. Capt. Paddock was appointed to the army from Illinois October 10, 1883. He graduated from the infantry and cavalry school in 1887.

Exposition Commissioners.

Washington, March 9.—In addition to Former United States Senator Carter, whose appointment on the St. Louis exposition commission was announced, the president has selected for members of the commission Former Senators John M. Thurston, of Nebraska, Wm. Lindsay, of Kentucky, and George W. McBride, of Oregon.

Five Injured.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 11.—The following men were scalded by the blowing out of two testing tubes connected with a battery of boilers at the American iron works: Geo. Kosalich, will die; Even Bochovich, Owen Cauley, Casper Krozovitch, Michael Kiliach.

The Time Extended.

Washington, March 9.—Secretary Hay and Ambassador Cambon, acting for their respective governments, have signed an arrangement extending until September 24, 1902, the period allowed for the ratification of the French reciprocity treaty.

Mrs. Allen Released.

Knobnoster, Mo., March 9.—Mrs. Ellen Allen, held as an accessory in the murder of her daughter, was released. Henry Wisely, the Negro charged with the murder, was granted a change of venue to Warrensburg.

EIGHT PEOPLE KILLED.

A Destructive Cyclone Visits the State of Texas.

The Wind Was Accompanied by Heavy Rain, Which, With Hail, Did Damage in Northwestern Part of the State.

Houston, Tex., March 11.—News from Saturday's storm is now coming from northeast Texas. The casualties were small considering the amount of territory visited, but there are eight dead and five believed to be dying at Wills Point where the property loss will reach $100,000. Five persons were badly hurt at New Boston, none fatally. A number of small houses were wrecked. The property loss will reach $75,000. At Blossom no one was seriously injured, but the damage to residences was great. At and near Emery, Raines county, one man was killed and several persons were hurt, two seriously. The damage to property was heavy. The wind was accompanied by heavy rain, which, with hail, did considerable damage in the rural districts. The storm was first reported from Uvalde, on the Mexican border; there a church was wrecked. Several towns between Uvalde and Wills Point report small damage, but it was not until the last named place was reached that the tornado's effect was felt.

East of Wills Point the country is dotted with evidences of the storm's fury, and by the little mounds of wreckage its course can be followed to the Arkansas line.

At Texarkana some damage was done on College Hill, a suburb. The westernmost trace of the storm is in Collin county, about 30 miles north of Dallas. Here the wind was very strong, but it did not attain the strength of a tornado. Hail fell and it was followed a torrential rain.

At one place where a measurement was made, 1.35 inches fell in 40 minutes.

At Terrell, the rainfall was extremely heavy and some property damage was sustained, but no one was injured there. Telegraphic communication has been restored throughout the state.

Little Rock, March 11.—A heavy rain, wind and thunderstorm, accompanied by lightning, visited Arkansas. At Van Buren lightning struck the residence of James Morrell, rendering his wife unconscious. A boy was knocked down on the street.

At Conway 15 business houses were unroofed, three others were blown down, and many stores flooded.

Reports from Pine Prairie say that a cyclone struck there, wrecking everything in its path. A boy named Turner was killed.

Paragould, Ark., March 11.—Saturday night's storm killed three persons in this (Greene) county and wrought much property damage.

At Rock Hill Mrs. Millie Davis and a 12-year-old boy named Osmer Roberts were killed by falling timbers. At Jackson Commissary, 12 miles west of Paragould, Charles Bowling, a well-known young business man, was killed outright by the roof of his house falling in. Several persons are reported injured. The damage to small buildings and fruit trees is large.

Forrest City, Ark., March 11.—Three persons were killed and many injured in this vicinity by a tornado. Four miles west of this city Pinkey Watson, colored, and her infant child were the first victims. In the same neighborhood 16 houses and miles of fences and many trees were leveled to the ground. In Johnson township, ten miles northwest, the cyclone literally lifted the house of J. A. Wooly from its foundation and shattered it to fragments, killing Wooly and seriously injuring his wife and his stepson, Bob Allen. Outbuildings and miles of fences were mashed to pieces.

THE BUBONIC PLAGUE.

Cape Town, March 11.—The official report regarding the bubonic plague in Cape Town since the outbreak shows a total of 22 deaths and 102 cases.

The Malays gathered Sunday to oppose the removal of a Malay who had been attacked by the disease and of several persons who had come in contact with the victim. The police were overpowered and the persons who had come into contact with the Malay made their escape. In the event of a repetition of this experience it will be necessary to employ an armed force, so that trouble is anticipated.

Canada Will Act.

Montreal, Que., March 11.—The Dominion government will act in the case of the lynching of John Knox in Mississippi. Letters just received indicate that it was without warrant. Eleven alleged lynchers have been arrested.

Riots in Madrid.

Madrid, March 11.—During a riot against the Octroi tax Sunday evening the mob stoned the municipal employes engaged in collecting the tax and set fire to ten sentry boxes. Four persons were injured, one of them seriously.

Private Bank Robbed.

Argonia, Kan., March 11.—The private bank of J. H. Springer was robbed here Saturday night of $2,600 in cash and $4,000 in registered government 3 per cent. bonds. The safe was blown open with nitro-glycerine.

"Mrs. Pinkham Saved me from an Operation."

Hospitals in our great cities are sad places to visit.

Three-fourths of the patients lying on those snow-white beds are women and girls.

Why should this be the case?

Because they have neglected themselves.

Every one of these patients in the hospital beds had plenty of warning in that bearing-down feeling, pain at the left or right of the womb, nervous exhaustion, pain in the small of the back. All of these things are indications of an unhealthy condition of the ovaries or womb.

Do not drag along at home or in your place of employment until you are obliged to go to the hospital and submit to an examination and possible operation. Build up the female system, cure the derangements which have signified themselves by danger signals, and remember that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has saved thousands of women from the hospital. Read the letter here published with the full consent of the writer, and see how she escaped the knife by a faithful reliance on Mrs. Pinkham's advice and the consistent treatment of her medicines.

Mrs. Knapp tells of her Great Gratitude.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have received much benefit from using your Vegetable Compound and Sanative Wash. After my child was born, blood poison set in, which left me with granulated inflammation of the womb and congested ovaries. I had suffered from suppressed and painful menstruation from a girl. The doctors told me the ovaries would have to be removed. I took treatment two years to escape an operation, but still remained in miserable health in both body and mind, expecting to part with my reason with each coming month. After using one bottle of the Compound, I became entirely rid of the trouble in my head. I continued to use your remedies until cured.

MRS. F.M.KNAPP

"The last nine months have been passed in perfect good health. This, I know, I owe entirely to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"My gratitude is great indeed to the one to whom so many women owe their health and happiness."—MRS. F. M. KNAPP, 1528 Kinnickinnic Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

GEN. DEWET ESCAPES.

He Eluded His Pursuers by a Forced March Northward.

Kitchener Demands That Botha's Surrender Must Be Unconditional—Future Treatment of Boers Referred to London.

"Gen. DeWet has escaped northward by a forced march with 400 men. His objective is believed to be the vicinity of Kroomstadt.

"Four other Boer leaders are still in the southwestern part of Orange river colony.

"Now that Gen. DeWet is back in his country it will be almost impossible to operate against him. Just as soon as he is pressed, his commando dissolves, to meet again a few days later.

"Only a few bands of Boers are now left in Cape Colony."

No further news has been received concerning the negotiations between Lord Kitchener and Gen. Botha. The Daily Express says it hears that Lord Kitchener declared the surrender must be unconditional, while the question of the future treatment of the Boers was referred to London.

It is asserted that Mr. Kruger, through Dr. Leyds, has sent a telegram to Mr. Schalkburger, acting president of the South African republic, asking for details regarding the negotiations.

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Lourenzo Marques says that a Mr. Martinezen, who resigned a post in the United States army to join the Boer forces, was shipped for Lisbon Saturday on the Portuguese transport Zaire, which carried 103 Boer families, after he had made an ineffectual attempt to obtain consular protection.

LYNCHERS ARRESTED.

Four Men at Carthage, N. C., Charged With Causing the Death of Silas Martindale.

Carthage, N. C., March 11.—J. J. Jones, Dr. M. E. Street, David Andrews and William Harding, among the most prominent citizens of Eastern North Carolina, were arrested Saturday night and lodged in jail charged with being responsible for the horrible death of Silas Martindale. The jail of Moore county at Carthage was broken into Saturday by a mob of 50 men, who secured Martindale—confined on a charge of assault—and hanged him to a tree. The jailer was forced to give up the keys of the cell. Martindale was hanged just outside the corporate limits. He was choked to death and from indications about the scene it is supposed lynchers raised and lowered him many times in order to extort a confession from him. Martindale was said to have attacked Miss Brewer, a school teacher living near Carthage. Mrs. Brewer informed her husband of the attack and he soon formed the mob. This is the first time in 50 years that a white man has met death at the hands of a mob in North Carolina.

PHILIPPINE COMMISSION.

It Will Establish a Provincial Government at Lucena, Province of Tayabas, Luzon.

Manila, March 11.—Judge Taft and his associates of the United States Philippine commission, accompanied by their wives and a number of prominent Filipinos, embarked Sunday on the United States transport Sumner and sailed for Lucena, province of Tayabas, Luzon, where they will organize a provincial government. At the time of their departure the pier was thronged with the natives who cheered the commissioners and gave many other proofs of the popularity of the commission.

The insurgents have surrendered 500 rifles in the province of Pampanga, Bulacan and Bataan during the last four weeks.

The Methodists report 120 converts in Manila last week and the Philippine Evangelical church claims to have secured many new members.

PRINCE COMMITS SUICIDE.

He Was Suffering From an Incurable Disease—Queen Louise's Monument Decorated.

Berlin, March 11.—Prince Albrecht Zu Zolme-Braunfels has committed suicide at Wiesbaden, having learned that the disease from which he was suffering was incurable.

Sunday being the anniversary of the birth of Queen Louise of Prussia, wife of King Frederick-William III., who was born March 10, 1776, her monument, which stands in the Thiergarten, in Berlin, was lavishly decorated with flowers.

Eighty Thousand Tenements.

New York, March 11.—Wm. H. Baldwin, jr., chairman of the anti-vice committee of 15, says: "There are 80,000 tenement houses in the city. From ten to twenty families live in each, and there was in each an average of from 40 to 60 children. That is where vice breeds."

A Financier Dead.

New York, March 11.—F. O. Matthiessen, a director of the American Sugar Refining Co., the Standard Distilling and Distributing Co. and several other corporations, is dead.

FIFTY-SIXTH CONGRESS.

Second Session.

Washington, March 5.—Senate.—Senator Carter (Mon.) spoke for 13 consecutive hours on the river and harbor bill Sunday night and Monday, thus talking it to death. At the conclusion of the session of the fifty-sixth congress, Vice President Roosevelt was sworn in and immediately called the senate of the fifty-seventh congress to order. It was a simple, but beautiful and impressive, ceremony. The new senators were sworn in groups of four. At the conclusion of this proceeding the senate attended the inauguration of the president. At 1:45 the senate returned to its chambers and adjourned immediately until Tuesday.

House.—The house closed its session at 11:45 Monday amid a demonstration from its members following the delivery of an impressive valedictory of Speaker Henderson. Shortly before the closing hour Mr. Richardson (Tenn.), the minority leader, presented resolutions testifying to the high regard of the house for the able, impartial and dignified manner in which Speaker Henderson had administered the duties of presiding officer. Coming from the minority there was added significance in the tribute. The resolutions were unanimously adopted by a rising vote. Then the speaker, in slow and impressive tones, delivered his closing words to the house, thanking the members for their cooperation through a busy and eventful congress. He concluded at 11:45 and announced the sessions of the house for the fifty-sixth congress adjourned.

Washington, March 6.—President McKinley Tuesday sent to the senate the nominations for his cabinet. It remains unchanged. All were confirmed.

THE SENATE.

Extraordinary Session Adjourns Saturday—Senator Mitchell Sworn In.

Washington, March 9.—Final adjournment of the extraordinary session of the senate would have been taken Friday had the new senator from Oregon, Mr. Mitchell, been present to take the oath of office. He could not reach Washington until Saturday, however, and adjournment was postponed until that time.

Mr. Hoar (Mass.) offered a resolution providing for the appointment of a committee of senators to call upon the president and inform him that the senate was ready to adjourn without day. Mr. Morgan (Ala.) objected to consideration, saying that Senator Mitchell (Ore.) would be in Washington Saturday and it was due him that the senate remain in session until his arrival.

No business of importance was transacted in open session.

CHICAGO WIND SWEPT.

The Damage to Property Will Foot Up $175,000—Telegraph and Telephone Poles Down.

Chicago, March 11.—One of the worst wind storms of the season struck Chicago early Sunday and during the two hours that it was at its height damaged property throughout the city to the extent of $175,000. Many heavy plate glass windows were blown in. Telegraph and telephone companies were the worst sufferers and it will be some time before order can be restored. Thousands of poles were blown down and Chicago was practically isolated from the west and northwest by telephone and telegraph Sunday night and all day Sunday. The long distance telephone service was crippled so badly that it was of little value. Up to a late hour Sunday night neither Malwaukee nor Minneapolis could be reached by long distance 'phone. The storm is believed to have been most severe in Southern Wisconsin. Along a short stretch of the Milwaukee road in Southern Wisconsin 500 telegraph poles are down.

Reports from many points in Indiana and Kentucky also indicate heavy damage from the storm. The Western Union and Postal Telegraph Cos. suffered severely by fallen poles. It was estimated that there were no fewer than 5,000 poles in the city thrown down by the fury of the wind and storm. Service almost as far west as Omaha was stopped until late Sunday evening.

Trains entering Chicago were delayed from ten minutes to an hour. The Burlington, Milwaukee and St. Paul Cos. were the worst sufferers in this respect. All the roads suffered damage to their tracks and switch yards.

At the life saving station at the mouth of the Chicago river it was considered the worst gale which has struck Chicago harbor since 1894. The water, lashed into fury, came up to the life saving station and flooded the floor for the first time in 13 years. Most of the shipping was protected in winter quarters, so that the damage done to it was slight.

College Damaged by Fire.

Iowa City, Ia., March 11.—Fire Sunday morning destroyed the College of Medicine and Literary buildings at the University of Iowa. The loss is not less than $250,000.

Will Act as One of the Seconds.

Brussels, March 9.—La Reforma says it learns that the object of the forthcoming visit of the duke of Orleans to Brussels is to act as one of the seconds of M. Andre Buffet in the expected duel with M. Paul De Roulede.

Vetoed the Bill.

Helena, Mont., March 9.—The governor has vetoed the change of venue bill. This is considered a blow at the Amalgamated Copper Co., which was behind the bill in the legislature, it is said.

OUR POLICY LIKE SPAIN'S.

The Administration Is Playing Fast and Loose with Cuba, Porto Rico and the Philippines.

We used to have great fun, tempered with high moral indignation, over Spanish dilly-dally and delay. It was the everlasting manana of Spain that finally broke our patience. When was the Cuban rebellion to be put down? Why, to-morrow, or next day at latest. When were reforms to be inaugurated in the Philippines and Porto Rico and the Ever-Faithful Isle? To-morrow and to-morrow and to-morrow. This was too much for decided and business-like Anglo-Saxons, who, it is well known, never loiter, never hesitate, but go straight to the mark and "do things." So we loftily took over Spain's unsolved problems in 1898. We would show the world how to cut those Gordian knots at one stroke. But three years of confident to-morrows have since passed, and we ourselves have now settled down without a blush to the use of Spain's old word, half-promise and half-excuse, manana.

When are you going to keep your pledge to Cuba? To-morrow. When will you give up trying to make an Ireland of Porto Rico? Presently; when we get around to it; next month, next year, some day. When will the Philippines be pacified, the army reduced or recalled, the friars bought out or thrown out, civil government set up in reality, trade restored? Manana. The laziest and most shiftless Don that ever lived could not use the word more readily, or with less shame, than we do now. Along with the Spanish problems, we have taken over their Spanish solutions, paying Spain's colonial policy the sincere flattery of imitating it in one particular after another, and finally in this matter of perpetually adjourned prophecy of the fulfillment of our good intention. Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines, like the poet's man, never are but always to be blessed.

If we were right in condemning the procrastination and shuffling of Spain, we cannot be right in excusing the same things in ourselves. Our catching up of the manana refrain is proof conclusive that we have drifted into we know not what, and shall drift out of it we know not how. "I never dreamed," says good Mr. McKinley, "that things would turn out in the Philippines as they have." But a statesman ought to have something besides dreams to go upon. If rocks and breakers are ahead, it is his business to know it, and avoid them. That the president did neither is the reason our ship of state is now in peril, and that we are promised deep water again only on some indefinite and long-distant "to-morrow."—N. Y. Post.

NOT A SINGLE REGRET.

Defeat of Hanna's Shipping Bill Will Prove Gratifying to the People.

Now that the Hanna ship subsidy bill has again been laid aside by a decisive senate vote of 45 to 2, with a prospect of increased opposition to its passage during the life of the present congress, it may safely be asserted that no popular regret will arise.

There is, as a matter of course, a deep chagrin on the part of Mark Hanna and the monopoly syndicate behind this subsidy grab. This is as natural as has been Hanna's repeated loss of temper during the debate on the measure. The administration is pledged to the passage of the ship subsidy bill, and it enrages Hanna that he is prevented from paying the administration's campaign debts.

The American people, however, are not in favor of this payment. The money would necessarily come out of their pockets—some $180,000,000 in all—it would vastly enrich the subsidy syndicate, but it would do the people no good whatever. They cannot see why they should be thus colossally taxed because certain multimillionaires put up the money which reelected Mr. McKinley to the presidency.

Viewed from the standpoint of the taxpayers of the United States, the present situation of the ship subsidy bill is gratifying. It will be materially improved if the present congress, now in session shall adjourn sine die with the bill still awaiting action. It will be improved even more if the succeeding congress shall defeat the bill. For the thing is a subsidy steal, out and out, and would have been defeated long ago if the American government were not now under the domination of syndicate influences.—St. Louis Republic.

——When Mr. Hanna is through with his crutches he should loan them to his crippled and ailing shipping subsidy job.—The Commoner.

TRUST PROSPERITY.

Profits of the Standard Oil Company Since the Republican Victory of 1896.

The par value of a share of stock in the Standard Oil company is $100. Since the republican victory of 1896, the market value of Standard Oil stock has been steadily increasing. Soon after the election of 1896 this stock was quoted at $200 per share. In February, 1899, it sold for $439 per share; in February, 1900, it sold for $5.12 per share; in September, 1900, it dropped back to $500 per share. But after "confidence" was once more restored by a republican victory, this stock went up to $600 per share. In January, 1901, it sold for $794. On February 4 it sold at $805, and the latest quotation at hand is $815.

When one reads the record of recent dividends declared by this great concern it is not difficult to understand why the market value of the stock has increased so rapidly.

The capital stock of the Standard Oil company is $100,000,000. In 1891, 1892, 1893, 1894 and 1895, the Standard Oil company paid dividends amounting for each year to $12 on each share of stock. In 1896 the dividends amounted to $31 per share; in 1897 they were $33 per share; in the month of January, 1900, they were $20 per share; in April, 1900, the dividends amounted to $10 per share; in July, $5 per share; in November, $10 per share; and the company has now declared a dividend payable March 15 of $20 per share.

This latest dividend means the payment of $20,000,000 upon the $100,000,000 of capital stock.

The total dividends paid by this company for the entire year of 1900 amounted to $48,000,000.

The dividends to be paid on March 15 brings the aggregate up to $68,000,000 of dividends paid upon a capital stock of $100,000,000 during a period of 14 months and 15 days.

It will be readily understood from the figures why Standard Oil stock is quoted so high in the markets.

But where will we find an explanation of a condition that within a period of 15 months a concern whose working capital is $100,000,000 is enabled to roll up profits to the extent of $68,000,000?

This certainly indicates that the stockholders of the Standard Oil company are prosperous. But some one must have paid this $68,000,000. Who paid it?—The Commoner.

EXTRA SESSION OPPOSED.

Scheme to Accommodate the Trusts at the Expense of American Trade and Industry.

Word comes from Washington City: "An extra session of congress is inevitable." Why? Really because the sugar refiners' trust and the cigar trust want things so fixed that Cuba shall be held in such subjection to the United States as to admit Cuban raw sugar and leaf tobacco into this country free of duty or at very much reduced rates.

No matter if the solemn pledge of independence to Cuba is ruthlessly violated. No matter if destruction comes upon the promising beet sugar industry of our northern and western states or the cane crop of the south. No matter if our vast domestic fruit and vegetable interests are blighted. No matter if domestic tobacco culture becomes unprofitable. No matter if the enormous business of cigar making is transferred to Havana and Manila. No matter if the promising development of the rice industry is throttled. No matter if cotton drops back from ten cents to five cents per pound.

Oh, no, why should these great domestic interests be considered at all? Of course the proper thing for congress to do is to provide an unlimited market for the tropical syndicates and for their products grown by coolie labor. The scheme has worked beautifully in Hawaii. Let us repeat it in Cuba and the Philippines!

So for an extra session to hold Cuba in apron strings to enact "reciprocity" with Cuba and "the countries at the south of us." Never mind if thereby the farmers, laborers and manufacturers of the United States, who furnished the blood and treasure to set Cuba free, are financially prostrated. What was the war for, except to give the trusts a chance to exploit the tropics—and "the public be damned!" What are the farmers for, or the public, except to pay taxes, support the army and navy, and enable the trusts to not only wax fat in the tropics, but to absolutely control things at home?

Such is, apparently, the reasoning of the powers that seek to force an extra session upon congress. Will the nefarious scheme succeed? Will congress be deceived?—American Agriculturist.

Tesla Outdone.

Mr. Nikola Tesla says that to accomplish his new project of wireless ocean telegraphy he will merely build a powerful oscillator, which will take up little room and which, when enormous voltage is turned on, will make the shortest track through the earth to a receiving station. From physics man has derived apt phrases for use in other portions of human activity. We have at the national capital a powerful political oscillator taking up comparatively little room. Sensitive as Tesla to "waves," as each new "wave" affects Mr. McKinley Cuba, China and the Philippines are affected more or less and wonder what the voltage may do when it is turned on. The question can be answered only by Mr. McKinley's Nikola Tesla, Mark Hanna. William McKinley among American presidents will go into history as the oscillator.—Chicago Chronicle.

STATE NEWS HAPPENINGS.

KENTUCKY FEUDISTS.

Desperate Fight Between the Whites and Garrards—Over 100 Shots Fired.

London, Ky., March 9.—A desperate fight occurred at Manchester Thursday about noon between the Whites and Garrards, in which over 100 shots were fired. The Garrards were in town and in the office of Sam Cash, filing bail bonds for Jule Webb, Taylor Spurlock, Wm. and Dennis McCallum, charged with murder, when the contents of a shotgun fired from the court house entered the window of Cash's office, after which the fight opened up. When quiet was restored it was found that Steve Spurlock was shot through the arm and Ed Garrard shot through the ear. After dark Thursday night a deputy sheriff and posse of 14 men left Manchester for London with the above prisoners, arriving about daylight. When it was safe for Judge Tinsley to enter the court house he adjourned court till next morning. Everything is now quiet, but trouble may break out at any moment.

London, Ky., March 9.—The following men came to London Friday evening from Clay county to go on bail bonds of the prisoners who arrived here Friday morning from Manchester: Tobe Garrard, Millard Philpot, Steve Spurlock, Dick McCullim, Dave Gregory, Jim Herd, and several others. The prisoners are Joel Webb, William and Dennis McCullim and Taylor Spurlock. Bonds were filed Saturday morning and the prisoners were released.

PISTOL USER ARRESTED.

Jack Saunders Colored, Attempted to Kill Wesley Higgins, a Q. & C. Conductor.

Williamsburg, Ky., March 7.—Jack Saunders, colored, was arrested at Jellico Wednesday by County Jailer Bennett and Marshal Perkins, of this place, on a warrant charging him with shooting to kill. The warrant charges that Saunders shot Wesley Higgins, of Cincinnati, a conductor on the Queen & Crescent, the offense being committed in Pulaski county some time ago. The prisoner was confined in the county jail here pending the arrival of the sheriff from Somerset. After being disarmed he asked to know upon what charge he was arrested, and when told it was for shooting Higgins he remarked that if he had known it sooner the officers would not have had such an easy time of it.

A COURT RULING.

Salary of Officials Can Not Be Attached—It is Against Public Policy.

Frankfort, Ky., March 7.—The court of appeals Wednesday held that it is against public policy to set apart any part of the salary of a state or county official to satisfy judgments against him, and that the courts should not do it. The decision was rendered in the case of Dickerson vs. Johnson, county court clerk of Jefferson county.

Dickerson secured judgment against Johnson for $3,300, and sought to have that amount taken out of his salary of $5,000 for 1900.

A STRIKE PROBABLE.

Coal Operators and Miners of Western Kentucky Fail to Come to Terms.

Louisville, Ky., March 9.—Coal operators and United Mine Workers of Western Kentucky adjourned their conference Friday after spending nearly a week in an unsuccessful effort to come to terms. The miners ask a 15 per cent. advance in wages and an eight hour day, and the operators offer a ten per cent. reduction and a ten hour day. A strike on April 1 involving 2,500 miners and 40 mines is regarded as not improbable.

Injured in a Runaway.

Sadieville, Ky., March 8.—Frank Stayton and J. A. Vine, two Cincinnati traveling men, hired a rig at Corinth Wednesday, and, while coming down a steep grade, into this place, the front wheel of the vehicle broke, throwing them under the horses. The frightened animals ran away, pulling the wagon over the men. Both were badly bruised.

Division Passenger Agent Resigns.

Louisville, Ky., March 7.—Jackson Smith, division passenger agent of the Louisville & Nashville railroad at Cincinnati, Wednesday resigned. Mr. Smith has formed a connection with J. D. McDonald & Co., of New York, and will go to Ecuador to superintend the construction of a railroad in that country.

Assistant Treasurer Resigns.

Frankfort, Ky., March 8.—Warren Hager, assistant state treasurer, resigned, and State Treasurer S. W. Hager appointed Jule Day of Louisville to the place. Mr. Day qualified and entered upon the duties of the office at once.

Business Portion Burned.

Hopkinsville, Ky., March 8.—The business portion of Linton, Trigg county, including four stores, hotel, post office and tobacco factories, were destroyed by fire Wednesday night. Loss $50,000; $10,000 insurance.

THE SALOONKEEPERS NEXT.

Four Firms at Louisville Are Indicted for Keeping Open on Sundays.

Louisville, Ky., March 9.—The indications are that the crusade against saloons keeping open on Sunday in this city has been fairly launched. The matter has been agitated for some time by the prominent church people, and, as for that matter, the attention of the several grand juries for the past four months has been called to the open violation of the Sunday closing law, still the sporting and saloon elements have contended that the grand jury would return no indictments.

Friday's proceedings have shown differently. The grand jury returned indictments against Carraro Bros., Charles L. Jeune, M. J. Hickey and Doc Faust, all saloon keepers. Faust and the Carraros are charged with keeping open on Sunday a barroom for the sale of spirituous, vinous and malt liquors. Hickey and Jeune are charged with keeping open on Sunday.

The great fear is now that Judge Barker, of the criminal court, will declare the Sunday closing law constitutional and proceed to enforce it. The wide open element fear the result of Gov. Beckham's recent imputations on the criminal judiciary of the city. More indictments are looked for now from day to day. Saloon men say if they are compelled to close Sunday theaters should be made to follow suit.

THE RYAN-WEST CONTEST.

A Young Louisville Lawyer Writes to the Grand Jury Asking for an Investigation.

Louisville, Ky., March 8.—A young lawyer of Louisville, has written the grand jury asking for an investigation of the Ryan-West boxing contest, which took place at the Auditorium last Monday night. He writes the foreman that the contest was a brutal, bloody prize fight.

As against the claim that the contest was brutal the managers of the Southern Athletic club point to the fact that both men were able to leave the ring unassisted, and that both were able to be about the next day.

Commonwealth's Attorney Parrons announced Thursday afternoon that he will take steps to prevent the boxing contest scheduled for a preliminary bout between Marvin Hart, of Louisville, and Jack Bernsholte, Tommy Ryan's trainer.

Given a Life Sentence.

Lexington, Ky., March 7.—Thomas Christian, white, horse trainer and ex-bank clerk, who shot to death Frank Perkins, colored, a trainer and brother of Jockey "Soup" Perkins, here in October, was given a life sentence Wednesday. Christian entered Perkins' home with an acquaintance to see Cora Van Tassel, a former noted actress, and was ejected for alleged misconduct. He later returned with a Winchester and pumped three bullets into Perkins as he stood on his porch.

Three Counterfeiters Arrested.

Middlesboro, Ky., March 7.—Three counterfeiters, supposed to be Louisville crooks, were arrested in the mountains Tuesday. The men had a full kit of burglars' and counterfeiters' tools. Donnella, chief of the secret service bureau, with headquarters in Louisville, arrived and took charge of them. He says they belong to a desperate gang. The men, it is believed, had planned to rob the Cumberland Gap bank Wednesday night. Their arrest ruined their plans.

Theater Leased.

Louisville, Ky., March 8.—Charles P. Elliott, of Chicago, Thursday closed a contract with the Masonic Grand Lodge of Kentucky by which he leases for a term of years the theater in the new Masonic temple in this city. The temple is to be on Chestnut street, near Fourth, and will cost, according to the plans just finished, $150,000. It will be completed October 1. The theater will be devoted to vaudeville.

Three Delegates Selected.

Frankfort, Ky., March 9.—The governor Friday appointed Dr. J. N. McCormack, of Bowling Green; Dr. M. K. Allen and Dr. Chester Mayer, of Louisville, as the Kentucky delegates to the American congress of tuberculosis, to be held in New York city May 15 and 16.

Escaped From Jail.

London, Ky., March 7.—John Hendrickson, held at Manchester for the killing of Caloway Carnes, escaped jail Wednesday night and is still at large. Stephen Lytle was indicted for killing Bev Cash, and gave $20,000 bond.

A Rabbi's Call.

Paducah, Ky., March 9.—Rabbi H. Genelow, who was graduated at the Hebrew Union college, in Cincinnati, and took charge of the Jewish synagogue here, has accepted the call to become junior rabbi for Anas Israel congregation of Louisville.

Jumped From the Window.

Lexington, Ky., March 9.—G. S. Blakely, an inmate of the insane asylum, escaped Friday night by jumping from a third story window. He was not injured and was captured a mile away.

Cleve Aylor caught the whitest skunk, last week, that was ever seen by any one. It was all white except a black stripe about an inch wide on each side.

Jim Snyder and Chess Ayior still go to Petersburg about three times a week to get shaved. We don't know whether Everett does the work for them are not.

IDLEWILD—March, with its storms of rain and cold blizzards, causing such sudden changes of weather, is now ruling supremely; the month of terror to man, stock and cereals, has the full consent of all, to hasten its close, to be followed by April with her warmth and life giving showers. The most unusual thing has been the great scarcity of water this time of the year, until Sunday we received the copious blessiug; even the low coudition of our Belle of Rivers.

Miss Alberta Gaines, the educated and refined daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. W Gaines, begau teaching at Bullittsville, Monday.

Miss Sheba Roberts, who is a fair representative of our county seat, who has been visitiug Miss Faunie Willis for the last week, called Friday, on Miss Pauline Winston, who is visiting her parents from Carrollton, Ky.

Happy to say that the cloud of sickness is passiug over our neighborhood, and the "mist has passed away" enough to exchange visits, and we all feel impatient for the good news soon to be herald from house to house that all are well.

A prominent Democrat of this vicinity says that the Hon. U. C. Cram, of the county of Grant, is splendid material for Circuit Judge in this district. He is well equipped by nature and education, an honest, capable, conscientious gentleman, in whom we can express a trustful confidence.

As to-day, (Monday) is the sale of Mr. F. P. Walton's personal property, they will soon be reunited as a family in Norwood, and it is with the deepest regret that we lose your most worthy and popular correspondent and his congenial, christian wife from the community of Idlewild, who are endeared to us all by friendship's strongest ties. We wish them the prosperity they so well deserve, and may they often gladden us with their welcome presence.

BULLITTSVILL.—Ben Hewitt had the misfortune to cut his foot very badly, last Thursday.

School is now in progress.

Kenneth Balsly is on the sick list.

Temp Graves is building a hay shed.

Johu Feeley contemplates going to the city to work.

J. L. Riley was here, Thursday, looking after his interests.

The rain that fell Saturday night and Sunday was much needed.

Quite a number of Mr. C. W. Riley's friends spent Sunday with him.

Mrs. B. C. Whitlock, of Sekitan, O., is the guest of her aunt, Mrs. Riley.

Will Gaines was calling in the Idlewild community Saturday and Sunday.

Rev. Jones filled his appointment here, Sunday, preaching to a good sized congregatiou.

Misses Bernice Duncan and Zayda Gaines were visiting Miss Frances Willis, Saturday night.

Esq. Clinton Gaines was on the sick list last week, but we are glad to say he is much improved.

Mr. Ben Stephens, candidate for County Judge, was shaking hands with the boys, last Thursday.

Misses Beulah Gaines and Frances Willis were calling at Mr. John Stephens' Tuesday afternoon.

Mrs. Dr. Clore left Saturday for Kenton county, where she will spend several days with her parents.

Mrs. Temp Gaines was in Ludlow, several days, last week, with her sister, Mrs. Dr. Crisler, who is quite sick.

If any one has any items they wish published, they may leave them in Box 27 at this office, and they will be gladly received.

C. W. Riley is still confined to the house, but is much better, and we hope as the days grow brighter he will be able to mingle with us again.

We are sorry to lose the Idlewild correspondent. His newsy items will not only be greatly missed, but he and his estimable wife as well. We hope prosperity will follow them to their new home.

The Grange met here Saturday afternoon, and was well attended. The next meeting will be on the 30th of March on account of Pomona Grange meeting at Union on the 23d. All members are requested to be present on the 30th. So please remember and have no excuse for absence.

FLORENCE.—Milton Goodridge, a wealthy and prosperous farmer of Oldham county, is visiting his brother, William Goodridge, of this neighborhood. Mr. Goodridge is a native of this county, consequently he has a host of friends here, who are always glad to see him, and the pleasure of meeting him is doubled to your humble servant from the fact that we have a great many friends and relatives in Oldham county, where some of the most pleasant days of our life have been spent. During our last visit in Oldham, we were at Mr. Goodridge's and asked him if he had had a letter from home lately, and he said, "Yes, it came today," and he handed me the Boone County Recorder. He has been a resident of Oldham for 20 years.

We have always thought well of Florence, and, at present, we are away ahead of—well, wont say New York. On every corner you meet an industrious candidate, with his claims of success, and then we have two soldiers, Malcolm Dulaney and Harvey Latham, just from the Philippines, who give us a full and interesting description of that faroff country and its people. From what these boys tell us of a soldier's life where they have been, we conclude we would rather be a candidate for an office in Boone county than to be a soldier in the Philippines.

Glad that B. F. Sawyers is a candidate for justice of the peace in this district. He can be recommended to the voters a well educated, thoroughly a southern gentleman, and we feel that he will be a credit to the office, thoroughly competent to perform every duty. There are two precincts in the district, Constance and Florence, and as the former now has the office, Florence should have it the next term.

BELLEVUE.—Rev. Elmer Atwood will preach in the Woolper school house, Sunday the 17th inst., at 3 o'clock p. m.

James Rogers is having good luck with his lambs.

I can come as near telling who will be nominated on the 6th of April as the next one.

Andy Cook and Charlie Sandford passed the day, last Wednesday, in Aurora, on pleasure bound.

We are anxious to know who is to do the housework for our friend, C. G. Riddell, while he farms.

Orlando Snyder and family, of Petersburg, were visiting Mrs. Snyder's mother and sisters here, Friday.

D. E. Lawell and Miss Maria Craig, of near Burlington, were guests of J. H. Lawell and wife, last Friday.

Rev. Atwood, after a few days confinement to his room with grip, is able to be out among his friends again.

Miss Minnie Deck was able to attend Sunday school, last Sunday, after two weeks' confinement with neuralgia.

Miss Eva Botts is teaching a select school here. She began on the 4th inst. She is competent to fill the position.

Albert Snyder and sister, Miss Virgie, were visiting their sister, Mrs. Minnie Carpenter, near Burlington, last Thursday.

Mrs. D. M. Snyder has been confined to her bed several days with rheumatism. We hope to report her better in the next issue.

We welcome our old friends, Tony Rue and family, back to this neighborhood. He occupies the farm lately vacated by W. S. Rice.

Two tried and true Democratic candidates—T. J. Adams and W. T. Evans, passed through late Saturday evening, en route for their homes.

M. J. Corbin spent a couple of days in the city, last week, buying goods and selling a lot of tobacco he purchased and priced this winter.

Every Saturday morning we hear some one blowing a horn, coming down the pike, and in a short time Vees Gaines drives up with his wagon laden with good, old country beef. He is not going to let a fellow starve.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS.

Sealed proposals will be received by the Board of Trustees of the Walton Graded Common School district until 2 p. m., Saturday, March 23d, 1901, upon the various branches required in the construction of a new school building in said district in Walton, Boone county, Ky. Bids will be received upon the whole or any part of the work, upon the following branches, masonry, cuts-tone work, brick work, tin, galvanized iron and slate work, lathing and plastering, painting and glazing, stairs, slate blackboards, hardware, tileing and marble work, iron and steel work. All work must be executed in accordance with drawing and specifications prepaired by Schoefield & Rabe, architects, which drawing and specifications are now on file at office of said architects, where they may be seen by bidders (also at Walton, Ky.) Bids must be sealed and inclosed with the name of the bidder and class of work bid upon, and must be addressed to the secretary, (W. O. Rouse), of said Board of Trustees of the Walton Graded Common School district and left at the office of the architects National Bank Building, Covington, Ky., on or before 2 p. m., Saturday, March 23d, 1901. Bids must be accompanied by a bond or certified check in lieu thereof in 5 per cent. of the amount bid. Bond to be conditioned upon the bidders entering into a written contract with the said Board of Trustees within five (5) days after notice of acceptance of the bid. The Board reserves the right to reject any or all bids. Said building to be completed by Sept. 1, 1901.

By order of the School Board.
T. F. CURLEY, Chairman.
W. O. ROUSE, Secretary.

THERE is wailing and gnashing of teeth from east to west, from the torrid south to the frozen north—the River and Harbor bill has failed—talked to death by Senator now Ex-Senator Carter of Montana. Incidentally, the expensiveness of Congress has been reduced by fifty million dollars.

For sale—Alderney cow and calf and 9 barrow shoats. Noah Clore, Burlington, Ky.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rises good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 80 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes if you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 09, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

Gov Beckham refused to pardon E. K. Wilson, a son of J. M. Wilson, of Grant county. Young Wilson practiced law at London, this State. He entered politics and was elected on the Republican ticket to the office of County Attorney, and was later a candidate for the office of County Judge of Laurel county, but was defeated by only a few votes. He was convicted for causing the death of Miss Mary Cloyd by criminal operation at the Catchings Hotel at London. The first trial resulted in a hung jury and a change of venue was secured for the second to the Rockcastle Circuit Court at Mt. Vernon. This trial resulted in a conviction of five years. The case was appealed but a new trial was refused.

CUBA seems to be wondering whether the Act of Congress in regard to it is a fact or a bluff. Well, that all depends. They never will find out until they raise or call and perhaps not then.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 20, 1901. NO. 22.

EASTER comes this year on the 7th day of April, the day after the primary election.

THE Court of Appeals will adjourn on the 23 inst. for the vacation before the winter and spring terms.

THE south end of the county was the theater of action for the candidates last week. Nearly the entire outfit was calling on the voters down there.

THE United States is still shipping mules and horses to South Africa in large numbers, proving, whatever Kitchener may say, that hoss-tilities are not yet over there.

THE city of Cloverport, this State, was nearly wiped out by fire, one day last week. The State sent tents and other supplies to the numerous families who were rendered homeless.

IN the death of Ex-President Harrison the country loses one of its greatest men. He proved himself to be a soldier and a statesman, and was admired by those who differed from him in politics.

PAT MCDONALD, editor of the Western Argus, died at his home in Frankfort, last Thursday. He was a leading Democratic politician, and was one of the owners of the Yeoman, for many years the official paper of the State.

WHITE men who go to Oklahoma hoping to marry one of the Indian heiresses there, might as well understand that they cannot do it unless they have $1,000 to pay for a license—this figure having been fixed to shut out similar adventurers.

THE weather Bureau recently denounced the ground hog as a fakir, declaring that he was right only once in five times. How much oftener does the Bureau hit it even in predictions for one day ahead, to say nothing of those for six weeks to come?

Washington does not like to be rude but if Pennsylvania will find it convenient to keep her hoodlums at home at the next inauguration, the Capital city will be very glad indeed. These alleged soldiers have always proved themselves to be the worse sort of rowdies.

THE President appointed Ex-Senator Lindsay to a $5000 a year position in a few hours after he retired from the Senate. The President evidently believes in rewarding those who have assisted pushing his political aspirations along, and Senator Lindsay is one of that class.

IN some of the counties in the State the Brown people and the Republicans are arranging for a fusion, with a view to keeping the Democrats out of control of the next General Assembly, and to prevent the election of a Democratic United States Senator to succeed Senator Deboe.

IF cloture is adopted in the Senate, the Government will henceforth be an oligarchy run by the President and half a dozen leaders in each house. The Senate is the last bulwark of deliberation in legislation, the House having long ago ceased to be anything but a machine to register the will of the Speaker.

THE mosquito theory of the transmission of malarial and yellow fever is now pretty thoroughly established. That is to say, it has been proved that mosquitos are the chief if not the only cause of the dissemination of the disease. Now let everybody turn to and do his share to exterminate these pests.

The restrictions on the importation of live stock from Great Britain were relaxed by the Irish board of agriculture December 1, 1900. These restrictions were imposed when the outbreak of foot and mouth disease occurred in Norfolk. According to the order "cattle, sheep, goats and other ruminant animals, and swine" are to be admitted into Ireland from British ports if accompanied by a "permit." There is no exception to this rule, and it is a very peculiar one, namely, the "permit" is to be dispensed with in the case of sheep "imported from Scotland and shipped at Scotch ports."

George G. Hughes, the original of the above picture, will be an applicant for the office of Collector of Internal Revenue for this the Sixth District of Kentucky, at the end of the four years' term of the incumbent.

Mr. Hughes easily traces his paternal ancestors back to a period that antedates the revolutionary war, the first one of which the family history gives any account in this country being the great-great-great-grandfather of the subject of this sketch. His name wsa Barnabas Hughes, a native of Irland, who came to this country in 1750, settling in what is now the State of New Jersey. He had two sons, William and John, the latter being the great-great-grandfather of George G. Hughes. In 1770 the elder Hughes and his two sons moved to Carlisle, Pennsylvania, and when war with the mother country was declared, John Hughes shouldered his musket and went to the front, participating in many of the principal battles fought by the Continental army. In 1775 he went to Canada in Bendict Arnold's command, and participted in the attack on Quebec. After this expedition Mr. Hughes was promoted from the ranks to a captaincy, and took part in the battles of Princetown, Brandywine, Germantown and Monmouth.

At the conclusion of the war John Hughes settled in Washington county, Pennsylvania, where he married Sarah Wiley. To them were born seven children, Mary Ann, James, John, Thomas, Barnabas, Samuel and Isabel. He died in 1818, aged 68 years.

Thomas Hughes, above named, left his home and parents in 1800, "cast his lot in the stern wilds, floating down the Ohio river in a frail boat, as far as Tanner's Station (now Petersburg), where he determined to locate. In 1810 he and Jane Lemon were married, and to them were born six children the late Ethen A. Hughes being one of that family, and who, shortly after reaching his majority, married Nancy Crisler, of this county. Of this union, George G. Hughes is one of the sons, four of whom are now living. He was born in Burlington, this county on the 16th day of September, 1844, but grew up on the farm near town. When not engaged at farm labor Mr. Hughes put his time in at school at Morgan Academy at Burlington, under Professors Coleman, Davidson, Huey and Lindsay.

Having prepared himself for a course of legal lectures, he entered the Ohio State and Union Law College, at Cleveland, Ohio, from which he graduated with honor on the 27th day of November, 1867, since which time he has been practicing law in Burlington, and his long experience in that profession has qualified him thoroughly for the duties of the office to which he aspires.

Mr. Hughes has always been an ardent Republican, and has been a member of the Republican Executive Committee of this county, for 25 or 30 years, in which capacity he has served his party most faithfully, and on several occasions has he lead the forlorn hope as his party's nominee for office in this county.

Mr. Hughes enlisted in the U. S. Army, September 2d, 1862, and was honorably discharged therefrom.

He was made a Master Mason in Burlington Lodge F. and A. M., in April, 1869, and was twice Master of that Lodge. He is an upright, conscientious gentleman, a good neighbor and a model citzen, and all his acquaintances would be rejoiced at his appointment as Collector.

BISHOP, who killed a Covington policeman a few months ago, and whose first sentence resulted in a death verdict, was given a life term in the penitentiary by the second trial which was concluded last Saturday.

THE Pugh-Elliston trouble that has been annoying the Kenton county Democracy for several months has been adjusted, and Elliston takes his place among the rank and file of party. These people who have been creating so much trouble, it is hoped, will now be good.

THE recent Republican primary election held in Christian county to nominate candidates for the county offices to be voted for next November, was manipulated by the county machine in such a corrupt manner that the better element of the party in that county has rebelled, and has held a meeting and appointed a committee to arrange for a fusion with the Democrats to make certain the defeat of the nominees of the corrupt primary. The corruption of political machines becomes so pronounced some times that even the Republicans will not submit.

A Cowboy appeared at a railway station in Nevada and stated that he desired to ship to parents East the body of a comrade who had been killed by a grizzly bear. In shipping the box, the agent noticed that it was quite heavy, and not of the usual shape. In a few days came the telegram. "Some mistake; Bill's body not arrived; box contained a bear." The cowboy who was still at the station on a protracted spree wired back: "No mistake Bill's inside the bear."

The price of twine has advanced about 57 per cent in the last year or two. This is probably a matter of small importance to the average person, but it is a matter of consequence to Uncle Sam as well as many large consumers of "strings." The postoffice department alone expends about $100,000 annually for twine for tying packages of letters and other mail matter. All supplies of this kind are supposed to be furnished under contract by the lowest bidder, but a political "pull" has often been known to decide who was the lowest bidder at the time the contracts were let.

It might be a good plan to send ex-Senator Carter over to talk the Fillipino insurrection to death.—Memphis Commercial appeal.

GRANT COUNTY.

From Williamstown Courier.

Last Monday many of the County Court day crowd were accosted by a young man with a subscription paper, who said that he was making up money for his brother, whose house and contents had been destroyed by fire. He gave his name as Albert Henry and said his brother's name was Burrel Henry.

He obtained money from several people, and had he confined himself to one story would have probably been successful and escaped without arrest. However, he suited his story to the location of his victim in the county. If he lived in the Western part of the county the fakir gave his residence and the property burned as in the eastern part, and so on.

Some of the victims began to compare notes, and then concluded they had been "worked." A complaint was lodged with the proper authorities and Mr. Henry was taken before Judge White for a hearing. There it developed that he did not live in Grant county at all, but came from Boone. He said he had been taking subscriptions for his brother in Boone county, whose house had actually been destroyed by fire, and when he came to Williamstown concluded he had better represent his brother as a resident from Boone. Judge White held him over to await the action of the Grand Jury in the sum of $200 bail. In default of bail he is now lodging with "Uncle" Billy Cates.

The Wheat Outlook.

Mr. H. F. Hillenmeyer in discussing the wheat outlook makes the following observations:

"To look casually over the fields just now is anything but encouraging. They are brown, bare and in strong contrast to their appearance a year ago, when every farmer was struggling with the question to graze or not to graze.

"The winter has not been a cold one but since Nov. 20 very dry, with no snow and many sharp frosts—a regular Western winter in fact, all save the cold and snow. The drill marks are as deep to day as when the seed was committed to earth. The plants are in the bottom of the drill marks, sound and vital, but with frosted leaves and giving no apparent evidence of capability to yield an hundredfold.

"The weather last fall was very dry, very warm and the fly quite abundant. From infested fields it is hoping against hope to expect great yields. But in dry times farmers are disposed to seed deeply, which is all right if weather conditions favor afterward; but, unfortunately, this was not the case last year. The rains, like the breaking of the doctor's chaise, came all in a lump and came so gently and so copiously that the earth packed like a vise around the deeply sown plants, and as was expected by every one familiar with the minutia of seed sowing, they damped off.

Many fields entirely free of fly suffered from this error in seeding, and such may yet return excellent yields. What the final outcome will be no one can yet forecast, but the fear of fly is overestimated. It is a question of temperature and humidity. Should the spring be wet and warm, there will be little tillering of the plant, but immediate jointing and a light stand of straw; should the spring be wet, raw, cold and long continued, the plant would tiller immensely and a superb yield result.

There has never been a question of the personal popularity of Senator-elect Blackburn, and the fact that he is to again take his seat in the Senate next Monday, after an absence of four years, is viewed with satisfaction by the many people in public life in Washington with whom he has an extensive and familiar acquaintance. Senator Blackburn first came to Washington as a member of the Forty-fourth Congress twenty five years ago and served continuously through five Congresses of the House until 1885, when he was elected to the Senate, where he served two terms, retiring March 4, 1897. In conversation to day Mr. Blackburn said he could recall but two men out of the present House who were members of the Forty-fourth when he first entered it. These two members are Cannon, of Illinois, and Ketcham, of New York. Senator Blackburn is now in better health than he was when he retired from the Senate, and no doubt looks forward to next Monday with much pride and pleasure. When Mr. Blackburn was elected last year there were many threats that he would not be allowed to take his seat, but these threats have not materialized, and it is conceded by the Republican members of the Senate that there will be no objection made to his taking the oath of office.—Washington special of March 4 to Courier Journal.

The Kansas Experiment Station has made a very interesting test of the value of the buffalo-grass of the western plains. Feeding a quantity of it to a steer, and making careful record of that fed and analysis of the excrement, it was found that the digestible element was 54.7 per cent of that fed. Thus it proved of higher value than blue grass and timothy hay. The element of fat was about the same, but it was much higher in protein thus making a better ration. This is the first time the value of this grass has been scientifically determined.—Indiana Farmer.

There are at least two decided advantages with poultry keeping. One is the small amount of capital required add the other is the quick returns that are possible with the different opportunities afforded of an income. With good laying hens, such as should be purchased in making a start. The eggs are always marketable.

In three months at farthest, if desired, fowls as broilers may be ready for market and in six or eight months matured fowls may be ready to sell. A very small amount of capital is required as a cheap shelter is all that is needed in addition to the capital invested in the fowls and the eggs will almost from the start purchase the feed.

It is business too that in nearly all cases it is best to commence on a small scale and increase as experience and success warrant.

We always like to see a farmer horseman drive up to a hitching post these winter days, says the exchange, jump out of his rig unfold a big warm blanket and carefully cover his faithful horse. There's a big heart in that man. He'll do to tie to. He is thinking of something else besides himself and he takes as much pleasure in caring for the comfort of his horse as for himself. On the other hand it makes us sad to see a great big man, warmly clad from head to foot, drive a sweating, steaming horse up to a rack, hastily tie him fast, leave him shivering and make for the nearest hot stove. There is something wrong about this fellow. He may be a nice man, may belong to church, may not swear, smoke, nor have any bad habits, but we wouldn't want to be his horse.

Somewhere about the line between the counties of Grant and Owen on Stevens creek on a clear day a thin blue drifting tongue of smoke creeps out of the hills over the tree tops and floats away into the blue of the sky. Somewhere beneath that curling smoke safely hidden away among the bluffs and overhanging cliffs of Stevens creek as it twists and turns on its way to big Eagle it is said there is an illicit still. That moonshine whisky is made and sold and the business has been conducted for a good long time, and it is only recently that the revenue officers have "caught on." We do not know the parties connected with the work or the exact spot at which the still was located. Uncle Sam is likely to learn both the names and the place in a few short weeks unless business is immediately suspended and the parties scatter.—Williamstown Courier.

At a stable in Fairmont, O., a man died of heart disease, falling dead in one of the stalls. A horse gave notice of the death by distressed whinneys. When the proprietor entered the barn to ascertain the trouble the horse acted as if in trouble and gave every indication of knowing that something unusual had happened.

Archdeacon Barker, the Anglican rector at Ladysmith, proposes to commemorate the historic siege of that city by replacing the battered church with a new and handsomo building, on the walls of which are to be tablets bearing the names of all the British soldiers who fell in or about the town during the present war.

The London of the Romans lies buried about eighteen feet below the level of Cheapside, and still deeper than that is buried the earlier London of the Britons. In nearly all parts of the city there have been discovered tesselated pavements, Roman baths, tombs, lamps, vases, sandals, ornaments, weapons, coins and statues of the ancient Roman gods.

An enterprising farmer in the Emmenthal, Switzerland, has broken away from all the old customs that have dominated Swiss farming. The widespread impression that people living in a primitive condition possess more acute vision than civilized men enjoy receives support from the investigation of Dr. Rivers during a recent expedition to Torres Straits and New Guinea. Thomas A. Edison, Sr., that genius of electricity, has invented a real storage battery. Without going into technicalities it can be briefly stated that in a storage battery is stored enough chemical energy to produce an electric current. You can tap electricity from a storage battery, so to speak. And, of course, the current can be used in any one of innumerable ways, to do any of the innumerable things done by the current produced at a stationary plant.

An immense deposit of an unknown gaseous substance is said to have been discovered near Rio Grande City, Texas. It ignites quickly and gives out a strong flame, which lasts for a remarkably long time. Scientists are quoted as saying that the substance is either an unknown mineral or ordinary clay highly charged with natural gas. In either case the value of the deposit as fuel is immense, as it covers many thousands of acres and is of great depth.

Jules Verne has declined to allow his name to be offered to the French academy, and while begging that body to accept the "gratitude of an old story-teller," replies: "I have just completed my seventy-third year and do not at such an age aspire to the academy. A British regimental physician has investigated the effect upon soldiers of regular marching in disciplined bodies. The uniformity of the soldier's step causes the indefinite repetition of a shock of the brain and bones, and consequently the mode of motion is far more deleterious than an irregular walk. He attributes the peculiar aches and pains often felt by the men to the fact that the same parts of the body receive the series of shocks. As a remedy, he suggests an India-rubber heel for all military boots.

THE BODY LAID TO REST

SIMPLE BUT IMPRESSIVE SERVICES.

Fully 15,000 Persons Witnessed the Ceremonies at the Grave, Including the Chief Magistrate.

Doubtful if Any Person in This Generation Was Borne to the Grave Among So Many Manifestations of Respect.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 14.—Gen. Harrison died at 4:45 Wednesday afternoon without regaining consciousness. His death was quiet and painless, there being a gradual sinking until the end came, which was marked by a single gasp for breath as life departed from the body of the great statesman. The relatives, with a few exceptions, and several of his old and tried friends were at the bedside when he passed away.

None of Gen. Harrison's children were present at his death. Neither Col. Russell nor Mrs. McKee had reached the city, although both were hurrying on their way to the bedside of their dying parent as fast as steam would bear them.

The group at the bedside included Mrs. Harrison, W. H. L. Miller, Samuel Miller, his son, Rev. M. L. Haines, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, which Gen. Harrison had attended for so many years; Secretary Tibbett, Drs. Jameson and Dorsey, Col. Dan Ransdell, sergeant-at-arms of the United States senate, and a close personal friend of the dead ex-president; Clifford Arrick, and the two nurses, who have been in constant attendance at the bedside. Gen. Harrison's two sisters and an aunt were also present.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 15.—The arrangements for the funeral of Gen. Benjamin Harrison, ex-president of the United States, have been completed. The body will lie in state at the capitol Saturday from 11 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock in the evening, and the funeral services will be held from the First Presbyterian church Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Rev. M. L. Haines officiating.

The event will not only be one of national significance, but of international importance. Cablegrams are reaching the family of the dead statesmen from all parts of the world offering condolence in the hour of bereavement. Gen. Harrison was a man of international reputation, and was held in high esteem throughout the civilized world. He had been entertained by crowned heads of Europe, and his death is felt keenly not only throughout the United States, but throughout the civilized world as well.

The funeral will be attended by many of the noted men of the United States. President McKinley and members of his cabinet will be here. Gov. Yates, of Illinois, telegraphed Thursday that he will be here, attended by his staff. Gov. Nash, of Ohio, with his staff, will attend the funeral. Gov. Durbin Thursday afternoon sent a notice of Gen. Harrison's death to the governors of many of the states, and it is the general belief that the majority of them will be here.

The city and county offices will be closed Saturday at 11 o'clock in honor of Gen. Harrison. Mayor Taggart called a special council meeting to take action on his death.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 16.—The arrangements at the Harrison home for the lying in state Saturday and the funeral services Sunday were practically completed Friday night.

The body was dressed by R. B. Adams, J. F. Balley and John Kregelo, of the Kregelo undertaking establishment, and was then removed to the front parlor, where it remained until taken to the state house.

The body was dressed in customary black suit of Prince Albert cut which Gen. Harrison always wore. A plain black tie was used and gold buttons adorn the shirt front. The body reclines flat on the back, the face looking out from the silken lining. The left hand is folded across the breast, a plain gold ring being on the second finger. This is the only ornament used. The face of Gen. Harrison is composed and restful although ivory white, his illness having made no perceptible change in his appearance.

The casket containing the body was Friday taken to the front parlor on the first floor and placed directly in front of the mantel and fireplace on the south side of the room, the head being toward the east. The mantel above it was piled high with the floral offerings of friends and admirers of the dead statesman. Other floral design were arranged about the room.

The body was viewed by the friends and family after it had been placed in the position selected. Mrs. Harrison went into the room alone and remained for some time there. The copper lining to the casket will not be put in place until just before it is taken to the church for the funeral, when it will be hermetically sealed.

The casket was covered and taken to the state house at 9 o'clock Saturday morning. The hearse in which it was conveyed and which will be used on the day of the funeral was draped in black and American flags. It was drawn by four black horses.

The casket was removed from the hearse and placed in the rotunda of the capitol building, and at 11 o'clock the cover was removed from the casket and the features exposed to view.

A constant stream of sorrowing people passed the bier and gazed upon the face of the illustrious dead.

On the return from the state house Saturday night the casket will be placed in the same position in the family home it formerly occupied, where it will remain until the time of the funeral Sunday afternoon.

The number of floral tributes sent to the house Friday was greatly increased. So many have arrived that a separate room has been set aside for them, and it is completely filled. Late Friday afternoon many of the flowers were taken to the parlors where the casket was placed after the body had been prepared for burial.

Adm. George Brown, on behalf of the Loyal Legion, sent a beautiful silk flag. The flag bears the emblem of the legion, and was placed over the casket. It will not be removed until just as the body is lowered into the grave. Numerous other offerings of respect were received Friday.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 18.—At the Harrison home before the remains were taken to the First Presbyterian church, where the full services were held, there were brief exercises for the members of the family and more immediate friends of Gen. Harrison. Possibly 150 people were present. Mrs. Harrison did not appear, but remained in her room until it was time to leave for the church.

President McKinley, accompanied by Gov. Durbin, called at the house about 1 o'clock. At about the same time came the members of President Harrison's cabinet, and others continually arrived until the short services were over. The people snt in the parlors, filled the halls, and a number of them sat upon the stairs, while Dr. Haines read a short passage from the Scriptures and made a few remarks touching the life and character of Gen. Harrison, as did Dr. Niccols, of St. Louis, and after a brief prayer by Dr. Haines, the services were over.

The florist's wagon backed up to the front of the house, and a number of the larger pieces were loaded into the vehicle preparatory to being taken to the church. Word was then sent to Mrs. Harrison that the time had come for the body to be removed to the church, and she at once came down from the room into the parlor. There were a few minutes' bustle, whispered directions by the undertaker and his assistants, and a marshaling of the honorary pallbearers into column of twos. The procession was to have left the house at 1:30 o'clock, but it was fully 30 minutes later than that when everything was in readiness. The doors were thrown wide open and the honorary pallbearers, who were Gen. Benj. F. Tracy, of New York; John Wanamaker, of Philadelphia; W. H. H. Miller, Indianapolis; John W. Noble, St. Louis, and Chas. Foster, of Fostoria, O.; Gen. Lew Wallace, of Indianapolis; Judson Harmon, of Cincinnati, and William A. Woods, Indianapolis, came slowly down the walk leading to the street. After them came the active pallbearers bearing the casket. They were: A. L. Mason, James Whitcomb Riley, Evans Woollen, Harry J. Milligen, Clifford Arrick, William G. Bobbs, Harry S. New, Howard Gale, John T. Griffiths, Newton S. Terkington, Hilton U. Brown and Samuel Reid.

While the casket was being placed in the hearse, the honorary pallbearers stood to one side, with bared heads. As soon as the hearse had moved from the front of the house, the carriages came up rapidly and the family and visitors followed them.

Behind the casket came Mrs. Harrison with her brother, Lieut. Commander Parker, of the navy, and little Elizabeth Harrison. Then came Secretary Tibbott and Mrs. Tibbott, then Mr. and Mrs. McKee, Russell Harrison and Mrs. Russell Harrison, then the other relatives of the dead ex-president. Directly after the members of the family came President McKinley and Gov. Durbin, and following them came the friends of the family.

Two hours before the time set for the commencement of the services the people had begun to gather at this point, and by the time the funeral procession arrived there was a solid mass of humanity stretching a block away on every sidewalk. The streets were kept entirely clear by a detachment of police and Company C, of the 2d infantry, commanded by Capt. E. Porter.

While the carriages were discharging their inmates at the door of the church, the wild clanging of a fire engine gong was heard, and down the street at top speed came dashing a fire truck. Its way lay through the crowd beyond where the police lines were formed, and for a brief space it seemed as though some accident must certainly result. The people made wild rushes in every direction to escape the threatened danger and the driver of the truck, handling his horses skillfully, all escaped without injury. President McKinley was half way between the sidewalk and the church when the confusion attracted his attention, and he stopped short with an expression of anxiety on his face until the truck had passed and done no harm, when he resumed his walk into the church.

It was 2:30 when the procession arrived at the church, and for one hour and twenty minutes prior to that time the church had been packed to its utmost capacity. In fact its utmost capacity was stretched somewhat, and in places inside the building the people were wedged together much too tightly for comfort.

The honorary and actual pallbearers came slowly up the north center aisle, filing into the seats at the side. The ushers, forming a column near the door, came up the south aisle, acting as an escort to the president, who was accompanied by Mrs. Durbin.

As the president reached the pew set apart for him, the ushers turned and faced him. He bowed his thanks for the honor, and then ushering Mrs. Durbin into the pew, followed after. Gov. Durbin and Secretary Cortelyou filled up the pew.

Immediately in front of the casket, and behind the pallebarers, came Rev. M. L. Haines and Rev. Samuel J. Niccols, of St. Louis.

Immediately following the casket were Lieut. Commander Parker and Mrs. Harrison. They occupied the second seat from the front to the left of the north center aisle, corresponding to that of the president's on the south aisle. With them were Frank Tibboti, Gen. Harrison's private secretary, and Mrs. Parker. Following these were Mr. and Mrs. Russell Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. J. R. McKee, Mr. and Mrs. Eaton, John Scott Harrison and Carter B. Harrison, Mr. and Mrs. Newcomer, Mr. and Mrs. S. V. Morris, and other relatives and close friends of the family.

When all had taken their seats, Mr. Haines advanced to the front of the pulpit platform and, resting his left hand upon the large church Bible, opened the service by saying:

"I am the resurrection and the life. He that believeth on me, though he were dead, yet shall he live, and he that liveth and believeth on me shall never die."

Mr. Niccols then read from 1 Corinthians xv., 35-38 inclusive, after which Mr. Haines offered prayer.

After the prayer the choir rendered the hymn, "Rock of Ages," in a beautiful and impressive manner. This was Gen. Harrison's favorite hymn, and it is said it is the only one he ever attempted to sing.

Following the hymn, Dr. Niccols read portions of Scriptures from the fourteenth chapter of St. John and the twenty-first chapter of Revelations, after which Dr. Haines delivered an address.

After the address, Dr. Niccols offered prayer. The services were closed with a baritone solo, "Hark, Hark, My Soul," rendered by Edward Nell, in which the entire choir joined in the chorus.

The party left the church in the same order in which it entered. For the most part those who attended the church services left immediately for Crown Hill cemetery.

Indianapolis, Ind., March 18.—In the center of a hollow square, composed of fully 15,000 of his fellow-citizens, the remains of Benjamin Harrison were Sunday afternoon interred in the family lot in Crown Hill cemetery. Close by the grave were the members of his family, President McKinley, and other visitors of distinction and the more intimate friends of Gen. Harrison. Back a distance of fifty yards behind ropes guarded zealously by a large force of police stood with uncovered heads the great multitude who knew him not so well as did they who stood beside the freshly upturned earth, but who honored him and admired him full as much. It is doubtful if any public man, at least in this generation, was borne to his last resting place among so many demonstrations of respect. Of passionate grief there was little beyond the members of his family, but the tribute of respect was universal.

It came from all alike, from those of his own political faith, and from those who differed with him concerning what is best for the nation's good, from men who have been lifelong friends, and from those who knew him merely by sight, and to whom he never spoke. It came from women and children, from white and black, from all conditions and kind of people. There was no exception anywhere to the expression that the nation had lost one of its ablest men and the greatest man of his generation in his own state.

By the grave stood the chief magistrate of the nation, and behind the ropes were all the street arabs of Gen. Harrison's city—every grade of human life in America, between the two was represented in the crowd—and in them all there was but the one feeling, that a man had died who was honest at all times with himself and with others, and whose ability and character were such as the nation could ill-afford to lose.

The services at the grave were simple in the extreme, all in most excellent taste, and like the proceedings Saturday, there was an utter absence of fruition in everything that was done.

SKETCH OF HARRISON'S LIFE.

Was Born 68 Years Ago at North Bend, O.—A Lawyer, Statesman and a Soldier.

Benjamin Harrison, 23d president of the United States, was born at North Bend, O., on the Ohio river, about 15 miles below Cincinnati, August 20, 1833, 68 years ago. His father, John Scott Harrison, was third son of Gen. William Henry Harrison, ninth president of the United States. The latter was the third and youngest son of Benjamin Harrison, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence from Virginia. John Scott Harrison was twice married. His second wife was Elizabeth, daughter of Archibald Irwin, of Mercersburgh, Pa. Benjamin was the second son of this marriage. In early childhood he was placed under private instruction at home. In 1847 he and his elder brother were sent to a school at College Hill, Cincinnati. He remained there two years, entered Miami university at Oxford, O., and graduated there in 1852. He was married in 1853 to Caroline Scott, daughter of Dr. John W. Scott, who was then president of the Oxford female seminary, from which Mrs. Harrison graduated in 1852. After studying law under Storer and Gwynne at Cincinnati he was admitted to the bar in 1854 and began the practice of his profession at Indianapolis, Ind., which has since been his home. A United States district court clerk gave him desk room and soon afterward Harrison was appointed reporter of the federal courts at a salary of $2.50 a day—the first money Harrison earned.

Jonathan Gordon, one of the leaders of the Indianapolis bar, called young Harrison to his assistance in the prosecution of a man charged with burglary, and intrusted to him the plea for the state. Harrison could not read his notes to the court and jury by the dim candle light. He laid aside the notes and trusted to his memory. It served him well. He made an eloquent plea and won his case. Since then he has always been an impromptu speaker. Forming a law partnership with William Wallace, he prepared deeds, made collections, tried cases before justices of the peace, appeared in the probate courts and sometimes in the circuit courts. By a majority of 9,633 he was chosen reporter of the supreme court of Indiana on the republican ticket in 1860. This was his first active appearance in politics. At the outbreak of the civil war Harrison assisted in raising the 70th Indiana volunteers. He became its second lieutenant, although Gov. Morton tendered him its command. Being an army officer, Harrison had to resign his civil position. A democrat was elected reporter of the supreme court, but in 1864 Harrison was re-elected to the position by an overwhelming majority. When Harrison returned to Indianapolis after the war he became a member of the law firm of Porter, Harrison & Fishback, and after subsequent changes, that of Harrison, Miller & Elam. His biographer holds that before his election to the presidency he had served his way to the head of the Indiana bar.

Gen. Harrison's military record is good. In 1862 he was made colonel of the 70th Indiana regiment. In 1864 he was placed in command of a brigade.

At the close of the war he took part in the grand army review at Washington, where he was mustered out in June, 1865, not, however, until he had received a commission as brevet brigadier general, signed by Lincoln, and stating that it was given for "ability and manifest energy and gallantry in command of the brigade."

In 1876 he was defeated for governor, leading his ticket, however, by almost 2,000 votes. In 1880 as chairman of the Indiana delegation to the republican national convention he cast nearly the entire vote of his state for Garfield for president. Harrison declined a place in Garfield's cabinet, preferring the United States senatorship, to which he had just been chosen. This he held from 1881 to 1887.

On the eighth ballot of the national republican convention at Chicago, in June, 1888, Harrison was nominated for the presidency. The following November he was elected. He received 233 votes in the electoral college to 168 for Cleveland.

In 1892 Harrison was renominated for the presidency, but was defeated at the election. He received 145 electoral votes to 277 for Cleveland.

President Harrison was distinguished as a lawyer and constitutionalist. He was also a prominent figure in the Presbyterian church, having been several times a member of the general assembly. He was the author of "This Country of Ours."

A few years ago President Harrison married a second time, and is survived by his widow and a child now about three years of age.

A HOME TRIBUTE.

Bowed, midst a universal grief that makes
Columbia's self a stricken mourner, sad,
In tears beneath the old flag at half mast,
A sense of glory rouses us and breaks
Like song upon sorrowing, and shakes
The dew up from our drenched eyes that smile at last
In childish pride—as though the great man passed
To his most high reward for our poor sakes.
Loved of all men—we muse—yet ours he was—
Choice of the Nation's mighty brotherhood—
Her soldier, statesman, ruler—aye, but then,
We knew him—lo—before the world's applause.
And after—as a neighbor, kind and good
Our common friend and fellow-citizen.

THE DUTY OF MOTHERS.

What suffering frequently results from a mother's ignorance; or more frequently from a mother's neglect to properly instruct her daughter!

Tradition says "woman must suffer," and young women are so taught. There is a little truth and a great deal of exaggeration in this. If a young woman suffers severely she needs treatment, and her mother should see that she gets it.

Many mothers hesitate to take their daughters to a physician for examination; but no mother need hesitate to write freely about her daughter or herself to Mrs. Pinkham and secure the most efficient advice without charge. Mrs. Pinkham's address is Lynn, Mass.

MISS PAULGRAF

Mrs. August Pfalzgraf, of South Byron, Wis., mother of the young lady whose portrait we here publish, wrote Mrs. Pinkham in January, 1899, saying her daughter had suffered for two years with irregular menstruation—had headache all the time, and pain in her side, foot swell, and was generally miserable. Mrs. Pinkham promptly replied with advice, and under date of March, 1899, the mother writes again that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured her daughter of all pains and irregularity.

Nothing in the world equals Mrs. Pinkham's great medicine for regulating woman's peculiar monthly troubles.

ALARMING MORTALITY.

Noticeable Among the Weak and Ailing.

Spring the Time Death Reaps Its Largest Harvest.

There is a Way of Eluding the Grim Destroyer.

Every Spring it is noticeable how many people are taken away that we have been accustomed to see in our daily life.

Statistics show that at no other season of the year does so many deaths occur.

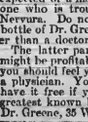
Especially large is the mortality among weak and sickly people.

The reason for this is apparent. The body that is weakened by age or disease has much to contend with during the Winter months. Insufficient exercise frequently has been taken. Too much starchy and fatty food have been eaten. The system has been allowed to become run down, and when Spring comes with its bright, sunshiny days, older people will begin to realize that their vitality has become very low. The same thing is true of people who are naturally sickly and weak.

This is the season of the year when even a strong person feels at his worst. That tired, restless feeling is experienced by too many.

There need no be as many deaths this year as usually take place. A little care on the part of many Spring funerals. If one is weak or ailing they should take time by the forelock and take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. This great medicine has been in many cases, and will continue to be, the means by which the black angel of Death has been driven from the threshold. It dispels the grim destroyer in a scientific way, for it purifies the blood and gives strength and vitality to the nerves. It tones up and restores to a healthy condition all of the great life-giving organs of the body.

Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy will enable those who take it to throw off little ills that prove dangerous only when they attack a system already wasted and weakened.



From many people, who have experienced benefit from this greatest of all life-lengthening men, ben the following from the famous General Logistics of 1217 New Hampshire Ave., Washington, D. C. He says:

"It gives me great pleasure to add my testimony with many others for Dr. Greene's Remedy, which I have used with highly beneficial results, and I am able to recommend its virtues from experience. I have used it for catarrh and have derived help."

Mr. Wellington Hynes, Elizabethtown, N.Y., writes:

"I feel it my duty to tell how much good Dr. Greene's Nervura has done me. I was so run down that I could not sleep at night and everything worried me. I had no appetite and could not work, my head ached all the time and there was an all-gone feeling in my stomach, and I was always looking on the dark side of everything. I began to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy and in less than three weeks I felt like a new man. I can now do as much work or as is expected of a man of my age. I advise anyone who is troubled to take Dr. Greene's Nervura. Do not go to a doctor, but get a bottle of Dr. Greene's Nervura. It is cheaper than a doctor's bill."

The latter part of Mr. Hynes's advice might be profitably disregarded, however, if you should feel you would like the advice of a physician. You can have such advice and have it free if you will write or call on the greatest known blood and nerve specialist, Dr. Greene, 35 W. 14th St., New York City.

THE AMERICAN TROOPS

Gen. Chaffee Receives Orders to Evacuate China.

All Stores and Supplies Not Required for the Legation Guards Will Be Disposed of to the Best Advantage.

Washington, March 16.—An order was sent to Gen. Chaffee for the evacuation of China by American troops, leaving only a legation guard of 150 men. The troops will be removed from China the last of April.

The dispatch to Gen. Chaffee in Peking is as follows:

"Adjutant General's Office, March 15.—Chaffee, Peking: In reply to your telegram secretary of war directs you complete arrangements sail for Manila with your command and staff officers by end April, leaving as legation guard infantry company composed of 150 men, having at least one year to serve or those intending re-enlist, with full complement officers, medical officer, sufficient hospital corpsmen, and, if you think best, field officer especially qualified to command guard. Retain and instruct officer quartermaster's department proceed to erect necessary buildings for guard according to plan and estimates you approve.

"Col. Chas. F. Humphrey on arrival will make an inspection of quartermaster's department, Philippine islands, until July 1, when he will be assigned to duty as chief quartermaster at Manila and Miller ordered to the United States. All stores, supplies not required for legation guard to be disposed of, in your best judgment, of course; serviceable supplies needed in the Philippine islands will be sent to Manila. Division of the Philippines will furnish supplies for legation guard. MacArthur notified.

"CORBIN."

It was said at the war department that this clears up the Chinese situation so far as the war department is concerned, as the protection of the legation can in no sense be taken as occupation of Chinese territory, and the guard can not be used for any other purpose.

FIRE IN THE WHITE HOUSE.

Flames Discovered in the Inaugural Reviewing Grand Stand, But Soon Extinguished.

Washington, March 16.—An alarm of fire was turned in from the white house about 7 o'clock Friday night for flames discovered in the inaugural reviewing grand stand, at the northwest corner of the grounds, surrounding the mansion, caused considerable excitement in that section of the city. The white house, Pennsylvania avenue and the state, war and navy departments building were brilliantly illuminated for a brief time before the fire was extinguished. The damage was small.

The house bill levied a tax of 20 cents per gallon, but the senate reduced the rate to 10 cents per gallon. The house, it is predicted, will concur in the amendment.

It is estimated that the bill will raise $150,000 in revenue annually.

THE RAILWAY DISPUTE.

Russian and British Troops on Each Side of the Line.

French Forbidden to Enter the British Concession Unless on Duty—Thirty Robbers Captured by German Detachment.

Tien-Tsin, March 18.—There is no change in the situation developed by the Anglo-Russian railway dispute here. The Russian and British forces are still represented by small detachments with officers, encamped on opposite sides of the railway siding. The utmost friendliness is exhibited toward each other by the opposing parties, but as a measure of precaution the guards have been reduced to 27 on each side in order to prevent any possible collision during the negotiations. A Russian general arrived from Peking Saturday evening. Owing to the persistent rowdyism of French soldiers in the British concession, the British authorities have been reluctantly compelled to forbid the French to enter the concession unless on duty. Maj. Hockler, of the British forces, was assaulted Sunday afternoon in the French concession.

Peking, March 18.—The health of Li Hung Chang is again a matter of grave consideration to the ministers of the powers. Mr. Rockhill, the American special commissioner, who visited Earl Li Saturday, says he is a physical wreck and apparently in a state of utter collapse, although mentally as bright as ever. Mr. Rockhill would not be surprised to hear of his death at any moment.

The removal of Li Hung Chang by death or any other cause at the present moment would be very unfortunate. M. De Giers, Russian minister, said Sunday: "Li Hung Chang is a great diplomat, and his influence with the Chinese court is absolutely unique. No other man in China approaches him in this respect. This influence is not temporary, but it is particularly effective at important moments in the history of China like the present."

Senor De Cologan, Spanish minister and doyen of the diplomatic corps, said: "The Chinese court could not appoint a plenipotentiary of the same caliber and having equal influence with the Chinese and the foreigners. Although many of the ministers of the powers object to his political methods and regard him as essentially a trimmer, nevertheless they all realize that he is the possible man to represent China in the present emergency."

Orders have been received by the United States troops to depart next month, leaving behind only 150 infantry. The German headquarter's staff assert that these instructions are a "great mistake," alleging that it is necessary to retain a large body of foreign troops in the country for at least two years. Most of the ministers, however, take a different view of the matter, believing that the best course is to retain a few of the troops of each nation and withdraw the rest.

NOT SERIOUSLY WOUNDED.

Rodays Will Not Die From the Wound Received in His Duel With Castellane.

Paris, March 18.—M. De Rodays is slowly recovering from his wound received in his duel with Count Boni De Castellane. The ball has not yet been extracted from his hip, but will be in a couple of days. The complete absence of fever justifies the hope that in eight or ten days De Rodays will be completely recovered. The count escaped without a scratch. On De Roday's exclaiming, "I am struck," the count approached the wounded man and said: "Are you wounded?" "Not too much," said the editor. De Castellane then held out his hand which De Rodays took.

CIVIL GOVERMENT SOON.

Judge Wm. H. Taft Will Become Governor General of the Philippines by May 15.

Washington, March 18.—When civil government is instituted in the Philippines, the Ohio man, as usual, will play an important part. Judge W. H. Taft, of Cincinnati, will be governor general; Gen. Adna R. Chaffee, who was born a Buckeye, will be in command of the military forces, and his chief-of-staff will be Col. H. O. S. Heistand, an old Union county man.

The new civil government is to be inaugurated by the 15th of May.

By that time the president and secretary of war will have adopted a form of government based upon a plan now being prepared by the Philippine commission.

Death of Rev. Elijah Kellogg.

Harpswell, Me., March 18.—Rev. Elijah Kellogg, author and preacher, whose fame rested on his books for boys and his composition, "Spartacus to the Gladiators," which nearly every school boy has learned at some time, died at his home Sunday in his 88th year.

Alabama's Speed.

Washington, March 18.—The report of the trial board of the battleship Alabama says the horse power developed was 7,506, and the speed was 15.2 knots.

"MY, HOW GREAT HE HAS GROWN!"

THE EMPEROR OF CUBA.

For the Pirates are victorious and Freedom's on the rack;
Paint out the stars that floated once so proudly overhead
And fly the skull and cross-bones as our emblem there instead.
For the Emperor of Cuba in McKinley's person stands
And the good ship Constitution now lies rotting on the sands.
Blot out the solemn compact for a dirty dollar's sake,
Since promises are pie-crust, and were merely made to break;
Send our soldiers and our sailors forth like cattle dumb to die
For a National dishonor, for the gloxing of a lie:
For the breaking of the Spanish chains new manacles we bring,
So that Cubans may be vassals, and McKinley may be King.
Was this the creed that Henry taught, that Washington upheld?
Is the light of Freedom's lamp within our breasts to be quelled?
Was it thus we gave our Volunteers, and wealth uncounted gave
To strike the festering fetters from the body of the slave?
Shall we set a Politician in a Martyr's honored place
And mock the shadow of Lincoln with our Country's black disgrace?
Was this the lesson taught us by snows of Valley Forge?
And shall we, later, imitate the tyranny of George?
Why, every man and all men are of right and should be free;
We clinched it on the battle fields, we proved it on the sea.
Shall the statue tail of Liberty be hurled adown the gates
While the shadow of Oppression in the empty spaces waits?
Forbid it God. The hour will come, and gathering legions swell,
Not all the gold of Midas and not all the hordes of Hell
Can stay the day when Freedom, bound, shall loose her shackled limbs
With the sky to send her teardrops down, the sea to sing her hymns.
And the memory of McKinley will be then, as it is now,
The emperor of Cuba, with a trade-mark on his brow.

—Ernest McGaffey.

THE QUESTION OF TRUSTS.

Republican Method of Doing Away with an Objectionable Measure.

It will be remembered that in December, 1899, Mr. McKinley suggested to congress the advisability of giving the people some relief on the trust question. Just before congress adjourned for the summer the republicans prepared a constitutional amendment which they pretended to believe would provide a remedy, but which, in fact, was intended to take away from the states the power which they already have to deal with this question. The democrats voted against the amendment, and the republicans then brought in an anti-trust bill, which was supported by both the republicans and democrats, and which was passed by an almost unanimous vote. It went to the senate, and there it lies buried. When congress reassembled last December no effort was made to resurrect this bill. The election was over, the purpose of the bill was accomplished and the republican senators were indifferent to it. If a tithe of the energy which has been wasted on the subsidy bill had been devoted to the anti-trust bill it would have passed the senate long ago.

Congressman Babcock has introduced a measure abolishing duties on certain iron and steel products, being prompted to do so by the formation of the billion-dollar steel trust. The Kansas City platform contains the following plank: "The tariff laws should be amended by putting the products of trusts upon the free list, to prevent monopoly under the plea of protection." Mr. Babcock is therefore carrying out a plank of the democratic platform, and the democrats will doubtless give him all the assistance possible. But as the republican platform did not commend this remedy, and as the republican leaders do not favor any remedy at all, Mr. Babcock is likely to find himself as unpopular among his republican colleagues as Mr. Littlefield was when he opposed the Porto Rican bill, or Mr. McCall was when he denounced the army bill. The republican who does not recognize the insincerity of republican promises upon the trust question must be blind indeed.—The Commoner.

——"The country," says a protectionist organ, "that tries to shut out American manufactures handicaps itself in the industrial race. A policy of that kind substitutes something inferior for the best and cheapest." But why is it such a mistake for other countries to shut out our cheap things by protection when we maintain the system for the special purpose of shutting out from us the cheap things of other nations?—Louisville Courier-Journal.

——It may be doubtful whether talking about it will bring about democratic reunion, and put the party again in shape to win victories; but there is a general disposition to give attentive ear to all suggestions made in that direction. And quietly, just as the little leaven leavens the whole lump, the work of democratic rehabilitation is going on, all over the United States—the fruits whereof, we believe, will ere long be apparent. —Albany Argus.

SUGAR TRUST'S POWER.

Evidence of a Master Hand in the Calamitous Action Towards Russia.

In the resolution adopted by the Illinois Manufacturers' association condemning Secretary of the Treasury Gage for imposing a countervailing duty on Russian sugar there is a clear statement of the cost of this action in its bearing on American exports to Russia.

The Illinois resolution declares that the duty on Russian sugar is calculated to sacrifice an American export business amounting to more than $30,000,000. In contrast to this sacrifice at the expense of American shippers it calls attention to the fact that the total imports of sugar from Russia amounted to but $240,000 in 1900.

Additional warrant for criticism of Secretary Gage's action is found in the claim that Russia's system of encouraging her beet sugar industry by limiting the production and fixing the price does not amount to the payment of a bounty—the only contingency justifying the American countervailing duty. It is declared that not one cent is paid out from the Russian treasury to Russian sugar growers.

What is the secret of this government's haste to impose a duty upon Russian sugar, even at so great cost to the general American export trade? Is it found in the news announcement that "the sugar monopolists of this country have filled Secretary Gage's ear with their own special views, and in their interests?" Has the sugar trust been potent to dictate this calamitous action, as it was potent to compel a violation of the constitution by the passage of the Porto Rican tariff bill? Thoughtful Americans will be inclined to probe this matter to the bottom. It may be worth while to know just how completely the McKinley administration is dominated by the sugar trust in matters affecting the trust monopoly.—St. Louis Republic.

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

GREATEST OF THEM ALL.

Charley Herr's Owner Throws Down the Gauntlet to Owners of Other Fast Trotters.

Lexington, Ky., March 16.—"Uncle David" Cahill, the dairyman, owner of Charley Herr, thrown down the gauntlet to the millionaire owners of Cresceus, Boralma and The Abbot, going them one better than any proposition for a match race yet made.

He suggests the following proposition:

"Offer a purse, say of $40,000, with $10,000 entrance fee, free for all, dividing the money, as is the custom in stake races, if there are more than four starters, or in three moneys in case of only four starters. Charley Herr would be a starter in such a race if only any one of the other great horses start. He says he will race Charley Herr against Boralma on Labor day at Hartford, or he will race all three of the horses named by Andy Welsh in his proposition for a purse of $20,000 for a four-cornered race, with $12,500 a corner, but that he will not race Charley Herr against Boralma, the winner to race against either The Abbot or Cresceus in the same week. His reason is that it would be an unfair race and might be too severe a task for one horse.

WHITES AND GARRARDS.

Peace Measures Have Been Signed Between the Fendists—They Will Submit to the Law.

London, Ky., March 14.—The report reached here Wednesday evening that peace measures have been signed between the Whites and Garrards, of Clay county.

The best citizens of Clay county have been working to this end for about ten days. Negotiations were commenced Monday but no agreement could be reached on that day, because the Whites wanted the Garrards to give up some parties whose bonds they had signed; also that the Garrards go no more bonds, but this the Garrards refused to do, stating that the parties on whose bonds they were are their friends and they would not go back on them. These requests were left out on Tuesday and an agreement was reached by which both sides will lay down their arms and submit to the law.

There is general rejoicing throughout Clay county that this truce has been made.

Broadway Roller Mills and Residence Destroyed, Entailing a Loss of $14,000.

Bardstown, Ky., March 16.—The Broadway roller mills, one of the finest equipped plants of the kind in this section of the state, was completely destroyed by fire Friday morning. The origin of the fire is not known. The mill was the property of D. J. Wood, C. T. Atkinson and George W. Beam, and the loss is estimated at upwards of $14,000, with insurance of nearly $11,000. In addition to the mill the residence of Mr. George Beam and the large grain elevator containing about 5,000 bushels of wheat, were burned. The wind was blowing from the southwest, which saved the town from entire destruction.

The town has about 2,500 inhabitants and without fire protection.

Firemen from Louisville are on the way to Cloverport. The origin of the fire is not known. It broke out in the residence of H. A. Oelze, in the central part of the city. He Tendered His Resignation to the County Judge of Clay County, Which Was Accepted.

This was a part of the peace agreement to be carried out by White. As soon as White's resignation was accepted, County Judge Wright appointed D. L. Walker to fill the vacancy. Walker is the man who acted as peacemaker between the factions. He is a young man 30 years old, and has never been connected with any of the troubles in Clay county, and is a friend to both factions, and is liked by both sides. His appointment gives general satisfaction throughout the county. Sheriff White immediately after resigning sold his Manchester property to Sheriff Walker and will make his futre home in Winchester.

The following letter was written by Albert Ingram, who is a soldier in the Philippines, to his mother. It was mailed at Manila, January 25th, and was received by Mrs. Ingram, March 6. He writes: "I suppose you think my letters are few and far between, but it is within five days of two months since we have had a boat at our landing and no prospect of one before March. We are entirely out off from the world; we don't know even what is going on on the Island; we don't even know who is President of the United States. It has been two months since I saw a white man except the 2 company of soldiers.

The day before Christmas a party of F. Co.'s men went out to get some chickens for dinner and were attacked; we heard the shots and the call to arms sounded and in thirty minutes we were a mile and a half from quarters, fighting like the dickens, there were between 20 and 30 natives killed; F Co., lost one man, who was drowned while crossing the river—that makes four men that company has lost. We have not lost a man as yet. There are seventy men from the two companies in the hospital unfit for duty, but those of us who have not been sick to amount to anything, are standing it all right.

Now, I don't know whether you will get this letter or not for a Chinaman is going to take our mail across the mountains to Manila and we have no stamps and are sending them without. Everybody is writing.

You must address my letters to Manila. It is hard to tell where I will be when you write again. I do hope you are all as well as I am, and getting along alright. Tell Dad to keep well till I come back. This is all the paper I have. Write to me as often as you can and tell me all the news."

In renewing his subscription to the RECORDER, Mr. L. J. Setters, of Nashville, Tenn., says: "We appreciate the paper more than any paper or periodical that comes to our house. We look forward with pleasure each week to the day when we can get it from the postoffice. It carries us back to Old Kentucky, to the neighbors and and friends of days gone by. It keeps us in touch with the doings of those we knew and loved. Now and then our hearts are saddened by notices of the departure of some of those friends to the Great Beyond. Senator Reuben Conner is gone, Harry Baker, Uncle John Beall, Charlie Schramm, and many others. These were good men—honest, upright, charitable, and we do not know whether Boone would look the same to us if we were to go back, and miss their faces and the shake of their hands. Although it is years since we moved away, and death has claimed some of our best friends, and, notwithstanding the fact that we have prospered in Tennessee, yet our heart turns back occasionally to those of our friends who still live in Boone county, and we long at times, to see them, and to say "howdy;" "how are you doing?"

I see my son Jim is asking the people to honor him with the office of Assessor. Of conrse, I am partial to Jim, for he is bone of my bone and flesh of my flesh, but I want to say this, and I say it unhesitatingly, for I know the boy, and he takes after his mother; his mother was a good woman, as good as ever lived. If the people of Boone honor Jim Setters with the position he seeks, my word for it, he will discharge the duties of his office without fear and without favor, and if he ever makes a mistake—and he is but human, and all men are liable to mistakes at some time—it will be a mistake of the head and not of his heart, and I want to ask those who were friends of mine in days gone by, for my sake and for Jim's sake, to give him their support, and there will be no cause to regret it in the hereafter. His opponents are gentlemen, Democrats and worthy Democrats, and I have not a word to say derogatory to the claims of any of them. It is not that I love them less, but that I love Jim more.

The winter has been exceedingly mild, and from accounts which I notice, we have not suffered as much from that scourge, grip, as the people in other sections of our country.

Nashville is growing—the old Volunteer State is growing, and will maintain her place in the future as she has in the past, in honor among the sisterhood of states.

And now wishing you and all my friends in Boone county, prosperity, success and long and happy lives, I am Your friend, L. J. SETTERS

MISSION OF INKHORN

Power for Good or Evil Its Contents May Wield.

Dr Talmage Discourses on Influences Brought to Bear for World's Improvement—The Inkhorn of God's Mercy.

(Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.)

In a new way and from a peculiar text Dr. Talmage discourses of good influences brought to bear for the world's improvement. The text is Ezekiel 9:2: "And one man among them was clothed with linen, with a writer's inkhorn by his side."

The poem from which my text is taken is epic, lyric, dramatic, weird and overpowering. It is more than Homeric or Dantesque. No one ever had such divine dreams as Ezekiel. In a vision this prophet had seen wrathful angels, destroying angels, each with a sword, but in my text he sees a merciful angel with an inkhorn. The receptacle for the ink in olden time was made out of the horn of a cow or a ram or a roebuck, as now it is made out of metal or glass, and therefore was called the inkhorn, as now we say inkstand. We have all spoken of the power of the sword, of the power of wealth, of the power of office, of the power of social influence, but to-day I speak of the power for good or evil in the inkstand. It is upon your tables, holding a black or blue or red liquid. It is a fortress, an armory, a gateway, a ransom or a demolition. "You mistake," says some one; "it is the pen that has the power." No my friend. What is the influence of a dry pen? Pass it up and down a sheet of paper, and it leaves no mark. It expresses no opinion. It gives no warning. It spreads no intelligence. It is the liquid which the pen dips out of the inkstand that does the work. Here and there a celebrated pen, with which a Declaration of Independence or a Magna Charta or a treaty was signed has been kept in literary museum or national archives, but for the most part the pens, whether, as of old, made out of reed or still later of wing of bird or still later of metallic substance, have disappeared, while the liquid which the pens took from the inkstand remains in scrolls which, if put together, would be large enough to enwrap the world. For practical, for moral, for religious, for eternal purposes, I speak of the mission of "the writer's inkhorn."

First, I mention that which is purely domestic. The inkstand is in every household. It awaits the opportunity to express affection or condolence or advice. Father uses it; mother uses it; the sons and daughters use it. It tells the home news; it announces the marriage, the birth, the departure, the accident, the last sickness, the death. That home inkstand, what a mission it has already executed, and what other mission will it yet fulfill! May it stand off from all insincerity and all querulousness. Let it tell only that which it would be well to read after the hand that wrote it and the hand that received it can write no more. Dip out of that inkstand only that which is paternal, maternal, filial, sisterly, brotherly. Sacred let it be not to what are sometimes called the "household gods," but to Jehovah and the only God who "setteth the solitary in families." Dip out of it solace for parents on the descending grade of years and encouragement for those who are climbing the steeps.

Furthermore, the inkstand of the business man has its mission. Between now and the hour of your demise, O commercial man, O professional man, there will not be a day when you cannot dip from the inkhorn a message that will influence temporal and eternal destiny. There is a rash young man running into wild speculation, and with as much ink as you can put on the pen at one time you may save him from the Niagara rapid of a ruined life. On the next street there is a young man started in business who, through lack of patronage or mistake in purchase of goods or want of adaptation, is on the brink of collapse. One line of ink from your pen will save him from being an underling all his life and start him on a career that will win him a fortune which will enable him to become an endower of libraries, an opener of art galleries and builder of churches.

Furthermore, great are the responsibilities of the author's inkhorn. All the people, or nearly all the people, read, and that which they read decides their morals or immorals, their prosperity or failure, their faith or their unbelief, their purity or corruption, their heaven or hell. Show me any man's library, great or small, and after examining the books, finding those with leaves uncut, but displayed for sake of the binding, and those worn with frequent perusal, and, without ever seeing the man or knowing his name, I will tell you his likes and his dislikes; his morals, good or bad or indifferent; his qualification for business or artistic or professional or mechanical life. The best index to any man's character is the book he prefers above all others. Oh, the power of a book for good or evil!

Abraham Lincoln in early life read Paine's "Age of Reason," and it so influenced him that he wrote an essay against Christianity, but afterward some Christian books came into his hands and gloriously changed his mind and made him a most ardent friend of the Bible and a man of prayer. A letter in Mr. Lincoln's own handwriting is in my house, the letter in response to some resolutions passed by a Methodist conference, saying: "In response to your address, allow me to attest the accuracy of its historical statements, indorse the sentiments it expresses and thank you in the nation's name for the sure promise it gives. Nobly sustained as the government has been by all the churches, I would utter nothing which might in the least appear invidious against any. Yet without this it may fairly be said that the Methodist Episcopal church, not less devoted than the best, is by its great numbers the most important of all. It is no fault in others that the Methodist church sends more soldiers to the field, more nurses to the hospital and more prayers to Heaven than any. God bless the Methodist church—bless all the churches—and blessed be God who in this our great trial giveth us the churches."

What a great thing it was that the Christian books which Mr. Lincoln read obliterated from his mind the infidel literature! William Carey became a missionary by reading "The Voyages of Captain Cook." John Wesley's life was shaped by reading Jeremy Taylor's "Holy Living and Dying." There are books in your library or lying on your parlor table or secreted in some place by your child that will decide for two worlds, this and the next, the character of its reader.

Through books we sit down and talk with the mightiest spirits of all the ages. We accompany Tennyson on his spring-time walk as he falls upon his knees in the meadows, crying to his companion: "Violets, man, violets! Smell them." Or we ride with Trajan in his triumphal march, or stand with Godfrey at the taking of Jerusalem, or with arctic explorer hear the crash of the icebergs, or are received with Hernando Cortes in the halls of Montezuma, or watch in the observatory as Herschel with his telescope captures another star, or the ink in the inkhorn turns red as blood, and we are at Marengo and Arbela and Eylau and Borodino and Leipsic; or we sail with Hamilcar from Carthage to Palermo, or we see Galileo fighting for the solar system, and around us gather for conversation Aristotle and Plato and Robert South and Sydney Smith and Locke and Samuel Rogers and Chaucer and Paul Richter and Swift and Hazlitt and Leigh Hunt and Talleyrand and Burke and Edward Irving, while to make music for us Handel and Mozart and Mendelssohn come in, and we watch Columbus landing and see John Harvard's legacy of £900 paid over for the founding of Harvard university, and Joshua Reynolds and David Wilkie and Rembrandt tell us of their pictures. Oh, the books! Thank God for the books, and thanks be to all the authors! May the inkhorn ever be under divine inspiration!

A wrong theory is abroad that the newspaper impression is ephemeral. Because we read and cast it aside in an hour and never see it again we are not to judge that we are parted from its influence. No volume of 500 pages makes such impression upon the people as the daily newspaper. It is not what we put away carefully upon the shelf and once in awhile refer to that has as close relation to our welfare as the story of what the world is now doing or has recently done. Yesterday has more to do with to-day than something occurring a century previous. The engineers who now guide the rail trains, the sea captains who now command the ships, the architects who now design the buildings, the batons that now control the orchestras, the legislators who now make the laws, the generals who now marshal the hosts, the rulers who now govern the nations, the inkhorns that now flood the world with intelligence—these are what we have most to do with.

You have all seen what is called indelible ink, which is a weak solution or silver nitrate, and that ink you cannot rub out or wash out. Put it there, and it stays. Well, the liquid of the editorial and reportorial inkstands is an indelible ink. It puts upon the souls of the passing generations characters of light or darkness that time cannot wash out and eternity cannot efface. Forever indelible. Be careful how you use it. The impression made with it will be resplendent or repulsive on the day for which all other days were made.

But how shall I speak of the inkhorn of the world's evangelization? Oh, how may loving and brilliant and glorious pens have been dipped into it! Thomas a Kempis dipped into it and brought up his "Imitation of Christ." Horace Bushnell dipped into it and brought up "Every Man's Life a Plan of God." Thomas Binney dipped into it and brought up his "Weigh House Chapel Discourses." Conybeare dipped into it and brought up the "Life and Epistles of Paul." Archbishop Trench dipped into it and brought up the "Epistles to the Seven Churches." Stuart Robinson dipped into it and brought up "Discourses of Redemption." Austin Phelps dipped into it and brought up "The Still Hour." Mary Hopkins dipped into it and brought up "Evidences of Christianity." Thomas Guthrie dipped into it and brought up "The Gospel in Ezekiel." John Cumming dipped into it and brought up "The Apocalypse." Oh, the opulence of Christian literature! Oh, the mighty streams of evangelistic power that have poured from the writer's inkhorn that appeared in Ezekiel's vision!

While you recognize the distinguished ones who have dipped into the inkstand of the world's evangelization do not forget that there are hundreds of thousands of unknown men and women who are engaged in inconspicuous ways doing the same thing! How many anxious mothers writing to the boys in town! How many sisters writing encouragement to brothers far away! How many invalids bolstered up in bed, the inkhorn on the stand at their side, writing letters of condolence to those worse off than themselves! They are flying all the time kind words, gospel words, helpful words, saving words. Call the evangelistic inkhorn into service in the early morning, when you feel well and you are grateful for the protection during your sleeping hours, and write before you retire at close of day to those who all night long will be saying: "Would to God it were morning!" How many bruised and disappointed and wronged souls of earth would be glad to get a letter from you! Stir up that consolatory inkhorn.

All Christendom has been waiting for great revivals of religion to start from the pulpits and prayer meetings. I now suggest that the greatest revival of all time may start a concerted and organized movement through the inkhorns of all Christendom, each writer dipping from the inkhorn nearest him a letter of gospel invitation, gospel hope, gospel warning, gospel instruction. The ink is all ready on a hundred thousand tables, and beside it are the implements with which to dip it out. Why not, through such process, have millions of souls brought to God before next summer? By letter you could make the invitation more effective than by word of mouth. The invitation from your lips may be argued back, may evoke querulous reply, may be answered by a joke, but a good, warm, gospel letter, written in prayer and started with prayer and followed by prayer, will be read over and over again and cannot be answered in a frivolous way. It will speak from the table by day and night or, if pettishly torn up, will, in its scattered fragments, speak louder than when it remained whole. Within arm's reach of where you sit there may be a fluid that you may put on wing with message of light and love.

The other angels spoken of in my text were destroying angels, and each had what the Bible calls a "slaughter weapon" in his hand. It was a lance or a battleax or a sword. God hasten the time when the last lance shall be shivered and the last battleax dulled and, the last sword sheathed, never again to leave the scabbard, and the angel of the text who, Matthew Henry says, was the Lord Jesus Christ, shall, from the full inkhorn of His mercy, give a saving call to all nations. That day may be far off, but it is helpful to think of its coming. As Dr. Raleigh declared that when 50 miles at sea off the coast of New England the cattle on board the ship, as well as himself, scented the clover on the New England hills, so we, amid all the tossing waves of the world's controversies, inhale the redolence of the white lilies of universal peace. Is it not time that the boasted invention of new and more explosive and more widely devastating weapons of death be stopped forever and the Gospel have a chance and the question be not asked: "How many shots can be fired in a minute?" but "How many souls may be ransomed in a day?" The world needs less powder and more grace, fewer fortresses and more churches, less power to destroy and more power to save. Oh, I am sick of the war cries and the extinguished eyesight and the splintered bones and the grave trenches and the widowhood and orphanage and childlessness which sob and groan and die in the wake of the armies on both sides of the sea! Oh, for less of the slaughter weapon and more of the evangelizing inkhorn! Oh, for the stopping of the science of assassination, that crime of crimes, that woe of woes, that horror of horrors, that hell of hells—war, which this moment stands reeking with blood and washing itself in tears and blaspheming the heavens and pushing off the edge of this life men who have as much right to live as you and I have and blasting homes in which there dwells as much loveliness as in our own! Would that the merciful angel of my text take the last weapon of war and fling it off and fling it down with such force that it shall clang on the lowest round of the perdition where the first keen edge of human strife was sharpened! Our! In the name of Almighty God and of all the homestands it has destroyed and is now destroying, I hate it, I denounce it, I curse it!

If our Bible is true—and no other book that was ever printed is as true as that book, which Moses began and John finished—then the time will come when all the weapons of cruelty will stop and the inkhorns of evangelization will have their way. In the museums of the world the carbine and the cannon and the bomb will be kept as curiosities, and children will be incredulous as parents tell them that civilized nations once employed such instruments of death and more incredulous when told by their parents that the army that killed the most men was considered the most glorious army. The red horse of carnage that St. John saw in vision, and the black horse of famine, and the pale horse of death will be stabled, and the white horse of prosperity and peace, mounted by the King of Kings, will lead the great army with banners. Through the convicting, converting, sanctifying power of the Eternal Spirit may we all march in that procession! Hail, thou Mighty Rider of the white horse in the final triumph! Sweep down and sweep by, thou Angel of the New Covenant, with the inkhorn of the world's evangelization! "The mountains and the hills shall break forth into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands. Instead of the thorn shall come up the fir tree, and instead of the brier shal come up the myrtle tree and it shall be to the Lord for a name, for an everlasting sign that shall not be cut off."

LEST WE FORGET.

Royal Pomp and Splendor of a Republican President's Induction Into Office.

President McKinley reviewed the inaugural parade from a magnificent court of honor which stretched its stately length along Pennsylvania avenue in Washington for a distance of several blocks, covering the front of the United States treasury, the white house, the state, war and navy buildings.

It was an imposing spectacle, this great stage picture of the president reviewing the impressive pageant organized in his honor. The written description of the march past the chief executive of the nation reads like the accounts of the surpassingly splendid pomp that marked the celebration of the late Queen and Empress Victoria's diamond jubilee in royal England. The total cost of Mr. McKinley's second inauguration as president of the United States is estimated at $4,230,000.

There were colonial troops in the American pageant as in the English, typifying the world-power of America as of Great Britain, indicating the "far-flung battle line" of a republic that has gone into the empire business—the subjugation and forcible government of weaker peoples. For the first time in American history colonial dependencies were represented in the most characteristic ceremony of American national life. The colonial troops in the president's inaugural parade hailed from the helpless little island which is being governed in the interest of the sugar trust.

Yes, it was imposing. The great republic of Rome delighted in such spectacles in the days when it had ceased to be a republic, save in name. It, also, spent millions for spectacular effect, and included its conquered peoples in the columns passing in review. The American spectacle of March 4 would not have been possible in the earlier and simpler days of our republic. Neither is it possible under a faithful maintenance of the principles that prevailed in those earlier and simpler days.—St. Louis Republic.

NOTHING IMPRESSIVE.

The President's Inaugural Address Contained Nothing of Much Weight.

The inaugural address of a president who succeeds himself in the executive office can never pique curiosity or reward study like that of one who enters the white house for the first time, or who returns to it after an absence of four years, as Mr. Cleveland did in 1893. This would be true of any man who had been in Mr. McKinley's place during the past four years. But it is peculiarly true of the present incumbent that he could not say anything at the beginning of a second term which would strongly impress the nation. The trouble is that four years of experience has demonstrated that words count for but little in his case. It was William McKinley who told congress that it was "our plain duty" to grant Porto Rico free trade, and it was William McKinley also who, a few weeks later, used all the power and patronage of the executive to force through congress a Porto Rican tariff. After that performance nothing that Mr. McKinley could say would ever carry much weight with a country which had learned that the important thing was what he would do.—N. Y. Post.

Serious But Ridiculous.

There is a delicious ingenuousness about the president's inaugural address which compels one to believe that Mr. McKinley was serious when he wrote it. Certainly no man with a keen sense of the ridiculous could have written it. As for the Philippines, the president is as optimistic and as benevolent as a rural evangelist. "We are not waging war against the inhabitants of the Philippines. A portion of them are waging war against the United States." To be sure. The lamb will muddy the waters of our stream, and when he persists in doing it we must benevolently assimilate him. If people would only submit to us, there would be no trouble. There never would have been any trouble in the world if people had had the grace and intelligence to be submissive. If it had not been for evil-disposed persons the United States might be a British colony to-day, and Mr. Hay, for example, instead of eking out a painful existence in trying to give away the interests of the United States, might be sitting in the house of lords with the marquis of Salisbury or in the commons with Mr. Chamberlain.—Detroit Free Press.

——After our Cuban perjury it will be hard to maintain any longer that imperialism has anything to do with morals or religion. We shall have to go over frankly to the Bismarckian view that "principles" are as much out of place in politics as would be a pole held crossed in the mouth of a man trying to run rapidly along a narrow path in the woods. Good faith and honor must be discarded if we are to get on.—N. Y. Post.

——The republican papers seem to get a great deal of satisfaction out of remarking from time to time that the democratic party has been dead for 30 years at least, but the ghastly nightmares it gives them at every election time make one wonder what might happen if it should actually get alive again.—St. Paul Globe.

——The administration's regret over the enormous appropriations comes at about the same time as the regrets of the man who is spending the morning hours after the night before.—The Commoner.

LOYAL LITTLE AMERICAN.

Youthful Traveler's Enthusiasm Upon His Return from a Trip to Europe.

A teacher who spent her vacation abroad tells the following story:

One of her fellow passengers on the steamer that brought her home was a little boy about ten years old. As the steamer approached New York the child grew exitantly happy and every little while he would say: "We're almost home now." He talked of the various objects they passed as though he were really quite at home. Finally the teacher said: "Do you live in New York?"

"No," answered he. "I live in St. Paul, Minn."

Miss L—— remarked: "St. Paul? You are still a long way from home."

"This is just as good as home," said the loyal little fellow, "it's America."

The young traveler's patriotism so pleased the Columbus lady that she asked him about his travels and learned why he was so glad to see America, says the Presbyterian. He had been in Europe over six months, a part of which time had been spent in school in Sweden. He had seen much that was interesting in the different European countries, but was as pleased as he could possibly be on once more seeing his native land and stoutly declared that America was "the best country in the world."

FARMING IN WESTERN CANADA

What Has Been Done by Premier Greenway, Himself a Leading Farmer.

Hon. Thomas Greenway, Premier of the Province of Manitoba, one of the foremost farmers of Western Canada, writes an excellent article to the press, from which the following extracts are made:

The writer came to Manitoba from Ontario in the autumn of 1873, and has ever since been engaged in agricultural pursuits. From the day, nearly 22 years ago, when he selected his homestead, he has had unbounded faith in the country as a place where farming can be successfully carried on, if pursued upon proper lines. There is a large number in this Province who should rather be called "wheat-growers" than farmers. On account of the facilities, natural advantages, and therefore cheapness with which wheat can be grown, no doubt many have done exceedingly well by raising wheat only; still, it is far from ideal farming. Not only will such a course, if persisted in, have the effect of causing the land to run out, as has been the experience of those who pursued the same plan in the wheat-producing prairie States to the south of us, but it is far from being the most profitable course to adopt.

This fact is already being demonstrated in Manitoba. Let the farms in this western country be managed upon the lines which were successful in the Eastern Provinces, and much more can be done here in a given time than was ever done in the East. The probabilities of failure are practically nil. Upon the farm there should be found horses, cattle, sheep, hogs and poultry, according to the ability of the farmer—with respect to his means and the extent of his holding. The wanton waste which has hitherto been practiced by many farmers, that of burning vast quantities of excellent fodder after threshing is done, should cease; it should all be used upon the farm and converted into the old, sensible kind of fertilizer manure, and afterwards be returned to the soil, so that what has been taken from it by the crop may be restored. Although admitting that the great natural fertility of the soil in Manitoba and the success that has attended the growing of wheat for years upon the same land have a tendency to make such a course as the one mentioned tempting, yet, if continued, wheat-growing upon the same land year after year is undoubtedly a mistake.

The writer knows of no country that offers advantages so great to the agriculturist as does Manitoba. The various branches of farming can be carried on successfully, as twenty-two years of practical operations and observations of what others are doing have proven. To those desiring to make new homes for themselves, the low price of some of the best lands in the world (although rapidly advancing in price this year) offer still great opportunities. To all such the invitation is cordially given to "Come and See." There need be no poor people here. There is land for all who choose to come, land upon which happy homes can be established, and from which ample resources can be gathered against old age. All that a man needs to achieve competence in this domain is common-sense and industry. With these qualifications he is bound to succeed. For information regarding free homestead lands, apply to any agent of the government whose advertisement appears elsewhere in these columns.

Wonderful Yield of Spelts.

Blanchard Bros., Chaffee Co., Colo., write to the John A. Salzer Seed Co., La Crosse, Wis., who are the introducers of this remarkable grain and hay food, Spelts, saying: "We have just threshed 182 bus. of Salzer's Spelts from the 100 pounds of seed you sent us last spring. The neighbors all think it is wonderful. Nearly all of the 182 bus. sold at $2.00 for seed. Spelts and Alfalfa are our money makers." Every farmer should try a few acres of Spelts. Write to Salzer to-day. [K.]

Proof of the Pudding.

Ten hours between New York and Buffalo means excellent travelling and when I say I travelled at the rate of sixty miles an hour, gathered no dirt, and was not bothered with dust, you can believe me when I say my steel gray travelling costume was as clean when I stepped off at Buffalo as when I said "Au Revoir" at Hoboken.

The Lackawanna is a route worthy of the attention of all who wish to travel in luxury, in absolute cleanliness, and in security. The "proof of the pudding is in the eating," and the Lackawanna Limited will be a favorite train with ladies visiting the Pan-American Exposition.—Marie Jarboe, in Toilettes.

On the first and third Tuesdays of each month the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul Railway will sell round trip homeseekers tickets from Chicago, Milwaukee and other points on its line to a great many points in South Dakota, North Dakota and other Western and Northwestern States at about one fare. Take a trip west and see the wonderful crops and what an amount of good land can be purchased for a little money. AERIAL BRIDGE AT DULUTH.

Duluth, Minn., will build a bridge the like of which does not exist in America. Bids have been advertised, and the contract will probably be let in two or three weeks. The bridge will cross the ship canal at the entrance to Duluth harbor.

The conditions are peculiar. About 100 cargo ships pass through the canal daily, besides innumerable tugs, etc. A swing bridge would not be permitted by the government, and the Lake Carriers' association would bring pressure to bear against any kind that would hinder navigation. So the bridge is to be aerial, but is to carry a traveling car that will cross the 300-foot canal at street level every few minutes. This car will be swung from a truss 150 feet high, far enough up to clear the masts of the tallest ships. On the truss will be a carriage running on a track, and suspended from this carriage by wire ropes will be the bridge at the level of the adjoining streets. The carriage will be operated by electricity, and will cross very quickly. The car will be covered and comfortable.

The design is the invention of a French engineer, and a bridge similar in general plan is in use in Rouen. The one at Duluth will cost about $100,000, and while it will be erected and owned by private capital the city is to reserve the right to buy, and will operate it as a part of the municipal street system from the first.

NEW WATER-COLOR PROCESS.

Harvey Young, the artist of Rocky mountain fame, has discovered a new process for the preservation of water-color paintings. Mr. Young's process appears to be as simple as it is wonderful, and he claims that he is the sole possessor of the new system, says the Chicago Record. When treated by the process the paintings have every appearance of oil paintings.

This effect is produced by the use of ordinary pigment or colors mixed with water instead of oil, put on very thick and then varnished over several times with an alcohol varnish. The moisture of the pigment is entirely evaporated before the varnish is put on and then the ground work cannot be reached or affected by contact with the elements. Water-color paper is used instead of canvas, and it is pasted on thick pulp board. The pictures, it is said, can be washed at any time without injury.

A Lenten Vow.

The members of a young woman's club at Binghamton, N. Y., have vowed not to speak during Lent. Evidently, remarks the Chicago Times-Herald, they have concluded that none of the young men of Binghamton will be likely to want to talk business during the 40 days and 40 nights preceding Easter.

An Additional Hold-Up.

A sleeping car combine is talked of. This looks like an unnecessary bit of enterprise, says the Minneapolis Tribune, as the public now has about as few rights in a sleeping car, between the porter and the upper berth, as it can get along with and use the institution at all.

Pleased with His Lawyer.

"While I was in the state's attorney's office," said ex-Deputy State's Attorney William C. Smith, "I had to try a case against an otherwise honest German for selling liquor on Sunday. The defendant had retained a certain member of the bar who is noted for his high C voice. During this attorney's rather loud address his German client looked on in rapt admiration, and he was heard to remark:

"'Ach, dot's the kind of lawyer to haf, yet.'

"'Why?' he was asked.

"'Because,' was the reply, 'he hollers so loud he scares der jury.'"—Baltimore Sun.

AFTER-EFFECTS OF LA GRIPPE.

THE after-effects of the grip are often disastrous. It is commonly known to the medical fraternity that the numerous ailments and complications which follow the grip are apt to be more serious than the acute stage of the disease.

Some people have the grip very lightly. They may be confined to the house only a day or two and yet a long train of disagreeable, disabling symptoms follow. All sorts of tonics and stimulating remedies have been devised to meet this condition. None of them can compare in results with Peruna.

Every one who has had the grip ought to take a short course of Peruna. Read what the following people have to say about it.

Washington, Feb. 4, 1899.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:
Gentlemen—

Congressman Howard.

"I have taken Peruna now for two weeks, and find I am very much relieved. I feel that my cure will be permanent. I have also taken it for la grippe, and have pleasure in recommending Peruna as an excellent remedy to all fellow-sufferers." M. W. Howard.

Congressman Howard's home address is Fort Payne, Ala.

Grip Produces Catarrh.

Henry Distin, the inventor and maker of all the band instruments for the Henry Distin Mfg. Co., at Williamsport, Pa., writes:

1441 South Ninth Street,
Philadelphia, Pa., May 6, 1899.

Dr. S. B. Hartman, Dear Sir:—"I write to inform you that I had a bad attack of la grippe last December which lasted more than three months and which left me with catarrh, when several of my friends advised me to try your wonderful medicine, Peruna. I began with a bottle the first week in March and it certainly did me a great deal of good. I was so well satisfied that I purchased another bottle and followed your directions which you furnish with every bottle, and I am glad to say that it has cured me. I shall certainly recommend the Peruna to all my friends."

GRIP CAUSED NERVOUS DYSPEPSIA.

"Following a severe attack of la grippe, I seemed to be affected badly all over. I suffered with a severe backache, indigestion and numerous ills, so I could neither eat nor sleep, and I thought I would give up my work, which I could not afford to do.

"One of my customers who was greatly helped by Peruna advised me to try it, and I procured a bottle the same day. I used it faithfully and felt a marked improvement. During the next two months I took five bottles, and then felt splendid. Now my head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy food, and rest well. Peruna has been worth a dollar a dose to me."—D. L. Wallace.

Washington, April 24, 1900.
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:
Gentlemen—

Frances M. Anderson.

"About two months ago I was taken very ill with la grippe and was obliged to go to bed. I took three bottles of Peruna with very beneficial results and was able to leave my bed in a week, and regained my usual strength very soon. I have nothing but the highest praise for Peruna and recommend it to those similarly afflicted wherever I can."—Frances M. Anderson.

Grip Poisoned Her Blood.

Mrs. T. W. Collins, Treasurer of the Independent Order of Good Templars of Everett, Wash., writes:

"After having a severe attack of la grippe I continued in a feeble condition even after the doctor called me cured. My blood seemed poisoned.

"I also suffered with dyspepsia, and had either to starve or suffer from what I was eating. A neighbor who was using Peruna praised it so highly that she induced me to try it, and I soon found that this was what I really needed.

"I could soon eat my regular meals with relish, my system was built up, my health returned, and I have remained in excellent strength and vigor now for over two years."—Mrs. T. W. Collins.

Miss Alice Dressler, of 1213 N. Bryant avenue, Minneapolis, Minn., writes as follows concerning Peruna:

"Last spring I suffered from la grippe and was partially cured, but the bad after-effects remained through the summer and somehow I did not get as strong as I was before.

"In the fall I caught cold after getting my feet wet and attending a lecture on a cold hall, and suffered a relapse. Catarrh of the throat and head followed, and as I was in a weak condition physically previous to this, it took but little to break me down completely. One of my college friends, who was visiting me, asked me to try Peruna and I did so and found it all and more than I had expected. It not only cured me of catarrh, but restored me to perfect health."—Alice Dressler.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

No matter how pleasant your surroundings, health, good health, is the foundation for enjoyment. Bowel trouble causes more aches and pains than all other diseases together, and when you get a good dose of bilious bile coursing through the blood life's a hell on earth. Millions of people are doctoring for chronic ailments that started with bad bowels, and they will never get better till the bowels are right. You know how it is—you neglect—get irregular—first suffer with a slight headache—bad taste in the mouth mornings, and general "all gone" feeling during the day—keep on going from bad to worse until the suffering becomes awful, life loses its charms, and there is many a one that has been driven to suicidal relief. Educate your bowels with CASCARETS. Don't neglect the slightest irregularity. See that you have one natural, easy movement each day. The Cream.

Give to the milk cows only the best of food.

It is good economy to feed the milk cows ground feed.

Variety in food is very important in feeding for milk.

Warm food and drink are always appreciated by the dairy cow.

Convenience to market is an important item in dairy farming.

The value of a cow should not be measured by the amount of milk she gives.

Usually first class dairy cows can be raised cheaper than they can be purchased.

It is not so much the amount of milk the buttermaker wants as it is the quality.

It is claimed that it requires eleven pounds of milk to make one pound of gain in a calf.

Butter of uniform good quality cannot be made unless a good thermometer is used in the dairy.

Good butter cannot be made from cream once out of condition as its butter qualities will have been injured.

Cream must be fresh and in good uniform condition if good butter complete in all its qualities is secured.

While cows are kept on hay and dry foods they require a much greater quantity of water than when on pasture.

There is little or no excuse for making poor or strong butter as all conditions are under the control of the dairyman.

One advantage with butter and milk is that they are products that are not usually affected to any extent by hard times.

A cow that is not a good breeder should never be found on a farm unless she is much above the average for milk and butter.

There is no class of stock with which liberal feeding gives a better return than the dairy cow that produces a good quality and quantity of milk.

During the winter cream may be held several days if kept uniformly very cool and as each skimming is added stirring thoroughly so as to fully mix.

Where the cream from the milk of several cows is churned together, the cream vessel should have its contents stirred every time fresh cream is added.

The best cream globules rise to the surface soonest because they are the largest and the flavoring oils rise with them, because they are the most volatile.

The specific gravity of the globules varies, not on account of size only but also on account of composition. But all of the globules will not rise to the surface.

The worry in milking kicking cows, cows from which the milk is hard to be drawn and cows with faulty teats or udders, are as a general thing not worth the trouble.

Much trouble with young heifers may be avoided if they are properly handled before they drop their calves. A little kindly handling so that they will be accustomed to it will make it a much easier task to milk them. With young heifers that are to come in as milkers in the spring, during the winter previous is a good time to handle them and have them accustomed to it.

While there is no question but that some breeds of cows are better adapted to the dairy than others, it is also the fact that prize butter has been made from almost every breed of cows as well as from scrubs. The maker of the butter has really more to do with the quality of the product than the breed of cows the milk comes from. Breed affects profit vastly more than it does the quality.

It is a safe rule in feeding dairy cows, and especially when it is an item to maintain a good milk flow, to give them all that they will readily eat up clean at each meal. There is little or no danger of their eating too much if this rule is followed and if a cow is a profitable milk producer she must be a good feeder. And it is only the surplus over what is required to maintain animal life and heat and make up for the daily waste that goes to milk production.

Liberal feeding of the dairy cow means that she must have as much wholesome, nutritious food as she will eat and digest. While it is best so far as it is possible to raise the feed required on the farm, yet, rather than stint the cow it will be best to purchase some feed, in fact, in a majority of cases, it will pay to purchase and use some bran and oil meal, as these can nearly always be combined with the food raised on the farm to a good advantage.

Winter feeding and marketing of lambs is growing both more popular and profitable.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Lambs fed to gain a half pound to a pound per day are said to be most esteemed by the lovers of lamb chops, as the meat is sweeter and most palatable.

Rape is most highly esteemed in the early breeding of lambs when fattening for market, and for a finish this is followed with corn, peas and other nitrogenous foods.

The draft horse leads the markets of the world as the great business horse and draft horse breeding is the most universally popular throughout the horse breeding state, except in Kentucky.

There are some writers who still harp away on the control of the sex of lambs, but the test of every theory yet advanced has been exploded, on the principle that the proof of the pudding is in the eating.

Newspaper Advertising.

Compared to the service he renders, and in comparison with the rates charged by the big guns of the publishing world, the country editor runs a charitable institution.

And yet hardly a day passes that some man who runs five inches a year, all told, dosn't kick about the exhorbitant prices charged for advertising.

Of course he is talking through his hat.

If he took a notion to go into the advertising business sure enough and decided upon a page in say, The Ladies Home Journal, he would expect to get it for $57.35. When told the price, he would probably drop dead.

The Ladies Home Journal, for one page of advertising only one time, charges $4,000—four thousand dollars.

There are no discounts for time or space and the bill must be paid when the copy for the advertisement is sent in.

A line in the Ladies' Home Journal contains eight words, and the advertising rate is five dollars a line. No orders for less than five lines are accepted.

Still, the Journal has no trouble getting business. Copy for advertisements must reach its office two months in advance.

The Saturday Evening Post, which is owned by the publishers of the Home Journal, is just getting on its fees, so to speak, and its rates are not so high.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Wiuchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rises good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

Trimmings—Rows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 80 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MARCH 27, 1901. NO. 23.

THE various railroads affected by the recent ruling of the State Board of Assessment and Valuation holding the railroad franchises subject to local as well as State taxation, have filed suits seeking to enjoin the board from certifying the assessment of the franchises to the counties through which the roads pass and which are endeavoring to collect the taxes. The suits are filed by the Louisville and Nashville, the Illinois Central, the Chesapeake and Ohio and the Southern Railways in Kentucky, and attack the right of the board to assess the franchises not only for county purposes but deny that they are liable for State taxation, which they have heretofore paid they allege, wrongfully. Judge Cantrill will hear the injunction at the regular term of the Franklin Circuit Court, which begins April 1, and an immediate appeal will be taken to the Court of Appeals by the losing party.

POLITICALLY, Hon. Thomas B. Reed has been exceedingly quiet for many months, for a man of his temperament, notwithstanding he was but recently one of the leading characters in national politics. For his sudden retirement from the field in which he once delighted to work most actively, he gives as his reason the imperialistic policy of the Administration. In his opinion Dewey should have sailed away from Manila after sinking Montejo's fleet, leaving the government of the islands to the Fillipinos. Cuba and Porto Rico, too, should be left to their own devices. The present policy toward Cuba he regards as a piece of hypocrisy. He says he sympathizes with any people on earth who are struggling for freedom.

THE Republicans are in a fair way to get into a row over the appointment of a Judge for the Eastern Kentucky Dictrict as established by the last Congress. Ex-Governor Bradley wanted the Judgship, but seeing no prospects of getting Senator Deboe's endorsement, he and his friends started out to down Pugh, whom the Senator had endorsed, and with that in view they endorsed Cochran. It turns out that Pugh can not secure the appointment, and Deboe has intimated that he will endorse Bradley, who, with his friends are deserting Cochran, and a very pretty family row will be the result.

SENATOR HANNA is reported as saying to a committee of Nebraskans, who asked him to solve the Nebraska deadlock. "It is not so much that we need Republican Senators as that we need Senators who will support the Administration. Take those New England Senators, Hoar, Hale and Chandler; they have a tremendous idea of their independence—they insist upon doing things their own way or not doing them at all.

THE Standard Oil Company in Washington has been warning patrons of an independent concern that they will be blacklisted, and, when the smaller company has been destroyed, will not be allowed to buy oil from the monopoly. This is what we are rapidly coming to in many things besides oil.

FORMER Governor Hill, of New York, struck a responsive key note when he condemned the British for their wanton attempt to destroy the Boes' republics. Can either President Cleveland or Harrison be imagined as sitting supine and allowing this to be done?

GEN. MILES' flattery of the Cubans in the speech he made before their convention, one day last week, bore no fruit, and the Platt amendment is as distasteful to them as it was before the General entered the convention.

THE pardon seekers who besieged Acting Governor Carter as soon as Gov Beckham was out of the State accomplished nothing. He was not the easy mark they hoped to find in the executive chair.

IT is amusing to see a fellow who has been regarded as fighting his party under cover, trying to interview himself into good standing with his political comrades of old.

THE State Board of Valuation and Assessment has decided that all life insurance companies doing business in this state must pay a franchise tax, based on the net revenue collected in the state each year.

SENATOR CHANDLER has gained by his defeat. Forced out of the Senate, which offers a six years job at best, he has been appointed chairman of the Cuban Claims Commission, which is a life job at the least estimate.

SINCE Kitchener has sued for peace only to have his terms rejected by the Boers, and Russia shows no indications of backing down at Tiontsih, it might be well for Britain to begin to question the accuracy of its prophecy system.

Steve Swift, jr., enroute from Lexington to Manila on army transport writes that a rough ocean passage was encountered, the ship being driven 1,000 miles out of its track. The 700 army mules on board were killed by rough action of waves.

THE Louisville Dispatch has suspended publication. For some time it had been published at a loss of $600 a week, and its assets will not equal its liabilities by many thousand dollars. A few men who had been putting up for the paper will be heavy losers.

THERE is no doubt but what James B. McCreary will receive the vote of Boone's representative in the Democratic Senatorial caucus, next winter, as both the candidates for the Democratic nomination for representative are avowed McCreary men, and the county is evidently in accord with them on that subject.

KENTUCKY grand juries are giving gambling especial attention, and a great many indictments are being returned against persons for gaming, and the penitentiary bids fair to become the abiding place of several persons who have been indicted for conducting gaming on premises under their charge.

THE committee appointed by Judge Barker, of Louisville, to investigate the charges made against R. C. Kinkead in the gambling prosecutions, by Gov. Beckham, exonerated Mr. Kinkead completely as did also the committee of the Louisville Bar Association. The reports of the committees were made last Saturday.

IT is said that one reason why Deboe transferred his support from Pugh to Bradley for the Federal Judgeshipis because the appointment of Bradley would remove a dangerous quantity from the race for the U. S. Senatorship which Deboe hopes to capture in the event that his party has a majority of the members of the next General Assembly.

Out in Oregon they have a State law that requires every man who desires to enjoy that liberty of "taking a little for his stomach's sake," to pay five dollars for license to do so. He must present his license every time he calls for drinks. The license is good for only six months, and if renewed, the name of the holder is published in the local newspapers in the list of those who have the right to indulge in the flowing bowl.

The small sized farm is the sort or farm I have always had faith in, believing that a good living and pleasant home be had thereon with less worry and contention than on the large farm, and the tendency seems to be to decrease the size of the farms from what they have been nearly all over the land. As time goes on and the population of our country becomes more dense this will probably be the case in a larger degree than it is at present. I believe in a more thorough working of the soil—intensive farming, if you please. That is the kind that is the most profitable without doubt.—National Stockman.

The Saulsberry heirs, consisting of nine brothers and one sister, have organized a company for the purpose of manufacturing fire brick at Aden, in Carter County.

Farm, Stock and Crop.

Joe D. Swartz, of Mt. Sterling, has a Jersey cow which averages 4 gallons of milk daily, which yields 2 pounds of butter. From April 1st to February 1st he sold $100 worth of milk and butter from this cow.

Short-horn and other fine cattle breeders are having very great success in raising and selling the products of their efforts. At all sales of their carefully bred cattle, prices are always strong, ranging from $150 to $300 per head.

The Carlisle Democrat says: "Dogs made havoc with sheep last Thursday night, destroying $30 worth for Thos. Knox, $40 worth for Mrs. Talbert and $50 worth for Dave Huddleson. More dogs or less sheep is the inevitable of the present dog era."

The highest-priced horse on the market to day is the coach horse. He must be from fifteen to sixteen hands high and weigh from 1,000 to 1,300 pounds. He will bring from $150 to $600—many of them go for much higher prices. There is always a demand for him.

Comparatively speaking very few beds have been burned in this community, and in consequence we can only expect late plants. Planters are exhibiting a degree of restlessness now, however, and every good day will be employed in making preparations for the forthcoming crop.—Waddy cor. Shelby News.

Twelve years ago Oklahoma was opened to settlement and 56,000 people made the run. The census in 1900 shows that the territory has a population of 400,000, and the taxable value of land is nearly $100,000,000. During the last year Oklahoma's cotton crop brought nearly $6,000,000 to her people.

Mr. Duvall Burk had ten of his fine sheep killed in a peculiar manner. He had turned his flock of sheep out on rye since the middle of January. He gave them plenty of raw salt, and in some cases the sheep died in five minutes after licking the salt. It seems as though they were seized with spasms. It is assumed the inordinate thirst of the sheep for the salt caused their deaths. The value of the dead sheep was $60.—Shelby Sentinel.

Potato scab can be prevented by the use of corrosive sublimate or of formalin on the seed potato. In tests made this year at the Vermont experiment station the potatoes treated with corrosive sublimate showed less than four per cent. scabby. In the same soil and from the same seed, untreated potatoes came out with 41 per cent. scabbed. An increase of 37 per cent. in measure of the first class potatoes ought to be worth any man's time.

Whether the burley crop this coming season will be curtailed by the farmers is a matter of conjecture only. There has been a general impression prevalent that such would be the case, but wiuter crops and fall crops are two very different propositions. Judging from the way the manufacturers are buying on the market it is evident that quality is a secondary consideration. This being a fact many farmers will be tempted to raise big crops, even if they cannot give them all the attention they deserve.—Tobacco Plant.

The Lexixgton Gazette does not take much stock in the alleged failure of the wheat crop. It says: There is much complaint of the poor appearance of wheat, but as a matter of fact it is in very good condition save where it is infested with the fly. Since the sowing there has not been a single dash of rain to fill the drill mark. While the leaves are seared and foxed from the frost and the lack of rain and snow the plants are sound and vigorous in the drill marks but do not show above the surface, and to the casual observer the outlook is unpromising. Just such conditions prevailed in the spring of 1875, and prior to the rains which began on April 15, nearly every farmer was disposod to plow and reseed to other crops, but the development of the plant and fullness of head, and plumpness of grain were unsurpassed.

The birthplace of Abraham is to be dug up, and the work of excavation will be begun within a few weeks at Ur, from which city the great ancestor of the Hebrews originally set out with his family and relations on the way to Palestine. A flood of light is expected to be thrown upon early narratives of Genesis by the expedition organized for the purpose, which is led by Dr Edgar J. Banks, and backed by the Royal University of Breslan, Germany. The ancient city is represented at present by a group of mounds, the most conspicuous feature of which is the remains of a gigantic pyramidal tower, regarded by Assyriologists as the most perfect specimen of Babylonian architecture known.

This structure, which is built in a series of rectangular stages, like the famous tower of Babel, with a flight of broad steps running up the outside, once supported the temple of the moon god—a fane which for more than 3,000 years was the center of moon worship in Assryia. The moon god was a great divinity anciently in that part of the world, and exerted a powerful influence over the minds of the people. Indeed, the tower was hardly more than an immense altar, and the adoration of Sin, the lunar deity, was so profound that his name has survived in Sinai, the "mountain of the moon god" in Palestine.

No time is to be lost. The Arabs have been utilizing Ur recently as a brick mine, exploring the mounds, which hitherto have been practically undisturbed, for building material; and every stone they cnme across that bears an inscription they destroy, in obedience to the same kind of superstition that prompts them to smash every ancient statue they fine, lest it be inhabited by a devil. By them the site of the ruins is known as Mughair, or the Place of Pitch, because they get from it quantities of the bitumen which the ancient builders employed to a large extent for mortar.

Ur was not only the birthplace of the Hebrews; it was, so archeologists say, the source from which our own culture and civilization are derived.

Ur and Eridu were located close by the sea, but now they are 120 miles, as the crow flies, from the head of the Persian Gulf. The distance affords an interesting time measurement, in asmuch as the rate of alluvial deposit—i. e., the pushing forward of the shore line—is known to have averaged about 100 feet per annum since the time of Alexander the Great. Accepting this datum as approximately accurate, 8,000 or 9,000 years must have elapsed since these twin cities of old Babylonia stood on the seashore. In other words, the period when they were so situated must have been somewhere between 6,000 and 7,000 B. C.

Not withstanding depredations of recent Arabs in search of bricks, Ur is to-day one of the least disturbed of all ancient ruined cities. It is practically virgin ground, indeed, and there is every reason to believe that the excavations now about to be begun will result in valuable discoveries, perhaps throwing a light from the distant past upon the stories of the Bible.

The Illinois Central, acting upon the theory that the more hogs there are along its line the more freight there is to carry; the more the freight the more earnings and the more the earning the bigger the dividends, has undertaken to treat hog-cholera along its line, without charge to the owners of the hogs—furnishing not only the necessary medicines, but the physician along with it free of all costs. Farmers along its line are requested to notify the nearest railroad agent whenever cholera makes its appearance, and remedy and doctor are at once sent to the infected district.

By allowing the fowls the run of the orchard they get the benefit of the shade afforded by the tress while they will be able to pick up more or less food while at the same time they benefit the tress and fruit by the insect pests, bugs and worms which they destroy.

Sometimes the hens will show a desire to sit early and when this is the case especial care should be taken to provide them with warm nests, and to give them careful attention, while at any other time it is not advisable when the hens are set so early in many cases it will be best to feed them in their nests, as often at this time a very short time will suffice to chill the eggs if the hens should leave them uncovered. At this time, too, in a majority of cases it will be best to make the principal food whole corn as this grain is one of the best, if not the best, to maintain animal heat. Of course a sufficient variety should be given to keep up a good appetite but at least give the sitting hens all of the whole corn they will eat late in the evening. They should have water also, while the weather is cold they will need very little exercise, the closer they can be induced to stick to their nests the better.

GALLATIN COUNTY.

(From Warsaw Independent.)

Wm. Grimsley, a highly esteemed citizen of Hamilton, Boone county, spent Tuesday here on business.

Weden W. Dean, of Walton, spent several days here this week in the interest of Heintz Preserving Company, taking orders for that firm. He is a very clever gentleman and received a great many orders.

Bert Allphin, of the South Fork neighborhood, spent Monday here on business. He has been attending the bedside of his uncle A. E. Hume, of Boone county, who is very sick, and will not return to the Indian Territory for some time.

Hon. Joel C. Clore, a prominent attorney of Cincinnati, and a relative of the Clores of this place, was here several days this week attending Circuit Court as attorneys in the Taliaferro case, in which he secured a decree for the sale of the house and about twenty acres of land near town. He is a good lawyer and a clever, pleasant gentleman.

The regular tri-yearly term of Circuit Court of Gallatin county convened here Monday and an affidivit of Dr. J. W. Botts was filed stating that John W. Greene, the Circuit Judge, was unable to be present, owing to illness, thereupon the bar elected Hon. E. M. Salin as special judge who took the oath of office prescribed by law, and entered upon the discharge of the duties of the office. Judge Salin is a pleasant, dignified gentleman, and makes an excellent Judge, and his decisions gave satisfaction. County Clerk L. J. Spencer, who was recently appointed Circuit Court Clerk, discharged the duties of his office in a satisfactory manner.

There were cyclonic storms at other points in the south but not, however, accompanied by fatalities.

Honor to Whom Honor Is Due.

The Carrollton Democrat is noting the fact that Col Berry had secured an additional appropriation for the public building at that place pays deserved tribute to the worth of our retiring Congressman in the following:

"The present editor does not pretend to have approved Col. Berry's course in all particulars, but it is the purpose of this paper to give credit and honor to whom credit and honor are due. In general efficiency as a representative in Congress, we have not known Col. Berry's equal, either personally or historically. His capacity to grasp situations, his energy, tact, personal influence in securing the passage of measures, are altogether remarkable, if not entirely excepitonal.

"It was a famous victory when Col. Berry secured the original appropriation for this building against terrific opposition—Carrolton being the smallest place in the United States that enjoys such a favor. It was another victory when Colonel induced the committee to recommend an amendment carrying the additional $5,000, and still another triumph when the House passed the bill containing the amendment. His success is the more noteworthy in view of the fit of economy and retrenchment that came upon the House at the heels of the session, resulting in the defeat of the River and Harbor bill and other important measures.

"But Col. Berry has just another signal success. We refer to his having incorporated in the River and Harbor bill a large appropriation for Licking river. It was resisted in the committee and also in the House; in fact, at one time it was stricken out of the bill while pending in the House, but the Colonel finally had it restored after heroic effort. Finally, however, the whole bill was defeated or talked to death at the very close of the session.

RELIGIOUS REVIVALS

Dr. Talmage, in a Timely Discourse, Declares His Belief in Them.

Sermon Adapted from the Story of Simon and the Fishers—Greatest Obstacle to Revivals Is an Unconverted Ministry.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

This discourse of Dr. Talmage is most pertinent at this time when a widespread effort for religious awakening is being made; text, Luke, verse 6: "They inclosed a great multitude of fishes and their net brake."

Simon and his comrades had experienced the night before what fishermen call "poor luck." Christ steps on board the fishing smack and tells the sailors to pull away from the beach and directs them again to sink the net. Sure enough, very soon the net is full of fishes, and the sailors begin to haul in. So large a school of fishes was taken that the hardy men began to look red in the face as they pull, and hardly have they begun to rejoice at their success when snap goes a threat of the net, and snap goes another thread, so there is danger not only of losing the fish, but of losing the net.

Without much care as to how much the boat tilts or how much water is splashed on deck the fishermen rush about, gathering up the broken meshes of the net. Out yonder there is a ship dancing on the wave, and they hail it: "Ship ahoy! Bear down this way!" The ship comes, and both boats, both fishing smacks, are filled with the floundering treasures.

"Ah," says some one, "how much better it would have been if they had staid on shore and fished with a hook and line and taken one at a time instead of having this great excitement and the boat almost upset and the net broken and having to call for help and getting sopping wet with the sea!"

The church is the boat, the Gospel is the net, society is the sea, and a great revival is a whole school brought in at one sweep of the net. I have admiration for that man who goes out with a hook and line to fish. I admire the way he unwinds the reel and adjusts the bait and drops the hook in a quiet place on a still afternoon and here catches one and there one, but I like also a big boat and a large crew and a net a mile long and swift oars and stout sails and a stiff breeze and a great multitude of souls brought—so great a multitude that you have got to get help to draw it ashore, straining the net to the utmost until it breaks here and there, letting a few escape, but bringing the great multitude into eternal safety.

In other words, I believe in revivals. The great work of saving men began with 3,000 people joining the church in one day, and it will close with 40 or a hundred million people saved in 24 hours when nations shall be born in a day. But there are objections to revivals. People are opposed to them because the net might get broken, and if by the pressure of souls it does not get broken, then they take their own penknives and slit the net. "They inclosed a great multitude of fishes, and the net brake."

It is sometimes opposed to revivals of religion that those who come into the church at such times do not hold out. As long as there is a gale of blessing they have their sails up. But as soon as strong winds stop blowing then they drop into a dead calm. But what are the facts in the case? In all our churches the vast majority of the useful people are those who are brought in under great awakenings, and they hold out. Who are the prominent men in the United States in churches, in prayer meetings, in Sabbath schools? For the most part they are the product of great awakenings.

I have noticed that those who are brought into the Kingdom of God through revivals have more persistence and more determination in the Christian life than those who come in under a low state of religion. People born in an icehouse may live, but they will never get over the cold they caught in the icehouse. A cannon ball depends upon the impulse with which it starts for how far it shall go and how swiftly, and the greater the revival force with which a soul is started the more far-reaching and far-resounding will be the execution.

But it is sometimes objected to revivals that there is so much excitement that people mistake hysteria for religion. We admit that in every revival of religion there is either a suppressed or a demonstrated excitement. Indeed, if a man can go out of a state of condemnation into a state of acceptance with God or see others go without any agitation of soul he is in an unhealthy, morbid state and is as repulsive and absurd as a man who should boast how saw a child snatched out from under a horse's hoofs and felt no agitation, or saw a man rescued from the fourth story of a house on fire and felt no acceleration of the pulses.

Salvation from sin and death and hell into life and peace and Heaven forever is such a tremendous thing that if a man tells me he can look on it without any agitation I doubt his Christianity. The fact is that sometimes excitement is the most important possible thing. In case of resuscitation from drowning or freezing the one idea is to excite animation. Before conversion we are dead. It is the business of the church to revive, arouse, awaken, resuscitate, startle into life. Excitement is bad or good according to what it rushes us to. If it make us do that which is bad, it is bad excitement, but if it make us agitated about our eternal welfare, if it make us pray, if it make us attend upon Christian service, if it make us cry unto God for mercy, then it is a good excitement.

It is sometimes said that during revivals of religion great multitudes of children and young people are brought into the church, and they do not know what they are about. It has been my observation that the earlier people come into the kingdom of God the more useful they are. Robert Hall, the prince of preachers, was converted at 12 years of age. It is likely he knew what he was about. Matthew Henry, the commentator, who did more than any man of his century for increasing the interest in the study of the Scriptures, was converted at 11 years of age; Isabella Graham, immortal in the Christian church, was converted at ten years of age; Dr. Watts, whose hymns will be sung all down the ages, was converted at nine years of age. Jonathan Edwards, perhaps the mightiest intellect that the American pulpit ever produced, was converted at seven years of age, and that father and mother take an awful responsibility when they tell their child at seven years of age: "You are too young to be a Christian," or "You are too young to connect yourself with the church." That is a mistake as long as eternity.

If during a revival two persons present themselves as candidates for the church and the one is ten years of age and the other is 40 years of age, I will have more confidence in the profession of religion of the one ten years of age than the one 40 years of age. Why? The one who professes at 40 years of age has 40 years of impulse in the wrong direction to correct, and the child has only ten years in the wrong direction to correct. Four times ten are 40. Four times the religious prospect for the lad that comes into the kingdom of God and into the church at ten years of age than the man at 40.

I am very apt to look upon revivals as connected with certain men who fostered them. People who in this day do not like revivals nevertheless have not words to express their admiration for the revivalists of the past, for they were revivalists—Jonathan Edwards, John Wesley, George Whitfield, Fletcher, Griffin, Davies, Osborne, Knapp, Nettleton, Moody and many others whose names come to my mind. The strength of their intellect and the holiness of their lives make me think they would not have had anything to do with that which was ephemeral. Oh, it is easy to talk against revivals!

A man said to Mr. Dawson: "I like your sermons very much, but the after meetings I despise. When the prayer meeting begins I always go up into the gallery and look down, and I am disgusted." "Well," said Mr. Dawson, "the reason is you go on the top of your neighbor's house and look down his chimney to examine his fire, and of course you get only smoke in your eyes. Why don't you come in the door and sit down and warm?"

Oh, I am afraid to say anything against revivals of religion or against anything that looks like them, because I think it may be a sin against the Holy Ghost, and you know the Bible says that a sin against the Holy Ghost shall never be forgiven, neither in this world nor the world to come. Now, if you are a painter and I speak against your pictures, do I not speak against you? If you are an architect, and I speak against a building you put up, do I not speak against you? If a revival be the work of the Holy Ghost, and I speak against that revival, do I not speak against the Holy Ghost? And whoso speaketh against the Holy Ghost, says the Bible, he shall never be forgiven, neither in this world nor in the world to come. I think sometimes people have made a fatal mistake in this direction.

Now I come to the real, genuine cause of objection to revivals. That is the coldness of the objector. It is the secret and hidden but unmistakable cause in every case, a low state of religion in the heart. Wide awake, consecrated, useful Christians are never afraid of revivals. It is the spiritually dead who are afraid of having their sepulcher molested. The chief agents of the devil during a great awakening are always unconverted professors of religion. As soon as Christ's work begins they begin to gossip against it and take a pail of water and try to put out this spark of religious influence, and they try to put out another spark. Do they succeed? As well when Chicago was on fire might some one have gone out with a garden water pot trying to extinguish it. The difficulty is that when a revival begins in a church it begins at so many points that while you have doused one anxious soul with a pail of cold water there are 500 other anxious souls on fire. Oh, how much better it would be to lay hold of the chariot of Christ's Gospel and help pull it on rather than to fling ourselves in front of the wheels, trying to block their progress. We will not stop the chariot, but we ourselves will be ground to powder.

But I think, after all, the greatest obstacle to revivals throughout Christendom is an unconverted ministry. We must believe that the vast majority of those who officiate at sacred altars are regenerated, but I suppose there may float into the ministry of all the denominations of Christians men whose hearts have never been changed by grace. They are all antagonistic to revivals. How did they get into the ministry? Perhaps some of them chose it as a respectable profession. Perhaps some of them were sincere, but were mistaken. As Thomas Chalmers said, he had been many years preaching the Gospel before his heart had been changed, and as many ministers of the Gospel declare they were preaching and had been ordained to sacred orders years and years before their hearts were regenerated. Gracious God, what a solemn thought for those of us who minister at the altar! With the present ministry in the present temperature of piety, this land will never be enveloped with revivals. While the pews on one side the altar cry for mercy, the pulpits on the other side of the altar must cry for mercy. Ministers quarreling. Ministers trying to pull each other down. Ministers struggling for ecclesiastical place. Ministers, lethargic with whole congregations dying on their hands. What a spectacle!

During our civil war the president of the United States made proclamation for 75,000 troops. Some of you remember the big stir. But the King of the universe to-day asks for 1,200,000,000 more troops than are enlisted, and we want it done softly, imperceptibly, no excitement, one by one. You are a dry goods merchant on a large scale, and I am a merchant on a small scale, and I come to you and want to buy 1,000 yards of cloth. Do you say: "Thank you. I'll sell you 1,000 yards of cloth, but I'll sell you 20 yards to-day and 20 to-morrow and 20 the next day, and if it takes me six months I'll sell you the whole thousand yards. You will want as long as that to examine the goods, and I'll want as long as that to examine the credit, and besides that 1,000 yards of cloth is too much to sell all at once?" No; you do not say that. You take me into the counting-room, and in ten minutes the whole transaction is consummated. The fact is we cannot afford to be fools in anything but religion.

That very merchant who on Saturday afternoon sold me the thousand yards of cloth at one stroke the next Sabbath in church will stroke his beard and wonder whether it would not be better for a thousand souls to come straggling along for ten years instead of bolting in at one service.

It seems to me as if God is preparing the world for some quick and universal movement. A celebrated electrician gave me a telegraph chart of the world. On that chart the wires crossing the continents and the cables under the sea looked like veins red with blood. On that chart I see that the headquarters of the lightnings are in Great Britain and the United States. In London and New York the lightnings are stabled, waiting to be harnessed for some quick dispatch. That shows you that the telegraph is in the possession of Christianity.

It is a significant fact that the man who invented the telegraph was an old-fashioned Christian, Prof. Morse, and that the man who put the telegraph under the sea was an old-fashioned Christian, Cyrus W. Field, and that the president of the most famous of the telegraph companies of this country was an old-fashioned Christian, William Orton, going from the communion table on earth straight to his home in Heaven. What does all that mean?

I do not suppose that the telegraph was invented merely to let us know whether flour is up or down or which horse won the race at the Derby or which marksman beat at the latest contest. I suppose the telegraph was invented and built to call the world to God.

In some of the attributes of the Lord we seem to share on a small scale. For instance, in His love and His kindness. But until of late foreknowledge, omniscience, omnipresence, omnipotence, seem to have been exclusively God's possession. God, desiring to make the race like Himself, gives us a species of foreknowledge in the weather probabilities, gives us a species of omniscience in telegraphy, gives us a species of omnipresence in the telephone, gives us a species of omnipotence in the steam power. Discoveries and inventions all around about us, people are asking what next?

I will tell you what next. Next, a stupendous religious movement. Next, the end of war. Next, the crash of despotism. Next, the world's expurgation. Next, the Christlike dominion. Next, the judgment. What becomes of the world after that I care not. It will have suffered and achieved enough for one world. Lay it up in the drydocks of eternity, like an old man of war gone out of service, or fit it up like a Constellation to carry bread of relief to some other suffering planet or let it be demolished. Farewell, dear old world, that began with paradise and ended with judgment conflagration.

Last summer I stood on the Isle of Wight, and I had pointed out to me the place where the Eurydice sank with 200 or 300 young men who were in training for the British navy. You remember when that training ship went down there was a thrill of horror all over the world. Since then there was another training ship missing. The Atalanta, gone down with all on board. By order of her majesty's government vessels went cruising up and down the Atlantic trying to find that lost training ship in which there were so many young men preparing for the British navy. Alas, for the lost Atalanta! Oh, my friends, this world is only a training ship! On it we are training for Heaven. The old ship sails up and down the ocean of immensity, now through the dark waves of midnight, now through the golden crested wave of the morn, but sails on and sails on. After awhile her work will be done, and the inhabitants of Heaven will look out and find a world missing. The cry will be: "Where is that earth where Christ died and the human race was emancipated? Send out fleets of angels to find the missing craft." Let them sail up and down, cruise up and down the ocean of eternity, and they will catch not one glimpse of her mountain masts or her topgallants of floating cloud. Gone down! The training ship of a world perished in the last tornado. Oh, let it not be that she goes down with all on board, but rather may it be said of her passengers, as it was said of the drenched passengers of the Alexandrian corn ship that crashed into the breakers of Melita: "They all escaped safe to land!"

THE FINGER NAILS.

Short-nailed men never give up an argument.

A keen sense of humor accompanies short nails.

Long nails indicate ideality and an artistic temperament.

Short nails, thin and flat at the base, indicate a weak action of the heart.

Long-nailed people are apt to be very visionary and hate to face disagreeable facts.

Short nails, very flat and sunken as it were into the flesh at the base, are a sign of diseased nerves.

Short nails, very flat and inclined to curve out or lift up at the edges, are the forerunners of paralysis.

Don't scoff at the idea that pressing the ends of the fingers gently will make them assume the shape of the nails, for it is a fact.

Short-nailed persons make good critics; they are sharper and more logical than long-nailed people, and usually more positive in assertion.

Long nails never indicate such great physical strength as short, broad ones. Very long finger-nailed persons are apt to have delicate chests and lungs.

Long nails, very wide at the top and bluish in appearance, denote bad circulation. Long-nailed men and women are less critical and more impressionable than those with short nails.

Don't use nail bleaches too generously, and don't fail to be stingy of rouge and powder. Let your nails be beautiful with no visible signs of the manicuring that keeps them pink and lovely.

The British house of commons has its story-teller in chief in the person of a Mr. Tully. His latest yarn is of a Scotch innkeeper who for years got tipsy every Sunday afternoon. He insisted that they stop, saying that he could not allow anyone to play billiards in his house "on the Sabbath."

Nervous Prostration.

A Noted Boston Woman Describes its Symptoms and Terrors.—Two Severe Cases Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

ADELE WILLIAMSON.

"I am so nervous! no one ever suffered as I do! There isn't a well inch in my body. I honestly believe my lungs are diseased, my chest pains me so, but I have no cough. I am so weak at my stomach, and have indigestion terribly, and palpitation of the heart; am losing flesh; and this headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I had hysterics.

"There is a weight in the lower part of my bowels, bearing down all the time, with pains in my groins and thighs—I can't sleep, walk, or sit, and blue—oh goodness! I am simply the most miserable of women."

This is a most vivid description of a woman suffering with nervous prostration, caused by inflammation or some other diseased condition of the womb.

No woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is no need of it. Read about Miss Williamson's case and how she was cured.

Two Bad Cases of Nervous Prostration Cured.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM;—I was suffering such tortures from nervous prostration that life was a burden. I could not sleep at all, and was too weak to walk across the floor. My heart was affected so that often I could not lie down at all without almost suffocating. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it worked like magic. I feel that your medicine has been of inestimable benefit to me."

MISS ADELE WILLIAMSON,
196 N. Boulevard, Atlanta, Ga.

"I had nervous prostration terribly, caused by female weakness. I suffered everything; was unable to eat, sleep, or work. After a while I was induced to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I really began to improve on taking the first bottle. I continued to take the medicine, and am now better in every way, and feel like a different person. I am simply a well woman."

AN INHERITANCE IN WESTERN CANADA.

Indian Reservations and Other New Districts to Be Opened Up This Year.

To the Editor.

Dear Sir: The past three or four years have demonstrated to a large number of Americans the value of the grain-growing and rauching lands of western Canada. Tens of thousands have taken advantage of the offer made by the Canadian government as well as of the exceedingly low prices asked for lands by the railway, colonization and other companies. The experience of those who have been settled there for some little time is of a highly gratifying character. So much so that the Canadian government, who has control of the immigration into western Canada, has decided to open up some new districts this year in the well-known Saskatchewan valley, and also in the fertile plains of Assiniboia. These districts are probably the most productive in the entire west and in close touch to largely settled communities, as well as being situated on some of the most important lines of railway. They are within easy reach of markets, schools, churches and other social advantages. In some of these districts lands may be homesteaded as well as purchased outright at very low prices. Now as to what can be done on these lands. The evidence of the settlers in the neighborhood of the lands now about to be opened for settlement (some of them being located in one of the best Indian reservations) goes to show that the very best results have followed even most indifferent methods. Cases are given where farmers having gone there with most limited means, barely enough to erect a small house and break up a little land, have in three or four years' time become prosperous, all debts paid and money in the bank. The soil in the districts mentioned, Assiniboia and Saskatchewan, is a rich black loam, 15 inches to three feet deep. As a settler says: "It appears like the accumulation of decayed vegetation and ashes for centuries (the subsoil is a stiff putty clay)." On this soil it is possible to raise from 40 to 50 bushels of wheat to the acre; oats, 75 to 100 bushels, all of which bring good prices at the local market. For mixed farming these new districts are probably among the best in western Canada. Stock fatten easily on the wild grasses. Hay is plentiful, and prices splendid. Another settler writing to a friend in Iowa says: "The climate is all that could be desired, plenty of rainfall in summer, with no hot, dry winds. On the 28th of September I saw prairie flowers in full bloom, sweet corn, potato and tomato vines that had not been touched a particle with frost, and the winters are milder than those in the state from which I came. After the holidays the winter sets in clear and cold, with plenty of snow for good sleighing; no high winds or blizzards are known. Horses live out all winter and pick their own living, while cattle live all winter in open sheds and around the hay ricks. Wheat, oats and barley are the principal grain crops. Potatoes and all other roots and vegetables do well, the yield being enormous as compared to those in the states. Wild fruits, such as strawberries, raspberries, cranberries, gooseberries and all varieties of currants yield in abundance. As a reader of your valuable paper for a number of years, I feel that I should inform you of the progress and advancement being made in Canada within the past few years and the inducements and advantages that will for low settlement in western Canada. Those who desire information can do as I did, and apply to any agent of the Canadian government, whose name, I see, appears in advertisements appearing elsewhere in the columns of your paper, and when writing ask particularly about the Saskatchewan Valley or Assiniboia Districts. Yours truly,

"OLD READER."

Spelts, the Richest Food Out.

The articles in the John A. Salzer Seed Company's catalog, La Crosse, Wis., of Spelts, Bismarck Hog Food Pea, Billion Dollar Grass, Victoria Rape and Bromus Inermus are worth $500.00 of any wide-awake farmer's money, particularly the one on Spelts is remarkably interesting on account of the wonderful richness of this productive prolific hay and grain food. Every farmer should get Salzer's catalog and read about Spelts. [K.]

A PROFLIGATE CONGRESS.

Startling Figures Representing the Extravagance of Imperialistic Progress.

Thanks to the rules of the United States senate, two much discussed appropriation measures, the ship subsidy and the river and harbor bills, failed to become laws. In this case, reversing the old saying, speech (not silence) was golden from the taxpayer's standpoint. But despite this relief, the volume of appropriations is scandalously high, as will be seen from the following comparison:

First session	$710,150,362
Second session	729,911,698
Total	$1,440,062,545

The Fifty-fifth congress appropriated large sums for the prosecution of the war with Spain, so that, properly, any comparison must revert to the Fifty-fourth congress, the last congress making appropriations prior to that war. It thus appears that the Fifty-sixth congress has appropriated $395,482,272 in excess of the total for the Fifty-fourth congress, although that body was more than a "billion-dollar congress." And this enormous total of nearly a billion and a half has been reached, as Mr. Livingston points out, in the face of the fact that there is no river and harbor bill and no Nicaragua canal; that democratic districts have been persistently denied appropriations for new public buildings, and that "the payment of just claims of honest people against the government have not been provided for."

Some of the figures presented by Mr. Livingston in his analysis of the increase of appropriations will startle even those reasonably familiar with present tendencies. He shows that the army, for each of the two years prior to the Spanish war, cost a little over $23,000,000, and but little more than $46,000,000 for the two years covered by the Fifty-fourth congress, while for each of the two years since the war, 1901 and 1902, it cost nearly $125,000,000, or $230,000,000 for the two years, exclusive of deficiencies that have been provided for in large sums out of appropriations made for expenses of the Spanish war during the Fifty-fifth congress. The cost of the navy in 1897-98 was $63,562,000; for 1901-02 the naval appropriation is nearly $144,000,000. For the payment of pensions, more than 35 years after the close of the last great war, the appropriations show an increase of nearly $8,000,000.

These figures show that we are catching the step rapidly. Mr. McKinley and his advisers will soon outstrip the effete European monarchies in militaristic and imperialistic progress, for, as Mr. Livingston suggests, "the half that is contemplated has not yet been put in operation."—Albany Argus.

THE EXECUTIVE POWER.

Alarming Growth of the Authority Exercised by the President.

One of the curious and startling developments of modern government is the rapid and almost incredible concentration of power in the hands of the executive. The hard-fought battles and the strong opinions of a century are being practically forgotten in the new legislation which congress is considering or granting.

If the idea of giving to the president of the United States the authority to legislate had been proposed to our forefathers there would have been something akin to riot, and the papers of the land would have been filled with dire prophecies of the fall of republican institutions. And yet that is exactly what is asked in a report to congress in regard to the Philippines, and what would be granted in a bill which Senator Spooner introduced, which delegates to the president the authority to legislate in the Philippines when, in his discretion, it shall become necessary.

Our publicists have held for generations that congress has no authority to delegate the power of legislation to the president or any other branch of the government, but it seems to be certain that this will be done in spite of all precedents and all the ideas which mark our past history.

Take another illustration: Cuba's new constitution, which has more or less been formed under American auspices, ignores entirely the sovereignty of the states, which was for so many years a bitter question in the broader politics of this country. Think of the contests that have been fought over that issue, of the brilliant debates in the press and on the forum, of the marvelous amount of brain, energy and skilled thought that have been expended upon it pro and con! And yet to-day stated rights seems to be as dead as slavery itself.

We have entered upon a new era; have cut loose from the old channels and are making boldly for the open seas. It is hard to say where we shall land, but certain it is that the ship of state is now going full speed under new navigation laws!—Saturday Evening Post.

——One of the really amazing statements of Mr. McKinley's inaugural is that "the greater part of the Philippinos" of the Philippine islands "recognize American sovereignty and welcome it." Emphasizing this astonishing assertion, Mr. McKinley speaks of "the loyal millions in the islands" and "the disloyal thousands." If the Filipino millions are "loyal" and only a few thousands "disloyal," why has Mr. McKinley needed to keep 65,000 American soldiers in the islands for these two years past and why does he still keep them there?—N. Y. World.

WHERE MONEY WAS USED.

The Real Reason of Democratic Defeat in the Last Presidential Election.

Col. J. K. Rickey, of Missouri, has written the following letter to Chairman Jones, declaring that the corrupt use of money during the last campaign caused democratic defeat, and he proposes a plan to eliminate its use in campaigns:

"Hon. J. K. Jones, Chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

"My Dear Sir: I see all kinds of reasons being assigned by the different wise men of the country for the defeat of the democratic party. Some say it was 'free silver;' others say it was the attack on the supreme court; and still others, that our populistic assimilation was an objectionable thing. To my mind, there was but one reason—money.

"The wealth of this country was massed to be used against us, and it was used against us almost without limit. When the two great parties of this country are so equally divided upon the economic and other questions before us, and one party has millions at its disposal and in the hands of unscrupulous and desperate leaders who are without any conception of government, except that of a means to self-enrichment—and the other party is almost wholly without money and eschews and denounces the debauchery of the ballot by the use of it; in other words, when this party faces the other only with right and justice on its side—such conditions make the result of the last election an inevitable consequence. It is absolutely useless for our party to engage in another national struggle, in my opinion, unless the use of money, as it has been used in the last two campaigns, can be eliminated. The one and the only question to be considered, in my mind, is how can this be accomplished?

"In answer to this question there seems to be one way and only one, viz: Where the democratic party has possession of the state government, let bills be introduced in the legislature making it a penitentiary offense to contribute or receive one dollar for campaign purposes, the states passing such laws also to offer a large reward for each and every conviction. When you have done this in democratic states, then let the democrats in states under republican control introduce similar bills, and if the legislatures under republican rule refuse to pass them, the republicans will then stand committed to the unlawful use of money in the control of elections. They will then be compelled to bear the overwhelming burden of an accusation that they are seeking to remove the corner stone of free institutions. It may be said that some money is absolutely essential to the machinery of elections. I deny emphatically that one dollar in any campaign need be used in order to find out the will of the people. Money beyond what is provided by the state becomes necessary only when it is desired to manufacture a will of the people.

"I propose further that this issue be made the sole issue by the democratic party until it is settled. It is needless for me to say to you that this is the logical and only course, if my conception of the situation be conceded as correct. The wealth of this country is now so closely compressed and knit together that it can move at a moment's notice; and, like a thoroughly trained army, ready for battle. In the face of it, no sentimental issue, and no issue however fundamental, such as imperialism, or constitutional question, or even the independence of the republic, will have any influence or any show of fair determination. These men propose to control everything and make all legislation an expression simply of their own will. They propose to control the volume and kind of money. They propose to control the taxing power of the government. They want protection for their combinations and trusts, who rob the people. Every four years they are willing to spend enough of the money taken from the people by these combinations to carry the doubtful states and assure an election beyond cavil. They don't care whether the party used is republican or democratic. In fact, they would prefer to elect a democrat next campaign and to alternate from party to party from time to time, provided only that their policies are duly subscribed.

"I have talked with many of our leaders since the election, and they fully agree with me on the issue I have said to you. There was more money used in this election than ever before. The country is becoming accustomed to it. Many in the so-called doubtful states are thriving on this new industry. Unless it is stamped out we will never enjoy another fair election, and the party now in power will never be turned out until revolution goes enough, bloody revolution, does it. Yours most sincerely,

"J. K. RICKEY.

"Hoffman House, New York, Feb. 19."

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——We remember when the promise of freedom to Cuba was claimed as a republican virtue, but, as events have shown, it seems to be another phase of republican perfidy, hypocrisy and shame!—Tammany Times.

——The new publication that is to be started "to uphold the principles of the republican party" would confer a favor on the country by first stating just what are republican principles at the present time.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——In supporting McKinley, Senator Hoar probably had an idea that the senate could keep the president in line. Now the senator says that the relation of the chief executive toward the Philippines is "pure, simple, undiluted, unchecked despotism."—Detroit Free Press.

——Imperialism comes high. The British army estimates for the ensuing year are £88,000,000, say $440,000,000, of which $290,000,000 comes under the head of "war services." In other words, this sum is to carry on the war which was supposed to be finished when Lord Roberts came home from South Africa.—Philadelphia Times.

——Militarism and imperialism have had hundreds of millions poured out of the public treasury to strengthen and extend their establishment, while the domestic concerns and interests of the people have received scarcely a dollar's worth of aid from that source. Such is the story written in the vast expenditure made by the last congress.—Kansas City Times.

——From the early years of the last century down beyond its middle protection for infant industries was demanded, with the pledge or withdrawal when they became large and strong enough to go alone. They have not yet reached that point even, when, as in the case of the billion-dollar steel trust, they are seeking other worlds besides the home market to conquer. They still need the protective tariff in their business, it seems.—Boston Transcript.

THOUSANDS OF FAIR WOMEN HERALD PRAISES FOR PERUNA.

Catarrhal Dyspepsia and Nervous Prostration Make Invalids of More Women Than All Other Diseases Combined.

Peruna is the woman's friend everywhere. It is safe to say that no woman ever used Peruna for any catarrhal derangement but what it became indispensable in her household.

Letters from Women.

Every day we receive letters from women like the following. Women who have tried doctors and failed; women who have tried Peruna and were cured.

Miss Katie Klein, 6125 Bartmer avenue, St. Louis, Mo., writes:

"Peruna has done me more good for catarrh than the best doctors could. I had catarrh so bad, but after taking Peruna it is entirely gone, and I feel like a different person."

Miss Anna Prescott's Letter.

Miss Anna Prescott, in a letter from 216 South Seventh street, Minneapolis, Minn., writes:

"I am sincerely grateful for the relief I have found from the use of Peruna. I was completely used up last fall, my appetite had failed and I felt weak and tired all the time. My druggist advised me to try Peruna and the relief I experienced after taking one bottle was truly wonderful.

"I continued its use for five weeks, and am glad to say that my complete restoration to health was a happy surprise to myself as well as to my friends."—Anna Prescott.

A constant drain of nervous vitality depleting the whole nervous system causes the mucous membrane surfaces to suffer accordingly. This is the condition called systemic catarrh. It very nearly resembles, and there is really no practical difference, between this condition and the condition known as neurasthenia, or nervous prostration. Peruna will be found to effect an immediate and lasting cure in all cases of systemic catarrh. It acts quickly and beneficially on the diseased mucous membranes, and with healthy mucous membranes the catarrh can no longer exist.

Peruna a True Friend to Women.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—"I earnestly recommend Peruna to any suffering woman, as it cures quickly. Last year I had a most persistent cough which nothing seemed to cure. Two bottles of Peruna did more for me than all the doctors seemed to do. In a couple of weeks I found myself in excellent health, and have been enjoying it ever since. Hence I look on Peruna as a true friend to women."—Mrs. F. J. Lynch.

Peruna is equally efficacious in curing catarrh of the throat as in curing systemic catarrh or catarrh of the stomach. Catarrh is essentially the same wherever located. Peruna cures catarrh.

Peruna Makes You Feel Like a New Person.

Miss Mary Coats, a popular young woman of Appleton, Wis., and president of the Appleton Young Ladies' Club, also speaks in glowing terms of Peruna. A letter recently received from her by The Peruna Medicine Company, of Columbus, Ohio, reads as follows:

"I am glad to call the attention of my friends to Peruna. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week.

"I have now used it for three seasons, and find it very valuable and efficacious."—Miss Marie Coats.

Diseased nerves are traceable directly to poor digestion, and poor digestion is directly traceable to catarrh. With the slightest catarrh of the stomach no one can have good digestion.

Very few of the many women who have catarrh of the stomach suspect what their real trouble is. They know they belch after meals, have sour stomach, a sensation of weight or heaviness, a full face, irregular appetite, drowsiness, gnawing, empty sensations, occasional pain—they all know this; but they do not know that their trouble is catarrh of the stomach. If they did they would take Peruna.

Peruna cures catarrh wherever located. As soon as Peruna removes catarrh from the stomach the digestion becomes good, appetite regular, nerves strong, and trouble vanishes. Peruna strengthens weak nerves, not by temporarily stimulating them, but by removing the cause of weak nerves—poor digestion. This is the only cure that lasts. Remove the cause: Nature will do the rest. Peruna removes the cause.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

UNDER THE SNOW.

Deadly dangers lurk in the ground left bare by the departing snow. All Winter long there have been accumulating deadly disease germs.

These have been protected and kept alive by the covering of snow and now, with the first warm days, these death-bringing microbes are awakened by the rays of the sun, and as the ground dries they are carried to all corners of the community in the dust that is blown everywhere by the Spring winds.

The human body at this time is particularly susceptible to these germs, especially the germs of fevers. The system has been depleted by the freezing Winter. The blood is sluggish and filled with impurities. The nerves have not recovered from the tension they have been under for the past months. The stomach, the bowels, the kidneys, the liver are all at their worst.

It is therefore, not strange that these germs of disease find fertile ground in which to thrive, flourish and develop into deadly ills.

Spring is the time of year when one should fear an attack of fever, especially when the system is depleted, one should dread any severe illness. The vitality is at a low ebb. There is less power of resistance to throw off disease, and it is on this account that fatalities are so much greater during the Spring months than at any other time of the year.

There is but one way to ward off such dangers, and that is to fortify the human body so that it will become impregnable to the germs of invading disease.

To do this take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy. It will build you up quickly, it will reestablish your wasting appetite, it will give you restful nights of sleep, it will give you vim and vigor to the nerves, and it will dispel all existing poisons that have accumulated in the body besides counteracting the effects of others that may accumulate.

Following is an instance that will illustrate the wonderful power of Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy:

Sheriff Jonas H. Stevens, who is sheriff of Hyde Park, Vt., says: "I have used Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy especially as a blood purifier. I had a very severe humor on my arms, accompanied by a very bad itching, so severe that I could not sleep nights, causing me great inconvenience by the loss of sleep by the itching. A friend advised me to take Dr. Greene's Nervura blood and nerve remedy, which I did with the most satisfactory results, for the trouble has entirely disappeared, and I can now rest comfortably nights and have none of my former misery from the burning, itching sensations."

Remember Dr. Greene's advice will be given to any one desiring the same absolutely free if they will write or call upon him at his office, 35 W. 14th St., New York City.

FRANCESVILLE.—The health of this vicinity is pretty good just now.

Remember the meeting at Sand Run is on the 5th Saturday and Sunday of this month.

Several of our friends attended the called meeting at Hebron, Friday night. Owing, no doubt, to the short notice they had there was not a very large crowd present, but they made it up in enthusiasm.

Mr. Byland, candidate for Representative, was shaking hands with the voters here, last Thursday. Squire Bannister, candidate for County Judge, put in his appearance, Saturday morning. Well, it will not be long until the question is decided, and there will be a big company who will make the voyage up the briny stream—among whom we have many friends.

The oak monarchs of our forests being hauld for the saw-mills of Indiana and Ohio, forcibly impress us of the great energy and industry of men in the last century. They were once the guildepaths of the benighted travelers, yet no improvement of man, in agriculture, can compare with our forest in their primeval beauty. Sad is it to reflect that the majestic work of our creator should succumb to the ax and saw of man, then to be deprived of their beauty, shade and their use as wood, fencing and to protect the banks of our river and retard the depths and width of the immense floods of the Ohio.

Tom Stephens, fond of politics, took a rest last Tuesday, and went fishing and caught 38 nice Newlights in little less than hour's time. The next day he tried it again and lifted out 37 of the beauties.—[Probably he is a better fisherman than he is a politician.—ED.]

Your correspondent is glad if Congressman Kehoe, of the Ninth District in appointing James Allen his private secretary, has only placed him in a position where his splendid abilities can be of more use to the country than as the brainest editor any country paper has ever had. During a stay of several months in Cynthiana the writer had a chance to make a study of the man, and can safely say that he is one of the ablest young men he ever met. If Kehoe is the man he is reputed to be, the pair can come in on any proposition with a show of winning almost anything.

Mrs. Lohna King, better known as "Mother King," passed away on Friday afternoon the 22d inst., after a long and painful illness, in the 65th year of her age. She was the best known landlady in Northern Kentucky, and her hotel keeping was noted for the uniform kindness of the hostess and the good cheer awaiting the wearied traveller. No guest of her house ever forgot her. Her charity to the poor, the sick and the struggling was well known and fully appreciated. She acquired not what caused their trouble but hastened to relieve it. Her business was established 32 years ago and has flourished from the start. She leaves three children, Mrs. H. C. Diers, Miss Yetcha King and the only son, Fritz, the able L. & N. operator at Independence Station. She has bnt three grandchildren, two daughters and one son of Mr. and Mrs. H. C. Diers. Her children and grandchildren were devoted to her and did everything in their power to alleviate her sufferings in her fatal sickness.

The attendance at her funeral was very large and in itself was a testimonial of the esteem in which she was held by the community.

It has just been discovered that the series of $10 bills made in 1880 has a jack's head on the back and is known as "The Puzzle Bill." The jack's head was found by a Chicago banker recently. The Treasury Department claims that an Englishman, who made the plate, was given orders to quit, and put the jack's head on the bill for spite work. He so notified the Department and Monday week was the first discovery of it. Mr. J. C. Revill, of the Boone County Deposit Bank, looked up one of the bills and turning it upside down he found the jack's head just as represented by the newspapers.

A Card.

On the 20th day of September, 1898, I purchased of John and Cornelius Lane, doing business as the Cyclone Woven Wire Fence Company, of Holly, Michigan, the sole and exclusive right to employ their several inventions for the construction of the Cyclone Fence in the territory comprising Boone county, Kentucky. No one, save myself, has the right to sell one of their machines or pickets, nor to build a rod of their fence in said Boone county. Any farmer in said county, who uses a Cyclone machine or picket, purchased of anyone else, in the construction of the Cyclone fence will have to defend their right to do so in a court of justice. I have devoted my time and money in advertising this fence since I made the purchase, and I do not propose that any one shall rob me of the fruits of my labor. I have in my possession a deed from said Cyclone Company for the exclusive use of their patents in said Boone county. I have other proofs, both written and oral, establishing my claim.

TURMOIL IN RUSSIA.

Meeting of Ministers Held to Consider the Political Situation.

Attempted Assassination of Privy Councillor Pobedonstzeff Was Out of Revenge for Excommunication of Tolstoi.

St. Petersburg, March 25.—The political situation is so serious that Emperor Nicholas held a meeting of the ministers Sunday to consider the state of public affairs. Threatening letters have been received by Lieut. Gen. Kouropatkine, minister of war; M. N. V. Mouravieff, minister of justice, and M. Sipiagnine, minister of the interior.

Renewed demonstrations on a great scale are expected Monday. It is reported that Prince Viazemsky has been disgraced for petitioning the czar to consider the grievances of the students. Lagowski, the provincial official who last Friday attempted to assassinate Privy Councillor Pobedonostzeff, procurator general of the Holy Synod, is a disciple of Count Leo Tolstoi, and he has asserted that the act was one of revenge for the excommunication of Tolstoi.

According to a special dispatch to the Kossya, the governor general of Kieff, Gen. Dragomiroff, has published a riot ordinance similar to that published by Gen. Kleigels in St. Petersburg, and declaring that the military will be called out unless the ordinance is strictly obeyed. The day passed quietly in St. Petersburg. Some 40,000 persons promenaded about noon along the Nevsky prospekt, particularly in front of the Cathedral of Our Lady of Kazan. The crowd dwindled to normal proportions when it became apparent that nothing would happen. The promenaders were for the greater part curiosity seekers.

London, March 25.—The Daily Mail publishes the following, dated March 24:

"Saturday 500 workmen from the Obuchower metal works paraded on the Nevskoi Prospekt. On the way thither they demolished the state brandy booths. Eight hundred Cossacks, with drawn swords, met the workmen and a sanguinary encounter ensued. The number of killed and wounded is kept secret.

"The police have discovered a plot against the life of the czar. It appears that a group of students drew lots and that the fatal choice fell to the son of a prominent general. The student told his father, and the latter informed the czar, imploring him to leave St. Petersburg."

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Express says:

"In the last encounter at Narva gate 100 workmen are said to have been killed or wounded by the Cossacks."

SITUATION IS SERIOUS.

A Japanese Squadron Left Nagasaki for Korea—Will Arbitrate the Siding Dispute.

London, March 25.—"A Japanese squadron, Adm. Tsushima commanding, left Nagasaki Saturday for Korea," says the Yokohama correspondent of the Daily Mail.

"The general opinion here is that the situation is serious. Urgent instructions have been issued by the minister of war, Viscount Katsoura, to the commanders of forts to attempt a conference at Toklo, to consider questions of home defense.

"The war rumors are causing a fall in prices on the various bourses. The feeling of the country is uneasy and intensely anti-Russian; but the cabinet shows no indication of its policy."

According to the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times, writing Saturday, Count Lamsdorff, the Russian minister of foreign affairs, has agreed with Great Britain to submit the Tien-Tsin railway siding dispute to the arbitration and settlement of Count Von Waldersee.

RIVER OF BURNING OIL.

Oil Tank Cars Wrecked and the Fluid Fired at Glen Gardner, N. J.—Eleven Buildings Burned.

New York, March 25.—A river of flaming oil swept upon the little village of Glen Gardner, N. J., while the inhabitants were asleep Monday morning and reduced eleven houses, stores and residences to ashes. The conflagration was extraordinary in character and its origin.

The village is in a valley along the line of the Jersey Central railroad. An immense freight train was coming east at 6:30 a. m. It was composed of a string of coal cars and 18 tank cars.

A few miles west of the village, while coming down the incline around the mountain, the train parted. The engineer on the forward part pulled open the throttle of the engine and tried to race away from the section which was increasing its speed every second.

He managed to keep clear of the racing cars until he got opposite the depot at Glen Gardner, when the second section smashed into the first. The first section, composed of the coal cars, was going at a high rate of speed and none of the cars were jolted off the track. The forward car, one of the oil tanks of the runaway section, was hurled sidewise across the tracks and the oil tank cars behind it were spilled up on top of it in every way.

The first crash caused the oil in one of the tank cars to explode and ignite and the terrific heat caused the other cars to explode, one after the other. The incline running from the depot down to the Main street acted as a sluice for the burning oil and it poured into the chief thoroughfare of the village, setting fire to everything it touched. Houses, fences, trees shrubbery and barns were reduced to ashes in an incredibly short time.

THE MUNICIPAL CODE.

It Provides That Those in Rebellion After May 1 Shall Be Ineligible to Vote or Hold Office.

Manila, March 25.—The municipal code provides that those in rebellion after April 1 shall be ineligible henceforth to vote or hold office.

Upon the request of Gen. Trias, who is winding up the remnants of the insurrection, the Philippine commission extended this date to May 1.

The Philippine commission has sailed from Iloilo for Jolo to make a three days' visit and to endeavor to come to an amicable understanding with the sultan regarding various matters. There will be no legislation. According to treaty the sultan's government controls the Sulu groups.

CAPTURED AT LAST.

Postal Clerk, Who Disappeared With $40,000 Worth of Government Property, in the Toils.

New York, March 25.—Joseph A. Conlin, who was employed as a clerk in post office branch H, on Lexington avenue until February 22, when he disappeared with a mail pouch containing $40,000 worth of government property in the shape of money, money orders and stamps, was brought back to this city Sunday in the custody of Post Office Inspectors James and Jacobs and United States Marshal Shine and Detective Ryan, the last two of San Francisco. Conlin was traced by the inspectors across the country and then from place to place on the Pacific slope.

INSURGENTS SURRENDER.

Several Officers and Men in the Province of Cavite Lay Down Their Arms.

Manila, March 25.—In the province of Cavite four insurgent officers and 53 men, with 56 rifles, have surrendered to Lieut. Col. Frank D. Baldwin, of the 4th United States infantry, and one insurgent officer and 12 men, with 16 rifles to Col. Walter S. Schuyler, of the 46th volunteer infantry. The attendance at the services of the Evangelical church in Manila is not diminished. Protestantism is spreading rapidly in the province of Pampanga.

SUMMONED SUDDENLY.

Judge Joseph M. Bartholomew, Justice of North Dakota Supreme Court, Dropped Dead.

Bismarck, N. D., March 25.—Judge Joseph M. Bartholomew, for ten years justice of the supreme court of this state, who retired from the bench January 1, dropped dead in the walk in front of his residence in this city Sunday morning. Judge Bartholomew had been a resident of this state for 15 years, having removed here from Iowa. He was recognized as an able lawyer and jurist, and was one of the best public speakers in the state. He leaves a wife and one daughter.

Committed No Sin.

St. Louis, March 25.—Rev. W. W. Boyd, a Baptist minister, in his sermon Sunday spoke of the suicide of Mr. Humphrey, one of the choir singers. He said that the fact that his mind was unbalanced made him guiltless of sin in taking his life.

A Philanthropist's Gift.

Helena, Mont., March 25.—St. Peter's Episcopal school, of this city, has received a bequest of $33,000 from Felix R. Brunot, the Pittsburgh philanthropist, who died in 1898, leaving numerous bequests.

THE PLATT MEASURE.

It is Believed It Will Be Approved by the Cuban Convention.

It is Thought That Commercial Interests Will Be the Chief Topic of Discussion at the Next Session.

Havana, March 25.—The action of the republican party in Santiago in endorsing the Platt amendment and instructing Senors Gomez and Ferrer, of the Santiago delegation to the constitutional convention to vote for the amendment together with the letters of Gen. Sanguilly and the mayor of Cienfuegos advising acceptance were incidents of the week just past that have tended to clear up the political atmosphere until now there are few who do not expect the convention to approve the amendment. The visit of American senators and congressmen have had an excellent result, as in no instance have the radicals received any encouragement in the notion that if action is delayed until the next congress there might be a change in the demands of the United States.

The radicals, however, insist that they cannot recede from their former position without loss of dignity, and they still hope that some concession, no matter how insignificant, may provide a sufficient excuse.

Already the radicals are taking cue from the conservatives and pointing out that commercial interests demand recognition. There is a possibility of uniting the convention along this line. The plaform of the conservatives calls for a reduction of American import duties on tobacco and sugar and approves any scheme of relations which the United States government sees fit to impose.

In fact the situation is leading to a point where commercial interests will be the chief question under discussion at the next session of the convention, and it is not unlikely that a resolution will be adopted asking for a reciprocity treaty.

ALL QUIET AT MARSEILLES.

The Proposed Arbitration of the Strike Differences Causes a General Relaxation.

Marseilles, March 25.—The proposed arbitration of the differences involved in the strikes has led to a general relaxation in the situation. The measures of the police are now less strict. All the soldiers have been removed from the streets and other public places, although retained under arms in barracks.

Sunday morning the street cars began running intermittently and a regular service on all lines is promised.

The strike of the bakers has not proved serious. Bread was delivered to all customers Sunday.

The general situation is one of calm. The third-class cruisers Linois, Galilee and Lakoisier, with the torpedo boat destroyer Dunois, have arrived from Toulon to assist in preserving order.

HORRIBLE SUICIDE.

A Discharged Teacher Saturated Her Clothing With Coal Oil and Set Fire to Them.

Murfreesboro, Tenn., March 25.—Saturday morning Miss Eliza Burrus died. Later developments show a distressing case of suicide. Miss Burrus saturated her clothing with coal oil and set fire to them. She had been deeply distressed over the loss of her position as teacher in a school here and recently had made two attempts to end her life, timely interference saving her. The body of the girl was found in the parlor of her home, the flesh charred by her burning clothing. Brooding over misfortune, it is believed by friends, had unbalanced Miss Burrus' mind.

Grief Caused Suicide.

Niles, Mich., March 25.—W. J. Gilbert, former mayor of this town, reputed to be wealthy and one of the best known and most respected residents of Harrison county, was found dead Sunday in a storehouse in the rear of his residence, where he had ended his life with a bullet.

Grief over the misfortune of a bosom friend is believed to have caused the suicide. Warm personal relations existed between Mr. Gilbert and Charles A. Johnson, cashier of the First national bank, who fled a few hours before the failure of that institution, and who was brought back under arrest from Ohio a few days ago charged with wrecking the bank.

Convict Rewarded.

Topeka, Kan., March 25.—Gov. Stanley has pardoned the Negro convict, Floyd Graham, who aided Warden Tomlinson in suppressing the insurrection at the penitentiary coal mines.

A Railroad Deal.

Tacoma, Wash., March 25.—It is currently reported here and is generally believed in railroad circles that the Northern Pacific is negotiating for the purchase of the Southern Pacific line from Portland, Ore., to San Francisco.

Forest Fires.

Meridian, Miss., March 25.—Destructive forest fires have been sweeping Lauderdale, Jasper and surrounding counties. Fanned by a strong wind it is impossible to check their progress. The loss is heavy.

For Publication.

When the bills for our daughter's trousseau began to arrive, we fairly gasped.

But our heart's darling, whom we were so soon to lose, consoled us.

Passing of Yellowstone Park.

It is said that the geysers which have made this park famous, are gradually declining. This brings to mind the fact that decline is the law of the world. Health is the most precious possession in the world, and too great care cannot be given to it. In the spring, you should renew your strength, revitalize your blood and nerves with the best of all medicines, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. It also cures stomach disorders. Try it.

Bows and Beaux.

Certain of the Spartan women, it is recorded, hesitated, "If we cut off our hair and give it to the soldiers to string their bows with, how are we to get along?" they protested. "Why we can string our beaux with false hair!" exclaimed the others warmly.—Detroit Journal.

Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. Absolutely Invaluable.

An expression of opinion from the consumer of any article is always superior to any expert testimony. Not long ago, Mr. William Cady, of Columbus, Mississippi, wrote: "During the past two years I have had frequent occasion to use Palmer's Lotion in my family for curing Tetter and Ringworm, and for healing obstinate little sores about the face, head and hands it is invaluable." Of course it is invaluable, because it is the quickest known cure for every form of disease that can be reached by an outward application. If your druggist doesn't have it, send to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl Street, New York, for samples of Palmer's Lotion and Lotion Soap.

THE INCIDENT CLOSED

All Troops Withdrawn From Disputed Ground at Tien-Tsin.

Russia Will Secure a Secret Treaty With China Showing Her Prior Claim to the Land in Controversy.

Peking, March 22.—Count Von Waldersee, Gen. Barrow and Gen. Wogack have been in consultation, and Gen. Wogack has agreed to withdraw the Russian troops from the disputed ground at Tien-Tsin provided the British also withdraw. He insisted also upon a guarantee that work on the railway siding should not proceed until the matter had been diplomatically adjusted. This proposal and stipulation were satisfactory to Gen. Barrow and were accepted by him.

Consequently the British and Russian troops were withdrawn at 5 o'clock Friday morning, thereby avoiding all trouble at present.

Orders have been issued, however, that no British officer shall leave or even "sleep out" at night, or go to dinner without furnishing his address to the adjutant.

The marines will return to the ships. Adm. Seymour objects to any of the Australian naval brigade who volunteered for service on the railway remaining. The military authorities say he does not understand the situation; that his interference is uncalled for, and that the Australian marines are just the men needed.

The Russians have ordered a regiment to proceed from Port Arthur to Tien-Tsin.

The arrangements made by Gen. Bailloud, the French commander, are regarded as completely satisfactory, and all danger of a collision between the British and French is considered obviated.

London, March 22.—"It is generally believed that Russia will procure a secret treaty with China," says the Peking correspondent of the Daily Mail, "fully establishing her prior claim to the disputed concession at Tien-Tsin. Unfortunately this dispute is only an isolated instance of the friction of interests between the two powers. The other instances have not obtained much prominence."

THE BOER LEADERS.

They Will Accept Annexation Upon Certain Conditions and End the War.

London, March 22.—A correspondent of the Times who is near Bloemfontein gives a report that Gens. De Wet, Botha and two other Boer commanders, addressing a force of burghers at Senekal Sunday, said they were still able to continue the war, but were ready to accept annexation on condition that the British would guarantee joint education in Dutch and English, liberty to retain sporting rifles on license, indemnity to the amount of £3,000,000 for burned farms, no franchise for natives and amnesty for all belligerents still in the field.

Gen. DeWet, according to the correspondent, has gone north to the Transvaal, after ordering a suspension of active operations until his return.

CHANGE OF GOVERNMENT.

Transfer From Military to Civil in the Philippines Will Take Place About June 30.

Washington, March 22.—The transfer from the military to the civil government in the Philippines is expected to occur about June 30 according to calculations made at the war department upon information received from the Taft commission and Gen. MacArthur. It is known that even where civil governments are being established by the Philippine commission the military will be necessary for some time to support the civil authorities. It is the intention to withdraw the military as far as possible, however, from any participation in the governments established, and the soldiers will be more of a police than a military force. Wherever possible native police will be organized.

DEATH OF GEN. WALLACE

One of the Historic Figures of South Carolina Answered the Summons at Union, S. C.

Columbia, S. C., March 22.—Gen. William H. Wallace, one of the historic figures of this state, died at Union Thursday, aged 74. He volunteered as private in the confederate army, and was a member of the legislature which brought secession. He was promoted to brigadier general and commanded a brigade.

In the South Carolina political revolution in 1876 he was elected speaker of the house by the democrats. A dual government was maintained by the two political parties until the democrats, led by Gens. Hampton and Wallace, finally won. Gen. Wallace was for 16 years a judge and retired in 1892.

PIG IRON ADVANCED.

Four Dollars a Ton Higher Than Two Months Ago—A Sale of 5,000 Tons Made.

Pittsburgh, Pa., March 22.—Bessemer pig iron has been advanced again, a sale total of 5,000 tons having been made at $16.50 at the Valley furnace. This is equivalent to $17.25 a ton delivered in Pittsburgh. The latest price is $4 a ton higher than was paid by the Carnegie Co for the 150,000 ton contract placed two months ago. A comparison of prices now and this month last year gives interesting results. Sheets are $16 a ton higher, billets $2 higher, plates $10 lower, and bars $2 higher.

THE HAWAIIAN ISLANDS

Their Horticultural and Agricultural Possibilities.

Almost Every Kind of Fruit and Vegetables Can Be Grown Somewhere Among the Group—Forests Destroyed.

Washington, March 23.—The agricultural department will have in print soon a valuable report on the agricultural and horticultural aspects of the Hawaiian islands, which was made by Prof. Wm. C. Stubbs, director of the Louisiana experiment station, who was sent to the islands by the government to investigate the advisability of establishing an experiment station there. Dr. Stubbs says that owing to the unusually favorable conditions, sugar growing is not only the leading agricultural occupation, but is the principal industry of the islands, the exports of sugar being more than 80 per cent. of the total exports of the islands. At present this industry is in a very prosperous condition, but other agricultural industries are either not well developed or are not in profitable condition.

He found that coffee growing was diminishing, and the other large agricultural crop, rice, is not grown on up to date principles. Stock raising is conducted to some extent, but there is need of improved stock and better pasturage. Dairying as an adjunct to agriculture is almost unknown, and dairy products exceedingly expensive. Parts of the island have been denuded of their forests to the great detriment of the country, and it is recommended that these areas be reforested. In many parts of the islands, principally at or near the coast on the western or leeward sides of the islands, irrigation must be practiced to successfully produce good crops.

Little has been done in the islands in the way of vegetables and fruit growing for market purposes, except with bananas and pineapples. The little that has been attempted shows that almost every kind of fruit and vegetables may be grown somewhere upon the islands. For supplying this class of produce, California and other parts of the Pacific coast are now drawn upon.

The report says there is now great necessity for the establishment of an experiment station in the islands, in order that the problems of diversified agriculture may be given.

FIRE AT GREENVILLE MISS.

Property to the Amount of $100,000 Destroyed—Several Persons' Were Badly Burned.

Greenville, Miss., March 23.—Fire that started at 2:30 o'clock Friday afternoon in the Greenville cotton compress, was not gotten under control until 8 p. m., when damage had been done to the extent of $100,000. Friday night hundreds of bales of cotton were still burning. The compress building and machinery are damaged to the extent of $15,000, and are insured for $25,000. The cotton loss is 1,500 bales, valued at $70,000; covered by insurance.

Fanned by the wind, which was blowing a gale, the fire crossed the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley railroad, destroyed New Hope First Baptist church, then swept into Steel's alley, destroying 17 tenement houses and most of the contents, bringing the total loss up to $100,000. The tenement houses destroyed were occupied by Negroes, who carried no insurance on their household goods. Several persons were badly burned but none fatally.

The Ordnance Department Has Arranged to Equip All Weapons With a New Sight.

Washington, March 23.—The ordnance department of the army has arranged to equip all the United States Krag-Jorgensen rifles with a new sight, developed by the department after years of careful experiment. The features of the sight are the combination of ordinary hinged elevating eye piece with a side movement, controlled by a simple and strong friction clamp, which turns the sight into a very effective graduated wind range.

The ordnance department also has secured an effective clip for the Krag-Jorgeusen, something very much needed to bring it up to the rapidity of fire of other magazine guns.

FROM ALL OVER THE STATE.

ATTORNEY HUMILIATED.

He Was Rebuked by the Court When He Expressed an Opinion in the Case.

Louisville, Ky., March 23.—A quasi recommendation by Prosecuting Attorney Vaughan that the plaintiff in a case ought to kill the defendant, caused that official to be sharply called down by Judge Buckley. The case was that of Dr. W. E. Dodge, a druggist and physician, whom Mrs. Mary Cotner accuses of assault. A continuance was taken Friday, and Dodge's attorney asked that Cotner be placed under a peace bond, as he had threatened Dodge's life.

"This motion is preposterous," said Vaughan. "If Dodge attempted this assault, Cotner ought to kill him."

Judge Buckley, white with rage, reprimanded the attorney for his words, and refused to permit him to say anything more. Dodge is a physician of reputation, and denies the charge of Mrs. Cotner that he attempted liberties while she was under treatment by him.

A NOVEL VIEW.

Louisville, Ky., March 22.—In sentencing John Kline, nice-looking 19-year-old youth to two years in the penitentiary for stealing merchandise, Judge Barker said:

"I can not understand the philosphy of stealing; one-half the labor expended and one-half the ingennity displayed by a thief would bring ten times the result in a legitimate business. The thief pays a higher price for what he gets than anybody. Leaving out of the question the danger, he pays dearly, for he does not get the profit. It is the fence, who buys the stolen goods for one-tenth of what they are worth, who profits. Thieves should realize by this time that they have one chance in a hundred of getting away with plunder."

They Claim Their Assessments Are High and Plead for Lower Valuation.

Frankfort, Ky., March 22.—A committee representing the State Bankers' association appeared before the state board of assessment and valuation Thursday afternoon and asked that a lower valuation be placed on the corporate franchises of the banks this year. The committee consisted of Col. J. D. Powers, of Henderson; S. N. Leonard, of Eddyville, and David Banks, of Henderson. Col. Powers, as the spokesman of the bankers, contended that real estate is assessed far below the value in every county in the state, notwithstanding the constitutional provision that it should be assessed at its cash valuation.

A great deal of personal property every year, he said, escapes taxation altogether, and he asked that the banks be dealt with with similar lenlency.

The reports from the banks on which the valuations are made are now due in the secretary of state's office.

Corn and Wheat in the South.

The government crop report gives the yield of corn in the following States for 1900 at 57,7000,000 bushels in round numbers:—Virginia, West Virginia, Tennessee, Kentucky, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Florida and Oklahoma. These States produced in the same year nearly 97,000,000 bushels of wheat.

Thus thirteen Southern States produced more than one-fourth of the total production of corn in the United States and more than one-sixth of the wheat. Add to these 10,000,000 bales of cotton and the immensely valuable tobacco crop and the total production of wealth in the South from these four crops will compare favorably with that of any Northern State with the same population.

These figures show why the South is now more prosperous than ever before, and completely refute any statements made that the Southern farmers are behind their brethren of the North and West in their capacity for work or in the intelligence necessary to make their work bring the best results.

What have the people of the South wrought within the past thirty-five years? In 1865 they were without the means to procure the livestock and farm improvements necessary for even the most simple farming operations. Then they were without banking capital; well nigh destitute of transportation facilities, no manufacturing plants pointed the way to wealth and their schools and churches were partakers of the seemingly hopeless conditions.

Ten years of this period passed before the incubus of carpet-bag government was lifted so that the period of recuperation has lasted for only twenty-five years, and yet today the South finds her fertile fields yielding yearly untold millions of wealth, her mines and factories rapidly advancing to a place where they will dispute for supremacy with those of Pennsylvania and New England and her schools and churches doing a great work for whatsoever things are just and of good repute.

Certainly all Americans must contemplate with pride the progress of the South and the people of the South should take courage and thank God for their past, and continue with renewed energy their course which has made the desert of 1865 blossom into the rose of 1901.

Unless desired to make sweet cream butter, cream should not be churned on the day it is taken from the milk but should be well stirred and allowed to ripen evenly. It should not be allowed to become sour, but slightly acid by stirring well together it will ripen evenly and then if the temperature is right when it goes into the churn there will be no trouble in getting the butter globules to separate properly from the milk.

A heifer calf intended for the dairy should be trained from birth with this end in view in order that she may be made gentle, tractable and acustomed to being handled. It should be taught to lead, to stand tied and if treated in this way will be but little, if any trouble to trained to milk.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rises good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 3, 1901. NO. 24.

THE campaign prevaricator will soon be without a job.

IT is often the case that a candidate's friends become so enthusiastic as to do him more harm than good. Too much enthusiasm is not palatable.

AMONG those under arrest in Maryland charged with padding the census returns is Joseph H. Cling, member of the Republican State Central Committee.

THE capture of Aguiualdo by Funston was a daring feat, and entitles the Kansan to have his name mentioned in connection with the presidency of the United States.

THE action of the Appellate Court in the Powers case was a disappointment to the Republicans in that it did not hold that the pardon issued by W. S. Taylor was valid.

No man has ever reigned over an empire so vast as King Edward's. His Majesty rules over one continent, 100 peninsulas, 500 promontories, 1,000 lakes, 2,000 rivers 10,000 islands.

COL. BERRY is reported as having said that he has retired from politics, but it is believed that he will renew his old love again when the time comes to call the Congressional starters in the next race.

THE Nebraska Legislature got the Senatorial muddle off of its hands last Thursday, by electing two United States Senators, after a prolonged deadlock. The two leading candidates withdrew, and the deadlock was ended at once.

Two of the judges of the recent Republican primary election in Laurel county have each been sued by three Republicans whom they refused to allow to vote. Each of the plaintiffs prays for damages in the sum of $10,000. One suit was brought by a colored man.

AURORA, Indiana, appears to have taken new lease on Commercial life, and has, in the last year, added considerably to her manufacturing interest by offering such inducements as would locate good business concerns in her midst. Aurora will soon be a very lively little city.

THE report comes from Washington that it is probable that Aguinaldo will be exhibited in this country. Bring him on. The people of the United States will not object to seeing a prisoner whose only offense was an effort to lead his people to independence as a nation.

AFTER next Saturday the several candidates who have been making life a burden to the helpless voters for the past few months, can return to their usual vocations and meditate upon the gratitude or ingratitude of the dear people. It is a pity that each cannot capture the coveted nomination.

IN 1903 a World's Fair will be held at St. Louis Missouri, in commemoration of the centennial anniversary of the Louisiana Purchase. Mr. W. J. Rouse, editor of the Monroe Democrat suggested this celebration in 1898, and will doubtless be one of the Fair Commissioners. Here's hoping he will.

THERE is not a six by eight lawyer in the State, who will not say, "I fully expected reversals of the Powers and Howard cases by the Court of Appeals on account of the incompetent testimony admitted on the trials." The world has always contained a great many people who expected events after their occurrence, but whose wisdom is never discovered until too late for it to accomplish anything.

IF Mr. Youtsey, who has a permanent residence at Frankfort at the expense of the State, expected to be released therefrom by reason of a pardon signed by W. S. Taylor, his hopes were destroyed by the opinion of the Court of Appeals handed down last Thursday in the Caleb Powers case. In that opinion the court held that the pardon issued by Taylor to Powers is invalid.

THE court of Appeals says a man cannot be convicted on the evidence of an accomplice. According to that reasoning Gov. Beckham did exactly right when he pardoned the Louisville gambler, who was convicted on the testimony of accomplices, and the Louisville Post and papers of its ilk, to be consistent, should work up an indignation meeting to censure the Court of Appeals for its recent decision on that point.

An Irishman was one day passing through the woods unarmed and in the path not far ahead of him he saw a bear coming toward him. Pat realized that something must be done at once, so he dropped on his knees and offered the following supplication: "Oh, Lord, yonder is a bear. He is coming this way. Oi've niver done anything very good, oi've niver done anything very bad. If yez can't help me, plaze don't help the bear, and you'll soon see the domdest fight yez iver saw in your loife."

THE committee of the Kentucky Press Association, met at Louisville a few days ago and arranged the outing for the coming summer, besides attending to other important business in connection with the association The members will meet at Madisonville early in July, and from there proceed over the Louisville & Nashville railroad to St. Louis, where they will take the Iron Mountain to Pueblo, stopping at Kansas City; the rest of the route being over the Denver & Rio Grande, with stops at Royal Gorge Colorado Springs, Manitou, Pike's Peak, Denver, Victor and Cripple Creek. The journey will occupy about ten days.

THE officers of the primary election at each precinct in the county will receive printed instructions as to the qualifications of voters, etc., and they should comply strictly with those instructions in every particular, to avoid any trouble in case any of the races are very close, and in which the admission of a few illegal voters may have changed the result. If the officers of election have a right to ignore the instructions of the committee in one particular they have a right to ignore the instructions in each and every particular. If one disqualified voter has any right to vote next Saturday every one of that class in the county has the same right. Enforce the order of the committee.

THE skeleton of the largest mastodon yet discovered has been mounted in the Brooklyn Institute of Arts and Sciences. It was found in 1899 near Newburg, N. Y., in the mud of a pond, is twice the size of an elephant and has two large ivory tusks, white and in perfect preservation, curving upward and inward. Paleontologists fix the date of its life on earth as forty thousand years ago, before the glacial period. It is a matter of interest to know that the first remains of the mastodon in this country were found in 1739 at Big Bone Lick, this county, in the mud about the sulphur springs there. More than one hundred complete skeletons have been exhumed altogether, and yet the supply is not thought to be exhausted.

LAST Thursday the Court of Appeals reversed the verdicts of the Scott and Franklin Circuit Courts in the cases of Caleb Powers and James Howard, and granted them new trials. Chief Justice Paynter and Judge Hobson and White dissented in the Powers case, the opinion in which was written by Judge DuRelle. The court was unamimous in the reversal of the Howard case, but Chief Justice Paynter and Judge Hobson delivered separate opinions, in which Judge White concurred. Judge Cantrill's seventh instruction was emphasized by the majority as principal ground for reversal in the Powers case. The dissenting Judges held there was no cause to set aside the verdict, the points objected to being immaterial. Taylor's pardon of Powers was held to be void. Certain incompetent testimony and remarks of the acting commonwealth's attorney were the grounds for the reversal of the verdict against Howard.

Pith of the Press.

Mr. Platt has swallowed many canaries in his day, but he must admit that Governor Odell is no canary.—Alanta Constitution.

Senator Hanna's warm campaign interest in the Pennsylvania coal miners has been put in cold storage.—New York World.

If Senator Scott waits until Hanna cuffs him for mentioning him for the Presidency his ears will be frost bitten.—New York World.

The next time Mr. Platt selects a Governor for New York State he will make him give bond for title before he elects him.—Atlanta Journal.

Before Admiral Schley goes into the house his admirers have given him he will carefully note if it faces Key West rather than Santiago de Cuba.—Detroit Journal.

It will be observed that as the time for the Neely and Rathbone trials approach the men identified with the prosecution are being quietly dropped.—Atlanta Constitution.

In the American attempt to dig, own, fortify and control the Nicaragua Canal the first thing to do is to expel Hon. John Hay from the State Department.—Washington Times.

General Funston certainly has a capable press agent. We suspect that he held back the advance notice until Funston had coopered his man.—Chicago Tribune.

In the meantime, if Mr. Platt feels like carrying out his oft-expressed purpose of retiring from the management the way is now invitingly open.—Chicago Tribune.

Admiral Sampson was not on hand when the glory was passed around, but it is safe to say he will not be 10 miles in the rear when those vouchers are paid.—Baltimore American.

Perhaps William Allen White's argument that there is less illiteracy in Kansas than in any other state in the Union merely proves that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.—New York Press.

As between the Governor of New York and his predecessor in office the honors thus far seem to be with Odell. His heel is on Boss Platt's neck—an advantage never enjoyed by the apostle of the strenuous life.—Philadelphia Record.

At Hutchison, dogs killed 8 lambs for George Clayton, Sunday morning. The lambs were worth $40. Jacob Jacoby, Jr., killed the two dogs, worth 30 cts. for sausage. Keep your guns loaded for starved curs.

A Chicago capitalist is making a curious deal with Kansas farmers. He buys heifer calves, which he puts out among the farmers on the shares. The agreement being that at the end of six years the farmer shall return to him for each heifer so taken one 2-year old steer and $1 cash. It is calculated that in six years there will be an average of half a dozen animals to represent each original calf.

Boiled hams are much nicer to let them stand in the water in which they are boiled until cold; the outside does not turn black and dry up as it does when taken from the water to cool, consequently there is less waste in preparing for the table. But always remember to remove the lid of the kettle, so the steam may escape. This should be done after boiling anything of the kind.

An exchange tells of a lady who decided to scare her husband, who was quite a hard drinker, so he would reform. To do this she procured the costume of a devil she had worn in a masquerade. The next time the erring spouse came home feeling happy she quickly donned the costume. As he opened the door she stepped forward and said in sulpulchral tones: "Come in with me—I am the devil" the resul rather startled her as the response which greeted her was: Zat so? Shake, ol' boy; I'm your brother-in-law, for I married your sister.

Farm, Stock and Crop.

Two mules belonging to C. C. Fox were killed last week by eating some Paris green that had been left at the barn.—Winchester Sun.

Tobacco raising in northwestern Wisconsin has been demonstrated to be a simple matter, experiments in La Crosse county having met with complete success. Ten acres planted last year yielded 3,500 pounds of leaf and numerous farmers contemplate going into the business.

Tuesday was a great day in Dry Ridge for the tobacco men. About one hundred loads were brought there and hauled up along side the different warehouses, waiting to be unloaded. More tobacco has been received there up to this time this year than ever before in the history of the town.—Williamstown Courier.

A writer in Nelson Record says that in 1899 he lost many lambs, and in 1900 he lost more lambs in the same way. He concluded he would hold an autopsy on one of the dead lambs. He found the stomach gorged with dry timothy hay, he said it would ignite. He took the remainder of the lambs away from the hay stacks, and never lost another after that.

Oscar Bonta, a successful farmer of the Faulconer neighborhood, tells The Advocate that his wheat is looking fifty per cent. better than it did a month ago. The great change in conditions has been encouraging to farmers throughout the wheat-growing country. However, Mr. Bonta stated that a number of fields in his section had to be plowed up and sowed in oats.—Danville Advocate.

Inquiry of the farmers from the various neighborhoods of Clark county indicate that the prospective tobacco crop of this year will be about an average one, notwithstanding the low average price at which the past year's crop has been selling, though the acreage will not be as great as last year, for last year's crop was more than average size. In some neighborhoods there are a few who have heretofore been growers of the weed, who will not grow any this year, but upon the whole there will no doubt be equally as many farmers and tenants who have not heretofore raised the weed that will put in a crop this year. The plant beds have practically all been sown, but there is nothing yet to indicate what quantity or quality of plants they will bring forth.—Winchester Sun.

A protest against the establishment of a horse slaughter-house in New Jersey has brought out the fact that the slaughter of horses for food is expressly permitted by law in the state of New Jersey under certain restrictions.

The dog law is the leading question in Tennessee among farmers just now. It is even said, if the present Legislature does not pass a dog law it will be the only issue in the next campaign for the legislature.—Farmers Home Journal.

SOME of the Erlanger people are becoming restless on account of the delay in the beginning of the construction of the electric road between that place and Covington. They have responded to every call made upon them by the promoters of the enterprise, and think it time something should begin to materialize.

A Raging, Roaring Flood

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Ohmaha said I had consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." Positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung troubles by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. The case of the Commonwealth vs Lemuel Sisson, charged with manslaughter, for the killing of John Connor and Martin Deveraux, Sept. 21st, 1900, was tried, and a jury acquitted Sisson on the ground of self defense. The case against his father John Sisson was continued. It will be remembered that the Sissons were tenants on Conner's farm and they got into a fight, when the Sissons, shot and killed Conner and Deveraux with a revolver

The case of the Commonwealth vs Scott Moore, on the charge of manslaughter, for killing Lindsay Davis at Sparta, July 28th, 1900, was tried and a jury rendered a verdict of not guilty. Davis and his brother Wm. Davis had a quarrel at Sparta, and it was continued in the Exchange Hotel there of which Moore is the proprietor. Lindsay Davis, who had been struck on the head with a rock by his brother, drew a revolver and was shooting promiscuously, when Moore to defend his life drew a pistol and shot him in the abdomen from the effects of which Davis died several days later. Wm Davis was also indicted on the same charge, but his case was continued until the next term.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poison set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but," he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1½ boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was as sound and well as ever." For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, and blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival. Try them. W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; H. L. An old man in Georgia named Jack Baldwin, having lost his hat in an old dry well one day, hitched a rope to a stump and let himself down. A wag named Neal came along just then, relates the Atlanta Journal, and quietly detaching a bell from Baldwin's old blind horse, approached the well, bell in hand and began to ting-a-ling. Jack thought the old horse was coming and said: "Hang the old blind horse; he's coming this way sure, and he ain't got no more sense than to fall in on me—whoa Ball!" The sound came closer. Great Jerusalem! The old blind fool will fall right on top of me in a minit whoa. Ball whoa Ball!" Neal kicked a little dirt on Jack's head and Jack's head and Jack began to pray: "Oh, Lord, have mercy on —whoa, Ball—a poor sinner; I'm gone now—whoa, Ball —Our Father who art in—whoa Ball—hallow be thy—gee, Ball! Gee! What'll I do—name. Now I lay me down to's—gee, Ball! (Just then in fell more dirt) Oh, Lord, if you ever intend to do anything for me—back Ball! Whoa!—thy kindom come—gee, Ball! Oh, Lord, you know I was baptized in Smith's mill dam—whoa Ball! Ho, up, murder, whoa!" Neal could hold in no longer, and shouted a laugh which might have been heard two miles, which was about as far as Jack chased him when he got out.—Ex.

A few days before a cow is expected to calve she should be fed a light ration, one that will have a tendency to keep the bowels open. Feeding a heating, constipating food at this time increases materially the risk of fever. She should be fed moderately for eight or ten days and then she can be given all that she will eat up clean. By this plan the risk of milk fever may be greatly lessened and the best results in milk production secured.

OFFICER SUFFOCATED

Lieut. Commander Roper Lost His Life to Save Others.

The Deceased Officer Was Born in Missouri and Entered the Naval Service in June, 1868—Remains to Be Sent Home.

Cavite, April 1.—At 7 o'clock Sunday morning a fire was discovered in the sail room of the United States gunboat Petrel. Lieut. Commander Jesse Mims Roper commanding. The sail room is a small compartment adjoining the magazine. The heat was intense, the smoke suffocating and the flames difficult to extinguish. Lieut. Commander Roper was the first to descend into the hold, but he was forced to return to the deck. Others then went down, besides Patrick Power was prostrated, and a boat was lowered, when Lieut. Commander Roper endeavored to rescue him and was suffocated in the attempt. Lieut. Josiah Slutts McKean and Cadet Lewis suffered severely in bringing the body of Lieut. Commander Roper to the deck.

Twenty-two of the crew were prostrated—Toner, Evans, Flaherty, Jamison, Kessler, Cabey, Burton, Smith, Sullivan and Forsloon seriously, but all will recover.

The contents of the sail room were destroyed, but the damage to the gunboat was slight. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained; possibly it was a case of spontaneous combustion. The death of Lieut. Commander Roper is greatly deplored. His body will be sent to the United States April 5 by the Buffalo.

The deceased officer was born in Missouri and entered the naval service June 25, 1868. He was commissioned to the rank held by him at the time of his death on March 3, 1899, and ordered to command the Petrel November 15, 1899. The Petrel was one of the vessels under Adm. Dewey at the battle of Manila bay, when she was in charge of Lieut. Commander R. B. Wood. The latter officer came home shortly after and Lieut. Commander Roper succeeded him.

The Buffalo, on which the remains will be sent home, is now used for the transportation of troops and is about to return to the United States by way of the Mediterranean.

THE CHRISTIAN CHURCH.

President Tucker, of Dartmouth College, Takes It to Task For Its Part in Chinese Trouble.

Boston, April 1.—President Wm. J. Tucker, of the Dartmouth college, took the Christian church to task for its part in the Chinese troubles during Lenten sermon at the Old South church Sunday evening. His strongest sentences were these:

"The very apostles sent forth by the church have shown that they do not know how to keep the ten commandments. In China it looks as though the Gospel was suspended as well as the law. The Christian church has been set back, nobody knows how far, by the behavior of the missionaries in China."

He asked what attractiveness the church has been for the students in these days of great material wealth. He answered it by saying that the need was a plain matter of fact, not rarity. The last century was one of missionary activity, yet at its close its work was discredited. It is a time of moral confusion also. We must expect the failure of Christendom to support Christianity.

GEN. YOUNG ARRIVES.

Commands Troops in the Philippines Is Brought Home on Account of Ill Health.

San Francisco, March 30.—Maj. Gen. S. B. M. Young, who arrived from Manila on the transport Logan, said: "Gen. Funston's exploit was one of remarkably bravery, and he is deserving of the highest recognition at the hands of our government."

Gen. Young, in speaking of the effect of the capture of Aguinaldo on the situation in the islands said he believed the troops would have to be kept there but six months longer. He did not think it would be wise to bring them all away, however, for there was a large number of marauding bands throughout the islands who would have to be kept under subjection. "It will take at least two generations," said the general, "to get the Filipinos to understand the meaning of the government as we understand it."

INSANE FATHER'S DEED.

Murdered His Three Little Children and Then Stabbed Himself to Death.

Devil's Lake, N. D., March 30.—Emil Zaegerlin, a well to do farmer living eight miles northwest of town, killed his three children and stabbed himself to death Friday afternoon. He went to the barn accompanied by his little daughter Delia, aged 7, and Lilly, aged 5. As he did not come to dinner his eldest daughter, Esther aged 9, was sent to call him.

It is thought that before she reached the barn her father had killed Delia and Lilly and that he killed her as soon as she came in. Esther was a strong girl, and evidently offered resistance as she was stabbed in several places and horribly mutilated. Both the other children were killed with a knife. Emil Zaegerlin was sent to the insane asylum about ten years ago but was allowed to return home apparently fully recovered.

GRIEF CAUSED SUICIDE.

A Kansas City Saloonkeeper Found Hanging From a Tree Over His Wife's Grave.

Kansas City, April 1.—The body of Florian Irner, a saloon keeper, aged 40 years, was found hanging on a tree over his wife's grave in Elmwood cemetery in this city Sunday. The man committed suicide from grief over his wife's death, which occurred less than a year ago. The limb upon which he hung himself was so low that his feet touched the ground when his body was fully extended. He knelt his feet up and died with his knees bent. Persons who first saw him thought he was in an attitude of prayer on his wife's grave, and, not wishing to disturb him, did not venture close enough to discover the rope, but later some of the cemetery attendants found the body. Irner had tried to kill himself twice before.

ATTORNEY GENERAL GRIGGS.

Washington, March 30.—Attorney General Griggs took leave of his associates in the department of justice and Saturday departed for his home in Paterson, N. J. During the leave-taking Solicitor General Richards, on behalf of the officers and employes of the department, presented to the retiring attorney general a large solid silver claret pitcher of classic shape and unique design.

On the panel of the pitcher was the following inscriptions: "Presented to John William Griggs, on his retirement from the office of Attorney General, United States, March 29, 1901. Qui Bro Domina Justitia Sequitur."

On the other panel was a monogram of the letters—J. W. C.

Insurgents Surrender.

Manila, March 30.—After being convinced of Aguinaldo's capture Gen. Gerpnimo, the insurgent leader in the province of Morong, Luzon, surrendered with 6 officers, 46 men and 50 rifles to Col. J. Milton Thompson, of the 42d regiment, at San Mateo. As the news of Aguinaldo's capture spread through the archipelago the insurgents are becoming disheartened, and there is a marked increase in the number of individual surrenders.

Sympathy for Aguinaldo.

London, March 30.—The Saturday Review says: "The news of the capture of Aguinaldo may be welcome, as meaning the end of a war which is still wasting life and ruining property in the Philippines; but for Aguinaldo himself, whose capture was effected by a gross act of treachery, there must be general sympathy."

FIRED AT THE CZAR.

Officer Attempted to Kill Him and Then Committed Suicide.

It Is Reported Severe Riots Occurred During the Last Few Days at Kieff But Were Quelled By Troops.

London, April 1.—A dispatch from Kieff to the Morning Leader says it is reported that an officer of the household attempted to assassinate the czar Monday morning. He fired at his majesty, but missed. He then shot and killed himself.

London, April 1.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Telegraph says:

"A revolutionary committee composed of 72 members has been arrested after a desperate defense, the revolutionists firing at the police. Two secret revolutionary printing presses were seized in connection with the arrest. Altogether 3,000 arrests have been made. It is reported that some of the ministers are now wearing steel cuirasses."

St. Petersburg, April 1.—Peter Karpovich, the assassin of M. Rogoleoff, Russian minister of public instruction, has been sentenced to 20 years penal servitude, with loss of civil rights. The announcement that he had been sentenced to life imprisonment in a fortress was erroneous.

The ministry of education is considering, as a means of diminishing the number of university students, a proposal to admit any one qualified to enter the universities to examination for university diplomas, whether they ever attended the universities or not. This, however, would hardly be a satisfactory solution of the difficulties which result from restrictions of university freedom.

It is reported that severe riots have occurred during the last few days at Kieff, but were quelled by the military authorities. No further particulars are available.

London, April 1.—"There is reason to believe," says the St. Petersburg correspondent of the Daily Mail, "that the Manchurian convention between Russia and China will be ratified in April."

The Yokohama correspondent of the Daily Mail, who records various indications of preparations for war on the part of Japan, says:

"Interviews have appeared with prominent statesmen all breathing the war spirit and expressing the general opinion that it is impossible to allow Russia a free hand in Manchuria. This is the gravest crisis from the point of view of Japan since her war with China."

According to a dispatch from St. Petersburg to the Daily Mail the Corenas at Sa-Mau, a frontier town, recently repulsed an attack by 200 armed Chinese.

The package was put up by a bank official in the presence of the president, Col. W. G. Childs, and another official carried the package to the express office. The Columbia bank officials declare the bank is not to blame.

Capt. O. M. Sadler, general superintendent of the Southern Express Co., is at work on the case. The work is represented to have been clever and the package bore no evidence of having been tampered with.

CONGRESSMAN BOTKIN

AFTER TWENTY-FIVE YEARS' SUFFERING.

More Evidence of Interest to the Millions of Catarrh Sufferers in the United States.

HON. J. D. BOTKIN, CONGRESSMAN-AT-LARGE FROM KANSAS.

In a recent letter to Dr. Hartman, Congressman Botkin, of Winfield, Kan., whose fame is a national one, says of Peruna:

My Dear Doctor—"It gives me pleasure to certify to the excellent curative qualities of your medicines—Peruna and Manalin. I have been afflicted more or less for a quarter of a century with catarrh of the stomach and constipation. A residence in Washington has increased these troubles. A few bottles of your medicine have given me almost complete relief, and I am sure that a continuation of them will effect a permanent cure. Peruna is surely a wonderful remedy for catarrhal affections."—J. D. Botkin, Congressman-at-Large.

CONGRESSMAN BOTKIN is one of the most influential and best known men in the State of Kansas. Whatever he may say on any subject will be accepted by the people as the truth. So famous a remedy as Peruna could not have well escaped the attention of so famous a man. He not only has heard of the remedy, but he has used it and was relieved of an affliction of twenty-five years' standing. Peruna is the one internal remedy that cures chronic catarrh. It cures catarrh wherever located. This is a fact that the people are rapidly finding out, but there are still a large multitude who need to know it.

Mr. Frank Richter, of Winona, Minn., says in a letter to The Peruna Medicine Company:

"As a remedy for catarrh I take pleasure in recommending Peruna for catarrh of the stomach. I know what it is to be afflicted with this awful disease and consider it my duty to say a word in behalf of the remedy which gave me such relief. Peruna cured me, and I know it will cure anyone else who suffers from this disease. It gives me great pleasure to testify to the curative effects of this medicine. Peruna is a well tested and frequently used remedy, and for catarrh of the stomach is unsurpassed.

"My catarrh was principally located in my head and stomach. I tried many remedies without success. I tried several doctors, but they were unable to cure me. I read of Peruna in the papers and five bottles cured me."—Frank Richter.

The gastric juice is secreted by the mucous follicles of the stomach. When this juice is normal it digests (dissolves) the food without producing any disturbance whatever. If, however, the gastric juice is not normal, digestion causes many disagreeable symptoms. This condition is known as indigestion. Peruna will cure this.

Mrs. Selina Tanner, Athens, O., writes: "I cannot find words to express my thanks for your kind advice. I never once thought I had catarrh of the stomach. I commenced taking Peruna as you directed. My stomach continued to hurt me for about two weeks after I began the medicine and then it stopped. I now have a good appetite while before I was nearly starved."—Mrs. Selina Tanner.

Mrs. Selina Tanner.

Mr. L. O. Marble, of Geneva, Neb., writes:

"I do believe that my catarrh is entirely cured. I have not had any trouble with my stomach for a long time. I am as well as one of my age could expect (seventy years). I have had the catarrh ever since I was a young man, and have doctored for it for years and got very little better, but thanks to you and your Peruna and Manalin I believe I am well of it. I can eat anything now and it doesn't hurt me, and Peruna is the only thing I ever found that will cure the catarrh. I believe it is the only cure for catarrh, and I hope every one troubled with catarrh will try Peruna and be cured."—L. O. Marble.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

AGUINALDO CAPTURED

Gen. Fred Funston Narrates How His Little Band Made the Filipino Leader a Prisoner.

The General, in Organizing His Expedition, Selected 78 Macabebes, 20 Wearing Insurgent Uniforms.

Owing to the Treachery of These Men Aguinaldo Was Entrapped and After a Sharp Fight Was Made a Prisoner.

Manila, March 29.—Gen. Fred Funston, who, March 23, captured Gen. Emilio Aguinaldo, when interviewed Thursday by a press representative, made the following statements concerning the capture of the Filipino leaders.

The confidential agent of Aguinaldo arrived February 28 at Pantabangan in the province of Neuva Ecija, northern Luzon, with letters dated January 31, 12 and 14. These letters were from Emilio Aguinaldo and directed Baldemere Aguinaldo to take command of the provinces of central Luzon, supplanting Gen. Alejaudrino. Emilio Aguinaldo also ordered that 400 men be sent him as soon as possible, saying that the bearer of the letters would guide these men to where Aguinaldo was.

Gen. Funston secured the correspondence of Aguinaldo's agent and laid his plans accordingly. Some months previously he had captured the camp of the insurgent general, Lacuna, incidentally obtaining Lacuna's seal, official papers and a quantity of signed correspondence. From this material two letters were constructed, ostensibly from Lacuna to Aguinaldo.

One of these contained information as to the progress of the war. The other asserted that, pursuant to orders received from Baldemero Aguinaldo, Lacuna was sending his best company to Presidente Emilio Aguinaldo.

His plans completed and approved, Gen. Funston came to Manila and organized his expedition, selecting 78 Macabebes, all of whom spoke Tagalog fluently. Twenty wore the insurgent uniforms and the others the dress of Filipino laborers. This Macabebe company armed with 50 Mausers, 18 Remingtons and 10 Krag-Jergenseus, was commanded by Capt. Russell T. Hazzard, of the 4th volunteer cavalry. With him was his brother, Lieut. Oliver P. M. Hazzard, of the same regiment. Capt. Harry W. Newton, 34th infantry, was taken because of his familiarity with Casiguran bay, and Lieut. B. J. Mitchell, 40th infantry, went as Gen. Funston's aide. These were the only Americans accompanying the leader of the expedition.

With the Macabebes were four ex-insurgent officers, one being a Spaniard and the other three Tagalos, whom Gen. Funston trusted implicitly.

Gen. Funston and the officers wore plain blue shirts and khaki trousers. They carried each a half blanket, but wore no insignia of rank. The Macabebes were carefully instructed to obey the orders of the four ex-insurgent officers.

On the night of March 8 the party embarked on the United States gunboat Vicksburg. It was originally intended to take canoes from the island of Potillo and to drift to the mainland, but a storm arose and three of the canoes were lost. This plan was abandoned. At 2 a. m. March 14, the Vicksburg put her lights out and ran inshore 25 miles south of Casiguran, province of Principe.

The party landed and marched to Casiguran. The Americans had never garrisoned this place and the inhabitants are strong insurgent sympathizers. Having arrived there, the ex-insurgent officers ostensibly commanding the party announced that they were on the way to join Aguinaldo between Pantobang and Baler, that they had surprised an American surveying party, and that they had killed a number, capturing five. They exhibited Gen. Funston and the other Americans as their prisoners.

The insurgent presidcute of Casiguran believed the story. Two of the Lacuna letters, previously concocted, were forwarded to Aguinaldo at Palanan, province of Isabela. Gen. Funston and the others were kept imprisoned for three days surreptitiously giving orders at night.

On the morning of March 17, taking a small quantity of cracked corn, the party started on a 90-mile march to Palanan. The country is rough and uninhabited, and provisions could not be secured. The party was almost starved. Wading swift rivers, climbing precipitous mountains and penetrating dense jungles, they marched seven days and nights, and on March 32 had reached a point eight miles from Palanan. They were now so weak that it was necessary to send to Aguinaldo's camp for food.

Aguinaldo dispatched supplies and directed that the American prisoners be kindly treated, but not be allowed to enter the town.

On the morning of March 23 the advance was resumed. The column was met by the staff officers of Aguinaldo and a detachment of Aguinaldo's body guard, which was ordered to take charge of the Americans.

While one of the ex-insurgent officers conversed with Aguinaldo's aide, another, a Spaniard, sent a courier to warn Gen. Funston and the rest, who, with 11 Macabebes, were about an hour behind. Having received this warning, Gen. Funston avoided Aguinaldo's detachment and joined the column, avoiding observation. The Tagalos went ahead to greet Aguinaldo, and the column followed, finally arriving at Palanan.

Aguinaldo's household troops, 50 men in neat uniforms of blue and white and wearing straw hats, lined up to receive the newcomers.

Gen. Funston's men crossed the river in small boats, formed on the bank and marched to the right and then in front of the insurgent grenadiers. The Tagalos entered the house where Aguinaldo was.

Suddenly the Spanish officer, noticing that Aguinaldo's aide was watching the Americans suspiciously, exclaimed, "Now, Macabebes, go for them." The Macabebes opened fire, but their aim was rather ineffective, and only three insurgents were killed. The rebels returned the fire. On hearing the firing Aguinaldo, who evidently thought his men were merely celebrating the arrival of reinforcements, ran to the window and shouted, "Stop that foolishness; quit wasting ammunition."

Hilario Placido, one of the Talagog officers and a former insurgent major, who was wounded in the lung by the fire of the Kansas regiment at the battle of Caloocan, threw his arms around Aguinaldo, exclaiming, "You are a prisoner of the Americans."

Col. Simeon Villia, Aguinaldo's chief of staff, Maj. Alambra and others attacked the men who were holding Aguinaldo. Placido shot Villia in the shoulder. Alambra jumped out of the window and attempted to cross the river. It is supposed that he was drowned. Five other insurgent officers fought for a few minutes and then fled, making their escape.

When the firing began Gen. Funston assumed command and directed the attack on the house personally assisting in the capture of Aguinaldo. The insurgent body guard fled, leaving 20 rifles. Santiago Barcelona, the insurgent treasurer, surrendered without resistance.

When captured Aguinaldo was greatly excited, but he calmed down under Gen. Funston's assurance that he would be well treated. Gen. Funston secured all of Aguinaldo's correspondence, showing that he had kept in close touch with the subchiefs of the insurrection in all parts of the archipelago. It was also discovered that Aguinaldo, January 28, had proclaimed himself dictator. He had been living at Palanan for seven months, undisturbed except when a detachment of the 16th infantry visited the town. On that occasion the entire population took to the mountains and remaining there until the troops retired.

Aguinaldo admitted that he had come near being captured before, but he asserted that he had never been wounded, adding: "I should never have been taken except by a strategem. I was completely deceived by Lacuna's forged signature."

The expedition rested March 24, and then marched 16 miles the following day, to Palantan bay, where Gen. Funston found the Vicksburg, which brought him to Manila.

Commander Barry, of the Vicksburg, rendered Gen. Funston splendid assistance. Aguinaldo, who talked freely of past events, said he supposed Gen. Trias would proclaim himself dictator. He did not know that Trias had surrendered. He behaved courteously and gave no trouble.

Washington, March 29.—While the administration officials are not prepared to say what is to be the future of Aguinaldo, it seems certain that none of them have any idea that any bodily punishment will be inflicted. "It is yet too early to say what will be done with the rebel chieftain," said one of the cabinet officers Thursday night. The matter has not yet received any consideration by the president or cabinet on his capture.

It will depend on the future course taken by Aguinaldo in determining what his punishment shall be. If, as indicated by Gen. MacArthur, he issues an address to the Filipinos advising a general surrender and the acceptance of American supremacy in the Philippines he may be of considerable service to the government in bringing about normal conditions. The administration will be disposed to take advantage of any practical service the chieftain may be to the government providing his acts show him to be sincere. Or, it is suggested, it may be determined to send him away from Manila probably to the island of Guam. The suggestion that Aguinaldo be banished seems popular with some government officials and in this connection they instance the act of Great Britain in sending Gen. Cronje, the Boer leader, to the island of St. Helena.

Washington, March 29.—Gen. MacArthur has cabled details of the capture of Aguinaldo. The most important statement in his cablegram is as follows:

"I hope for speedy cessation of hostilities throughout the archipelago as a consequence of this stroke. As a result of conferences now in progress it is probable that Aguinaldo will issue an address advising a general surrender and delivery of arms and the acceptance of American supremacy."

Gen. MacArthur says that all credit must be given to Gen. Funston for the capture of Aguinaldo and recommends that he be made a brigadier general in the regular army.

NO MINERS' STRIKE.

The Men in the Anthracite Region Will Remain at Work.

The Circumstances Do Not Warrant a Strike at This Time—All Concessions Asked for Have Been Granted.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., March 30.—The threatened strike of 143,000 miners in the hard coal region will not take place. At a meeting of the executive committee of the United Mine Workers of the three anthracite districts held in this city it was decided that the men should continue at work.

The committee was given arbitrary power by the general convention of miners held at Hazleton in the fore part of the month to declare a strike if the circumstances warranted it. In the opinion of the committee in a lengthy address issued Friday evening and which was prepared by Mr. Mitchell himself the circumstances did not warrant a strike at this time. Mr. Mitchell made an address at the afternoon session of the committee which was conservative in the extreme. He spoke of his visit to New York and his efforts to secure interviews with the men who control the anthracite coal trade.

He said all the concessions asked for had not been granted but the outlook for the future was bright and it was his opinion that the day was not far distant when the operators of the anthracite region would see that it was to their advantage to meet their miners in joint conference. It took some time and hard work before the bituminous operators would consent to meet their miners, but they eventually did.

Some members of the committee, so it was said, were in favor of pursuing a radical course on the ground that if the operators did not recognize the miners' union now the opportunity would be lost forever. President Mitchell, however, soon convinced the committee that a conservative course was the only one to pursue at this time.

A number of coal operators when shown the statement issued by the committee said it was a graceful backdown on Mitchell's part, but they gave the president of the mine workers credit for his conservative policy. It is conceded that had he so desired he could have made a great deal of trouble.

On the whole the miners are well pleased with the action of the committee. While they were ready to strike, had the order been given, they are just as well pleased that no lockout is to occur. There is general rejoicing among business men over the news. The suspense of the past two weeks had a tendency to paralyze trade, but now a big boom is looked for. The happiest man in town Friday night was Rev. E. S. Phillipps, the Hazleton priest, who did so much to bring about a peaceful settlement of the differences between the operators and miners. He said:

"Well, there is everything to be thankful for, a strike would have meant much misery to all classes."

AN EXPENSIVE BLAZE.

Jefferson Hotel, Richmond, Va., Erected and Furnished at a Cost of $1,000,000, in Ruins.

Richmond, Va., March 30.—The Main street front of the Jefferson hotel, this city, which was erected and furnished by the late Lewis Ginter at a cost of $1,000,000, was destroyed by fire. The magnificent structure covered half a block in the ultra fashionable part of the city and was built of buff brick with granite foundation.

The flames were discovered in the upper part of the Main street side at midnight and in a short time that part of the building was a roaring furnace. As far as can be learned no lives have been lost, though there was great difficulty in getting out some of the guests.

There were in the hotel many works of art, including Valentine's marble statue of Jefferson, which stood in the Franklin street court.

ALLEDGED FRAUDS AT MANILA

Illicit Transactions in Stores Have Been Traced Back to June, 1900—New Scandals Are Developing Daily.

Manila, April 1.—Interest in the capture and fate of Aguinaldo is well nigh overshadowed in Manila by sensational developments, present and prospective, of frauds in the commissary department.

How widely these extend has not yet been ascertained, but enough is already known to justify the belief that they are far-reaching.

Capt. Frederick J. Barrows, of the 30th volunteer infantry, quartermaster of the department of Southern Luzon, together with seven commissary sergeants, several civilian clerks, a prominent government contractor, the assistant manager of the Hotel Oriente, the proprietor of three of the largest bakeries in Manila, a number of storekeepers, and other persons, have been arrested. The investigation has scarcely begun, but thousands of sacks of flour, a quantity of bacon and wagon loads of other goods, all bearing government marks, have been found in the possession of unauthorized persons.

It is alleged that the contractor in question, who has been doing a business approximating $100,000 per month, has spent huge sums in entertaining officers.

It is asserted that large quantities of stores have been lost or stolen in transit and also that there is a shortage in the commissary depot. New scandals are developed daily. Illicit transactions have been traced back to June, 1900, and it is possible that there are others of earlier date.

The extraordinary tariff on provisions makes the surreptitious sale of commissary supplies immensely profitable.

It is understood that other United States officers may be arrested.

Lieut. Philip K. Sweet, of the 46th volunteer infantry, is prosecuting the investigation under the direction of Col. Wilder, chief of police.

CALEB POWERS SPEAKS.

Is Gratified Over the Action of the Court of Appeals in Granting Him a New Trial.

Frankfort, Ky., March 30.—Caleb Powers did not make any statement on the court of appeals decision in his case until Friday morning, after he finished a careful reading of it. He said:

"Of course, I was gratified, although I expected it. With a fair trial before an impartial jury I shall be acquitted next time. Meantime I believe Goebel's murderers will be discovered. My friends will do all they can to unravel the mystery. I think the prosecution and defense ought to work together to that end. They should get an expert detective who is reliable and put him to work. I do not think it my duty or the duty of the republican party to discover the murderers, but I realize that we will suffer as long as the assassin is not revealed, as many honest democrats believe representative republicans were engaged in the assassination plot."

Jim Howard also said he expected to be acquitted when his trial is finished in September. There is a rumor that ex-Gov. John Young Brown will be dropped as counsel in the Powers case and ex-Congressman W. C. Owens will appear as leading counsel for Powers. There is also a probability of a special session of the Scott circuit court some time during the summer for a trial of the Powers case.

Edgar Jones preached the funeral, Sunday, after which the remains were buried at Hebron. She leaves a son and a husband besides a host of friends to mourn her death.

As we have been often asked to explain the call for the meeting of the candidates at Hebron, we will do so. We got up the call at the instigation of several of the candidates, thought no more about it, and went to Hebron that night, found these candidates, W. T. Stott, O. S. Watts, J. F. Blyth, J. W. Kennedy, D M. Snyder, Ben Stephens and J. H. Walton there. A feeling of harmony prevailed, and the only "suckers" noticeable were those who, like the Walton correspondent, stayed away and talked.

Doc. Mannin has made such a quantity of manure from his barn and cow stables this winter, that he is at a loss to know what to do with it. Mr. Oscar Gaines had a brick vault constructed in the Hebron cemetery, last week, to receive the remains of his wife. It surpassed anything we have seen in the county for respectful and decent burial. The vault or receptacle is built of hard brick, laid in cemented. Quite a delegation of the unterifled from here visited Burlington, Monday, to see the fine horse shoe and get acquainted with the candidates, many of whom we will hear no more after next Saturday—needs make one pause and drop a tear.

James Smith, our popular candidate for constable, says, although he has no opposition, he can't resist the temptation of setting up the cigars to the boys whenever he goes into F. M. Moore's old reliable corner grocery, as he keeps such elegant brands on tap.

"Keep your eye on Riley," is the advice given here. Mr. Lafe Riley, an earnest "old war hoss," candidate for assessor, from the Union neighborhood, visited the Springs, last Tuesday, and after a thorough canvass finds that if the voters of this end of the county will unite on him, his election is assured, as he verily believes he is the strong candidate.

It shows careful and conservative management. The absence of past due paper and overdrafts is an exception and very seldom found in the average country bank."

Mrs. Kittie Dye, wife of Mike Dye, daughter of J. W. Riggs and granddaughter of Judge Cyrus Riddell, passed away Thursday evening, March 28th at the home of her father. According to her wish to die at her childhood's home, her loving husband brought her back from colorado March 4th, where he had taken her in hopes of prolonging her life, but death claimed her for his own and climate and medical aid were alike unavailing. Just at the close of the spring day in the springtime of life, she crossed over the dark river of Death into her bright Heavenly Home for which she was so well prepared. In early youth she confessed her Savior before men and united with the church at Point Pleasant, where she has always been a consistent member. She leaves a husband and young son, father and two sisters, with a host of loving friends, for truly "None knew her but to love her." Her funeral was preached by Rev. Edgar Jones at her father's residence, Sunday afternoon, at half past one, after which the remains were placed in the vault at Hebron.

GEO. B. GIBSON'S SONS, RISING SUN, INDIANA.

To the Democrats of Boone County:—Being compelled, on account of the wants of my family, to further prosecute my claims before the people as a candidate for assessor, I have concluded to risk my destiny for success or defeat to the wisdom of the Democratic voters of Boone county. I entered this race under the most adverse circumstances, not being blessed with means "financially" with which to supply amply the appetites of my loved ones. The Apostle says, "He that provideth not for his own household, is worse than an infidel, and is denied the faith." Hence my inability to further extend my canvass by visiting the people throughout the county. I have endeavored to treat my competitors, who are aspiring for the same office as my self with due courtesy and kindness, which I believe they justly deserve; and in return I commend them for their friendly courses toward me. I brought nothing before the people in this struggle, but merit and loyalty to party principles. It is not my purpose to use uudue and corrupt methods in order to secure the nomination. I am bitterly opposed to debasing and corrupting the principles embodied in the grand old Democratic doctrine, by purchasing with boodle and intoxicants the votes of the people. I would say shame on a man who would sell his principle for a paltry dollar or a drink of whisky. I hope the people of Boone county will be more considerate than to follow the disgraceful example set by our sister counties in choosing their nominees for the various offices of their respective counties. I am persuaded better things of old Boone. But rather showing them by our acts, that in order to the preservation of the purity of the party politics, we will relegate to the rear all who endeavor to fraudulently secure their success.

Fellow citizens:—I hope you wont consider it intrusion, when I ask your suffrage in this my effort to secure a position in which I can better and easier provide for my family needs. For I am _____ be none of my opponents need the assessor's place as much as your humble servant. I am the oldest veteran in the Democratic ranks asking for this place. I have never sought an office at the hands of the people before. I ask it because I believe in my ability to fill it. And, if you give me your confidence and support next Saturday, and honor me with the nomination as candidate for assessor, God being my helper, I will endeavor to execute my duty as the people's servant without fear or favor. Yours truly,

W. T. EVANS,
Petersburg, April 1st, 1901.

Gone Home.

Henry Utterback was born in Boone county, Ky., on March 8, 1819. Moved with his parents to Missouri when nine years of age. Was married to Miss Virinda Rouse, February 7th, 1839. Was converted and united with the M. E Church at the age of 20 years and lived a consecrated christian life until his death which occurred at his home in Monroe City at 12:30 a. m., March 27, 1901. He leaves nine children, S. M., Wm. A., L. G. and J. B. Utterback and Misses Lucy M. and Eliza E. Utterback, Mrs. Sarah N. Utterback, Mrs. Polly F. Smith, and Mrs. Darthuly B. Rhoads to mourn the loss of a loving father. His wife having preceded him to his heavenly home about fifteen years. His funeral will be preached by Rev. J. A. Wailes on Thursday, March 28th at 2 o'clock p. m., at Green Lawn Church, after which his remains will be laid to rest by his wife in the Green Lawn cemetery. He died only to live again with our Heavenly Father.—Monroe City, (Mo.) Democrat.

While confined in the Covington jail some time since, William L. Rhoda got into trouble with Thomas Rogers, another prisoner, who punched one of his (Rhoda's) eyes out. To the voters of the 6th Magisterial District:—My name will be found upon your ballots to be voted for, or against, as a Justice of the Peace on the 6th day of April. I have served four years, and very cheerfully submit my claims for your consideration. The fiscal affairs of the county are in splendid shape—$2,000 in the treasury, and a reduction of taxation of three cents on the $100, is the record made by the Fiscal Court, and if this meets with your approval, your vote is solicited. A personal canvass for an office that pays only $15 per year, would not be regarded as a very business like, or profitable investment, of either time or money, therefore, I cheerfully leave this matter in the hands of the "great common people" Thanking you for your kindness in the past I remain

THE STORY OF A BONNET

I'D MADE up my mind for sartin
That Jenny (you know that she
Had named the day
In her own sweet way—the day she would marry me?)
Should have the purtiest bonnet that ever the store folks made—
One that would throw a rainbow jest twenty mile in the shade!

Ever seen Jenny smilin'? Ever took note of her eyes?
Jest 'peared to twinkle sunshine! an' whenever they took to me
I see jest all o' Heaven that ever I hope to see!

Well, I went down thar to the city, an' I tol' the store folks plain,
I wanted the finest bonnet that ever come in on the train;
An' I paid my money fer it 'thout any contendin' words;
It wuz all fixed up with roses, an' ribbons, an' singin' birds.

But now the trouble's a-comin'!—she wuz all in deep distress;
How wuz a ten-dollar bonnet to go with a calliker dress?

Mother—she kinder shook her head; said 'twould be "out o' place,"
An' Jenny, with tears a-fallin' on the roses of her face!

But her gran'ma come ter the rescue: "It's been seventy year," says she,
"Sence I wore my weddin' dress, an' now it's good as it use to be;
I've been a-keepin' it stored away—but it saddens me now an' then;
An' seein' to-morrer's the Easter day, we'll make it over fer Jen!"

Jen throwed her arms around her, till we heard the gran'ma say:
"Ever you see sich a silly gal? She'll smother me that away!
Go 'long an' git yer scissors, an' all o' yer needles bright;

An' it did! An' seein' she looked so sweet when the Easter day come 'roun',
When meetin' wuz over, the license an' the parson wuz easy foun'!
An' I ain't a-lovin' Jenny any the more, or less,
Kaze I married her Easter mornin' in gran'mother's weddin' dress!

BLOSSOM'S EASTER DAY.

LILIES did not grow in Easton court. The only superfluous articles which the children who lived there knew anything about were bits of broken bottles and waste papers. Squalor, misery and unhappiness there were in plenty, but no flowers, no Sabbath days, no happy children—that is, excepting Blossom—Blossom, whose long-lashed violet eyes and shining curls set her apart from all the other alley children like a bit of heartsease; whose little crutch went tapping through the halls all day, and who sat on the rickety stairs at nightfall ready to call out a cheery greeting to her mother when she turned into the dark alley.

Blossom was very rich. Her mother did day's work for the wealthy people on the avenue, and, besides, Blossom's mother had not always lived in the alley. So when Blossom's glad cry; "Hurry up, mamma, I'm waiting for you," would ring out on the foul air, the alley children would hurry to the stairs and look with wondering, wistful eyes at the scene which never failed to take place. Blossom's mother was never too tired to kiss the winsome face and Blossom's arm always caught her mother in a rapturous embrace. Then they went in and shut the door, and the alley children were so poor, so poor.

Out in the great city the Easter story was being told again and again one Saturday evening, and after her bit of work was done Blossom's mother told her a new story of a little girl who, ever so long ago, went to church on Easter morning, and who talked to the lilies and palms while the minister preached to the big people.

It was a fine old church, with a great organ, and windows so beautiful that the sun made violet, and gold, and purple lights on the floor. "And the little girl sitting there in her white dress did not know, my Blossom, that some day she would grow up and have great trouble to bear."

"Poor mamma," exclaimed Blossom, and then she fell to cuddling the hard hand in her sweet baby way and with the exquisite imagery of childhood went to the beautiful church herself, hearing the wonderful music, and seeing the lights and flowers. The vision filled her waking thoughts, her prayers and her dreams that night, and when she awoke with the sun of Easter morn, shining across her face, there was a tremulous hope in her heart that down in the alley she would have some one crying: "Christ is risen today," and then the response: "He is risen indeed," just as her mother used to hear it in her old

Blossom heard only wicked and ... so she went back to her ... "make believe" and said ... to her mother: "Now put ... prettiest dress, mamma, and ... my white dress, and the ... the little slippers with

BLOSSOM'S MOTHER TOLD HER A NEW STORY.

Blossom smiled again and gave her head a little shake to send the tears flying.

"It's so—so nice," she answered, reverently. "Aren't you glad the lilies tell about Jesus?"

The lady did not answer her in words, and as she stooped to arrer the child, lifting the dimpled chin in her palm, she said with passionate tenderness: "Poor little girl! You are a cripple like my little boy; I am so sorry for you."

"Oh, is he lame, and will he be here to-day? He won't mind his lameness when he sees the lilies."

"He is not here; he is risen; and I am alone," answered the lady, her voice sharp with pain.

"Do you mean that he has gone to Jesus?" asked Blossom.

There was only an affirmative nod for answer, and Blossom, whose childish idea of ministry meant loving, put up her hand and stroked the face of the stricken woman beside her, as she did the tired mother's when the hard day's work was ended. "Poor lady," she said, softly, "I expect God is letting him gather Easter lilies for Him to-day. Mamma thinks God has gardens in Heaven because there are so many folks like me who never had any flowers down here. I never saw an Easter lily till to-day, and won't it be nice when we all go to Jesus for me to tell your little boy that we talked about him to-day down here?"

Mrs. Raymond was crying—crying as she could not cry when they carried Donald's casket from the house; crying as any oppressed heart will cry when relief comes, and still Blossom's notes went steadily and sweetly on: "I guess you are lonesome without your little boy and that makes you cry, but some day when you go to see God, your little boy will already be there, and he'll run right up to you without his crutches. Mamma says God doesn't have crutches there, and I think I'll be the happiest little girl in Heaven when God lets me show mamma how I can run."

Blossom's mother turned uneasily and the child went over to her. "You went to sleep, mamma, you were so tired," she said, in quaint apology; then, turning and smiling brightly at her new friend, she said: "I guess we must go now, for mamma said we could only stay with the lilies until the people came; she said we would look queer; do we?"

"Stay to service with me," pleaded Mrs. Raymond, but Blossom's mother would not be persuaded, and went away, leaving the child under Mrs. Raymond's protection.

Blossom has never forgotten that wonderful Easter day. The triumphant music, the perfumed air, the glorious promises of resurrection and life, fell with untold power upon the innocent child life. She was unconscious of the notice she attracted to the pew of the wealthy Mrs. Raymond, who had not been to service for months, and who had been so bitter in her grief over the loss of her only son that her best friends had avoided her in the hours when she most needed them. Blossom had not felt the bitterness, so she leaned confidingly against Mrs. Raymond, bringing, to her the first real comfort she had known. Looking down into the child's rapt face, she found her best help in the warm human sympathy of the loving heart beside her, and as her quivering nerves stilled a little the tender triumph of the pulpit message added its healing balm to the hurt in her troubled heart.

Blossom rode home in a carriage that day, and the wonder of it all had not left her when a servant in livery returned with several large boxes of Easter lilies, roses and ferns. There was a perfumed note with a dainty monogram tucked between the lily stems, and Blossom's mother read it aloud to her.

"Dear Blossom," it ran, "I want to send you something from my little boy. I think he wishes you to give these flowers to all your friends in Easton court to help them remember that there is no darkness where Jesus is."

Blossom sat with her hands folded over her knee, looking down at the mass of blossoms at her feet. "It all came true," she said, softly; "we did go to church, and God let me see the lilies. God can do anything, can't He, mamma?"

"Yes, my Blossom, He lets us have all that is good for us," answered the brave, trusting mother, who, in the midst of her toil and pain and poverty, had learned to keep the true Easter in her heart.

Many Easter days have come and gone since then, and now the lilies blossom royally at Easton court, for Mrs. Raymond, thoroughly awakened from the selfishness of her grief, tore away the old buildings whose environment laid so cruel a hand upon the children of the court, and in their stead built up Donald house, in memory of the boy she loved and wellnigh lost. Blossom and her mother have rooms in the new house as in the old.

Sometimes when Mrs. Raymond has taken leave of them she remembers her first meeting with them, and, retracing her steps, takes Blossom's face between her hands while she says: "God bless you and keep you sweet in this garden for many years, my Blossom," and Blossom, whose presence is like a benediction in Donald house, can repay her friend only by the daily unfolding of her own Christ life.—Minnie Waite Roselle, in Baptist Union.

At Eastertime.

At Eastertime, oh, who can doubt
That He who calls the violets out
Of their brown graves beneath the rime
Will wake us, too, in His good time?
Are we not more than many flowers?
Oh, sweet the lesson of the hours
At Eastertime.

"Very carefully," answered he. "I think I succeeded in denying myself enough things to pay the cost of an Easter wardrobe."—Washington Star.

SAYING OF NATIONS.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage shows the Messianic sacrifices for the saving of all nations and speaks of Gethsemane as it appeared to him; text, I. Corinthians 6:20: "Ye are bought with a price."

Your friend takes you through his valuable house. You examine the arches, the frescoes, the grass plots, the fish ponds, the conservatories, the parks of deer, and you say within yourself or you say aloud: "What did all this cost?" You see a costly diamond flashing in an earring, or you hear a costly dress rustling across the drawing-room, or you see a high mettled span of horses harnessed with silver and gold, and you begin to make an estimate of the value.

The man who owns a large estate cannot instantly tell you all it is worth. He says: "I will estimate so much for the house so much for the furniture, so much for laying out the grounds, so much for the stock, so much for the barn, so much for the equipage, adding up in all making this aggregate."

Well, my friends, I hear so much about our mansion in Heaven, about its furniture and the grand surroundings, that I want to know how much it is all worth and what has actually been paid for it. I cannot complete in a month nor a year the magnificent calculation, but before I get through to-day I hope to give you the figures. "Ye are bought with a price."

The first installment paid for the clearance of our souls was the ignominious birth of Christ in Bethlehem. Though we may never be carefully looked after afterward, our advent into the world is carefully guarded. We came into the world amid kindly attentions. Privacy and silence are afforded when God launches an immortal soul into the world. Even the roughest of men know enough to stand back. But I have to tell you that in the village on the side of the hill there was a very bedlam of uproar when Jesus was born. In a village capable of accommodating only a few hundred people many thousand people were crowded, and amid hostlers and muleteers and camel drivers yelling at stupid beasts of burden the Messiah appeared. No silence. No privacy. A better adapted place hath the eaglet in the eyrie, hath the whelp in the lions' lair. The exile of Heaven lieth down upon straw. The first night out from the palace of Heaven spent in an outhouse. One hour after laying aside the robes of Heaven dressed in a wrapper of coarse linen, One would have supposed that Christ would have made a more gradual descent, coming from Heaven first to a half-way world of great magnitude, then to Caesar's palace, then to a merchant's palace in Galilee, then to a private home in Bethany, then to a fisherman's hut and last of all to a stable. Not! It was one leap from the top to the bottom.

Let us open the door of the caravansary in Bethlehem and drive away the camels. Pass on through the group of idlers and loungers. What, O Mary, no light? "No light," she says, "save that which comes through the door." What, Mary, no food? "None," she says, "only that which was brought in the sack on the journey." Let the Bethlehem woman who has come in here with kindly attentions put back the covering from the babe that we may look upon it. Look! Look! Uncover your head. Let us kneel. Let all voices be hushed. Son of Mary! Son of God! Child of a day! Monarch of eternity! In that eye the glance of a God. Omnipotence sheathed in that Babe's arm. That voice to be changed from the feeble plaint to the tone that shall wake the dead. Hosanna! Hosanna! Glory to God that Jesus came from throne to manger that we might rise from manger to throne, and that all the gates are open and that the door of Heaven that once swung this way to let Jesus out now swings the other way to let us in. Let all the bellmen of Heaven lay hold the rope and ring out the news: "Behold, I bring you glad tidings of great joy, which shall be to all people, for to-day is born in the city of David a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord!"

The second installment paid for our soul's clearance was the scene in Quarantania, a mountainous region, full of caverns, where are to-day panthers and wild beasts of all sorts, so that you must now go there armed with knife or gun or pistol. It was there that Jesus went to think and to pray, and it was there that this monster of hell—more sly, more terrible, than anything that prowled in that country—Satan himself, met Christ.

The rose in the cheek of Christ—that Publius Lentullus, in his letter to the Roman senate, ascribed to Jesus—that rose had scattered its petals. Abstinence from food had thrown him into emaciation. A long abstinence from food recorded in profane history is that of the crew of the ship Juno. For 23 days they had nothing to eat. But this sufferer had fasted a month and ten days before he broke fast. Hunger must have agonized every fiber of the body and gnawed on the stomach with teeth of death. The thought of a morsel of bread or meat must have thrilled the body with something like ferocity. Turn out a pack of men hungry as Christ was a-hungered, and if they had strength with one yell they would devour you as a kid. It was in that pang of hunger that Jesus was accosted, and satan said: "Now, change these stones, which look like bread, into an actual supply of bread." Had the temptation come to you and me under those circumstances we would have cried: "Bread it shall be!" and been almost impatient at the time taken for mastication, but Christ with one hand beat back the hunger and with the other hand beat back the monarch of darkness. O ye tempted ones! Christ was tempted. We are told that Napoleon ordered a coat-of-mail made, but he was not quite certain that it was impenetrable, so he said to the manufacturer of the coat-of-mail: "Put it on now yourself and let us try it." And with shot after shot fired from his own pistol the emperor found that it was just what it pretended to be, a good coat-of-mail. Then the man received a large reward.

I bless God that the same coat-of-mail that struck back the weapons of temptation from the head of Christ we may now all wear, for Jesus comes and says: "I have been tempted, and I know what it is to be tempted. Take this robe that defended me and wear it for yourselves. I shall see you through all trials, and I shall see you through all temptation."

"But," says Satan still further to Jesus, "come, and I will show you something worth looking at." And after a half day's journey they came to Jerusalem and to the top of the temple. Just as one might go up in the tower of Antwerp and look off upon Belgium, so Satan brought Christ to the top of the temple. Some people at a great height feel dizzy and a strange disposition to jump. So Satan comes to Christ in that very crisis. Standing there at the top of the temple, they looked off. A magnificent reach of country. Grain fields, vineyards, olive groves, forests and streams, cattle in the valley, flocks on the hills and villages and cities and realms. "Now," says Satan, "I'll make a bargain. Just jump off. I know it is a great way from the top of the temple to the valley, but if you are Divine you can fly. Jump off. It won't hurt you. Angels will catch you. Your Father will hold you. Besides, I'll make you a large present if you will. I'll give you Asia Minor, I'll give you China, I'll give you Ethiopia, I'll give you Italy, I'll give you Spain, I'll give you Germany, I'll give you Britain, I'll give you all the world." What a temptation it must have been!

The third installment paid for our redemption was the agonizing prayer in Gethsemane. As I sat in that garden at the foot of an old gnarled and twisted olive tree the historic scene came upon me overwhelmingly. These old olive trees are the lineal descendants of those under which Christ stood and wept and knelt. Have the leaves of whole botanical generations told the the story of our Lord's agony to their successors? Next to Calvary the solemnest place in Palestine is Gethsemane. While sitting there it seemed as if I could hear our Lord's prayer, laden with sobs and groans. Can this be the Jesus who gathered fragrance from the frankincense brought to His cradle and from the lilies that flung their sweetness into His sermons and from the box of alabaster that broke at his feet? Is this Jesus the comforter of Bethany, the resurrector at Nain, the oculist at Bethsaida? Is this the Christ whose frown is the storm, whose smile is the sunlight, the spring morning His breath, the thunder His voice, the ocean a drop on the tip of His finger, Heaven a sparkle on the bosom of His love, the universe the dust of His chariot wheel? Is this the Christ who is able to heal a heartbreak or hush a tempest or drown a world or flood immensity with His glory? Behold Him in prayer, the globules of blood by sorrow pressed through the skin of His forehead! What an installment in part payment of the greatest price that was ever paid!

The fourth installment paid for our redemption was the Saviour's sham trial. I call it a sham trial—there has never been anything so indecent or unfair in any criminal court as was witnessed at the trial of Christ. Why, they hustled him into the courtroom at two o'clock in the morning. They gave Him no time for counsel. They gave him no opportunity for subpoenaing witnesses. The ruffians who were wandering around through the midnight, of course they saw the arrest and went into the courtroom. But Jesus' friends were sober men, were to respectable men, and at that hour, two o'clock in the morning, of course they were at home asleep. Consequently Christ entered the courtroom with the ruffians.

Oh, look at Him! No one to speak a word for Him. I lift the lantern until I can look into His face, and as my heart beats in sympathy for this, the best friend the world ever had, Himself now utterly friendless, an officer of the courtroom comes up and smites Him in the mouth, and I see the blood oozing from gum and lip. Oh, it was a farce of a trial, lasting only perhaps an hour, and then the judge rises for sentence! Stop! It is against the law to give sentence unless there has been an adjournment of the court between condemnation and sentence, but what cares the judge for the law? "The man has no friends. Let Him die," says the judge. And the ruffians outside the rail cry: "Aha, aha, that's what we want! Pass Him out here to us! Away with Him! Away with Him!"

Oh, I bless God that amid all the injustice that may have been inflicted upon us in this world we have a divine sympathizer. The world cannot lie about you nor abuse you as much as they did Christ, and Jesus stands to-day in every courtroom, in every house, in every store, and says: "Courage! By all my hours of maltreatment and abuse I will protect those who are trampled upon." And when Christ forgets that two o'clock morning scene and the stroke of the ruffian on the mouth and the howling of the unwashed crowd then He will forget you and me in the injustices of life that may be inflicted upon us.

Further I remark: The last great installment paid for our redemption was the demise of Christ. The world has seen many dark days. Many summers ago there was a very dark day when the sun was eclipsed. The fowl at noonday went to their perch, and we felt a gloom as we looked at the astronomical wonder. It was a dark day in London when the plague was at its height, and the dead with uncovered faces were taken in open carts and dumped in the trenches. It was a dark day when the earth opened and Lisbon sank, but the darkest day since the creation of the world was when the carnage of Calvary was enacted.

It was about noon when the curtain began to be drawn. It was the swinging of a great gloom all around the heavens. God hung it. As when there is a dead one in the house you bow the shutters or turn the lattice, so God in the afternoon shut the windows of the world. As it is appropriate to throw a black pall upon the coffin as it passes along, so it was appropriate that everything should be somber that day as the great hearse of the earth rolled on, bearing the corpse of the King. A man's last hours are ordinarily kept sacred. However you may have hated or caricatured a man, when you hear he is dying silence puts its hands on your lips, and you would have a loathing for the man who could stand by a deathbed making faces and scoffing. But Christ in His last hour cannot be left alone. What, pursuing Him yet after so long a pursuit? You have been drinking His tears. Do you want to drink His blood? They come up closely, so that not with standing the darkness they can glut their revenge with the contortions of His countenance. They examine His feet. They want to feel for themselves whether those feet are really spiked. They put out their hands and touch the spikes and bring them back wet with blood and wipe them on their garments. Women stand there and weep, but can do no good. It is no place for the tender-hearted women. It wants a heart that crimp has turned into granite. The waves of man's hatred and of hell's vengeance dash up against the mangled feet, and the hands of sin and pain and torture clutch for his holy heart. Had he not been thoroughly fastened to the cross they would have torn Him down and trampled Him with both feet. How the cavalry horses arched their necks and champed their bits and reared and snifted at the blood! Had a Roman officer called out for a light, his voice would not have been heard in the tumult, but louder than the crash of spears, and the wailing of womanhood, and the neighing of the chargers, and the bellowing of the crucifiers, there comes a voice crashing through—loud, clear, overwhelming, terrific. It is the groaning of the dying Son of God! Look, what a scene! Look, world, at what you have done!

I lift the covering from the maltreated Christ to let you count the wounds and estimate the cost. Oh, when the nails went through Christ's right hand that bought your hands, with all their power to work and lift and write! When the nails went through Christ's right foot and Christ's left foot, that bought your feet, with all their power to walk or run or climb. When the thorn went into Christ's temple, that bought your brain, with all its power to think and plan. When the spear cleft Christ's side, that bought your heart, with all its power to love and repent and pray.

When the Atlantic cable was lost in 1865, do you remember that the Great Eastern and the Medway and the Albany went out to find it? Thirty times they sank the grapnel 2½ miles deep in water. After awhile they found the cable and brought it to the surface. No sooner had it been brought to the surface than they lifted a shout of exultation, but the cable slipped back again into the water and was lost. Then for two weeks more they swept the sea with the grappling hooks, and at last they found the cable, and they brought it up in silence. They fastened it this time. Then with great excitement they took one end of the cable to the electrician's room to see if there were really any life in it, and when they saw a spark and knew that a message could be sent then every hat was lifted, and the rockets flew and the guns sounded, until all the vessels on the expedition knew, and the continents were lashed together. Well, my friends, Sabbath after Sabbath Gospel messengers have come searching down for your souls. We have swept the sea with the grappling hook of Christ's Gospel. Again and again we have thought that you were at the surface, and we began to rejoice over your redemption, but at the moment of our gladness you sank back again into the world and back again into sin. To-day we come with the Gospel searching for your soul. We apply the cross of Christ first to see whether there is any life left in you, while all around the people stand, looking to see whether the work will be done, and the angels of God bend down and witness, and, oh, if now we could see only one spark of love and hope and faith we would send up a shout that would be heard on the battlements of Heaven, and two worlds would keep jubilee because communication is open between Christ and the soul, and your nature that has been sunken in sin has been lifted into the light and joy of the Gospel.

"That he is, indade."

"That he devours every thing in the way of a book or a paper that comes to the house."

"Shure, he does."

THE STORM GATHERING.

Concentration of Power in the Hands of Monopolists Will Hasten Anti-Trust Legislation.

The trade papers are beginning to realize that the consolidations and combinations which are now absorbing most of the great industries of the country are hastening the day of anti-trust legislation. The Metal Worker, while making a defense of the new steel trust, yet sees the possibility of legislation which will make such combinations impossible. It suggests that the undertaking was "forced by the desire to protect existing interests, seriously threatened as they were by possible warfare, rather than by a desire to unload the properties upon the public at inflated prices." It thinks it sees an advantage in the trust in that "the concentration of power in the hands of one large consolidation is expected to bring about a decided steadying of the markets."

It speaks in a commonplace way of one of the great evils of the trust, saying: "As a competitor, so huge an organization could develop very dangerous strength by waging war in one territory and drawing the shiews therefor from uncontested markets."

The Metal Worker evidently understands the methods employed by the trusts—methods which some, strange to say, seem to regard as legitimate business. And yet the paper quoted cannot refrain from a prophecy of trouble. It says:

"It will take clever management on the part of the consolidation to meet and break the force of aroused public opinion. Imagination is sure to be inflamed by the colossal undertaking now about to be consummated, and there will be many who are eager to fan the flames."

And again:

"It is certain that the new consolidation will lend much support to the anti-trust agitation and will be its shining mark. Keen eyes will watch every move, and unscrupulous demagogues and an unbridled yellow press will distort even the most trivial incident."

It will be seen that even the defenders of monopoly are conscious that the storm is gathering. Although they consider it "unscrupulous" and "demagogic" for anyone to condemn a trust, yet they are able to measure the force of public opinion when once it is aroused and they are fearful lest the reign of monopoly may, after all, be short lived.—The Commoner.

FINDS PLACES FOR ALL.

Plenty of Plums for Republican Office Seekers Under Our Royal President.

At the time of President McKinley's second inauguration, a few days since, some surprise was occasioned by the multitudes who thronged to Washington. It was remarked that a second-term president was an old story; his personality, his character, and his policy are known. Moreover it was supposed that the most powerful incentive—the hope of federal office—did not exist; for the reason that a reelection of the president usually means that the offices will, in the main, continue to be filled by the same incumbents as during the first term. It appears, however, that the crowds knew their business, and that there will be offices enough for all, to paraphrase Schley's famous remark after the Santiago victory. A Washington newspaper thus explains the situation, and shows its differences from the ordinary second-term opening:

"President McKinley is busy, in his affable way, receiving the many applicants for office who are in Washington with a view to one or another remunerative appointment. Fortunately for the dispenser of honors and places, he has a large number at his disposal. The executive government of the Philippines alone will demand a small army of placemen, who will have excellent pay, because the money comes out of the Filipinos, and many opportunities to turn a penny also at the cost of the natives. Cuba and Porto Rico offer other openings, and it is probable that many changes will be made in the diplomatic and consular service. Democrats are being turned out wholesale from the custom houses, subtreasuries, and so on. Altogether there are almost as many plums for the faithful as there were four years ago. All the office-seeker has to do is to prove his work in the late presidential campaign, and to be patient, but determined. Hordes of deserving strikers and healers in the past have gone away from the capital sorrowing and bitter, merely because they had not the wisdom or courage to refuse to take 'no' for an answer."

The army bill will also make places for a larger retinue of needy republican civilians, although the patronage in that line is supposed to be largely bespoken in advance by United States senators and representatives in congress, in consideration of votes cast in accordance with the McKinley policy.—Albany Argus.

——Midas, Croesus and the other rich fellows of antiquity look small in comparison with the new steel consolidation, with its capital of over a billion. The "dreams of avarice" will have to be expanded to take in the vast amount of capital now brought under one manager's control in a single line of business. If large businesses can confer on an industry and its workers, together with consumers, the large benefits that some persons have predicted, this monster steel trust ought to prove it very quickly. One benefit it will almost certainly bring at an early date—tariff reform.—Baltimore Sun.

——In the fight for markets centralization in government must soon count for as much as centralization in industry, and when that centralization becomes necessary to the men that control the great trusts, have we any reason to believe that they will not exert themselves to the utmost to obtain it? It is well enough to be optimistic, but it is foolish to close our eyes to the fact that the supremest test of a republican form of government in the United States must in all probability be made during the next three or four decades.—Detroit Free Press.

TO SEARCH FOR WINDWARD.

Steamer Which Took Mrs. Peary and Miss Peary North to Be Looked Up.

The Peary Arctic club held its annual meeting the other afternoon and reelected President Morris K. Jesup, Treasurer Henry W. Cannon and Secretary Herbert L. Bridgeman, and referred to the executive committee the work of the coming summer. It is likely that a steamer will be chartered and dispatched to find the Windward, from which, since its departure from Godhaven, North Greenland, August 20, 1900, with Mrs. Peary and Miss Peary, nothing has been heard. The instructions to Capt. Bartlett, of the steamer, were definite not to remain north except upon express orders of Lieut. Peary, and the inference therefore is that the party have wintered at his headquarters, where abundant supplies are stored, and would be likely with the opening of arctic navigation to return.

The club, however, prefers to be on the safe side and to leave nothing doubtful, though the only promise to Capt. Bartlett was that if the Windward did not return during 1901 a steamer would be sent to his relief in 1902. It is not likely that the Peary club's steamer will take any passengers, either scientific or sportsmen, the cruise being restricted to the urgent business in hand.

The club is confident of the complete success of Mr. Peary's undertaking and holds absence this winter indicates his sure return next summer, after having visited the pole.

GETS FASHIONS FROM CHICAGO

Confession by a Paper in London That Patterns Are Secured from Western City.

When London goes to Chicago for fashion notes things begin to look somewhat topsy-turvy, but a ladies' column in one of the papers the other day showed an instance of this kind.

An Englishwoman furnished the paper with the pattern of a dressing sacque, which she said she had picked up in one of the large stores in Chicago. The garment had been a revelation in the matter of fit, comfort and cheapness. So, after wearing it out she pulled it to pieces and took measurements of the pattern, which she sent as an idea to English makers to copy.

Accompanying the letter was a statement comparing the prices of ladies' ready-made garments in London and Chicago, and showing the advantage of the latter.

One has heard this confirmed by women living in London, who have tried to duplicate in London the purchases from large dry goods stores in New York and Chicago, but found it cheaper to send to America and pay the carriage.

Peach Growing in Michigan.

Berrien county, Mich., on the record of 1900 claims to be the greatest peach-growing section in the world. The number of acres cultivated last year was 4,753, and the total yield of peaches was 140,992 bushels, being more than half the entire Michigan crop. Van Buren county came next, with 58,887 bushels.

What Will Become of China?

None can foresee the outcome of the quarrel between foreign powers over the division of China. It is interesting to watch the going to pieces of this ancient but unprogressive race. Many people in America are also going to pieces because of dyspepsia, constipation, blood, liver and stomach diseases. We are living too fast, but strength, vigor and good health can be retained if we keep off and cure the above diseases with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters.

The Man and the Microbe.

At this point in the fable the Man marveled greatly in that he had not met the Microbe long since.

"Why, for the most part in the guys who didn't boil the drinking water!" replied the Microbe, candidly.

AMONG THE RAILWAYS.

Rock Island Will Run Cheap Excursions to Colorado.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific railway, which made a phenomenal success of cheap excursion rates to Colorado last season, has again asked its competitors in the Western and Southwestern Passenger associations to agree upon a series of cheap excursions to and from Denver, Colorado Springs and Pueblo for the approaching season on the following basis: Tickets to be sold from Chicago and all territory up to Missouri river June 18, 25, July 16, 23, and 30, Aug. 6, 13, 20 and 27, at the rate of one fare plus $2, or $31.50 for the round trip.

On July 2 and 9 and Sept. 3 and 10 a rate of $25 is to be made from Chicago, and $15 from Missouri river points for the round trip. Intermediate territory will have proportionate rates. Tickets are to be sold from Missouri river points one day later than the dates given above in each case. Proportionate rates will be made to and from Glenwood Springs, Salt Lake City and Ogden.

A series of East bound excursions is also proposed, tickets to be sold from Colorado common points every Thursday, commencing with June 20 up to and including Sept. 12, at a rate of one fare plus $2 for the round trip. All tickets will be limited for return passage to October 31. These rates will be tendered connecting lines for basing purposes, which will probably insure a very low basis of rates throughout the United States for these excursions.

The Chicago, Rock Island and Pacific will unquestionably make these rates and arrangements effective, regardless of the action of its competitors, and will run special trains, only one night out to and from Colorado, on the dates named.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

Always Up-to-Date.

The Passenger Department of the Union Pacific Ry. has recently issued a twenty-eight page booklet of "The Overland Limited." It is a magnificent specimen of printing, artistic in the highest degree, and is embellished with views of the train mentioned both interior and exterior, together with much information regarding the service, and also interesting points on the route to California. It makes one feel like putting his affairs in order with the least possible delay and taking a trip to the Golden Gate. The Union Pacific was the pioneer line Westward, and it is not too much to say that it has maintained the prestige which that fact gave it. A trip to California over the Union Pacific in connection with the Chicago & Northwestern and Southern Pacific Systems is a delight at all times.

A Woman's Glory.

Plentiful hair is a woman's glory, which all those who lack it can appreciate. When Mr. A. M. All thus affected should use Palmer's Lotion." In connection with the Lotion, Palmer's Lotion Soap should be used to clean the hair, and it has all the medicinal qualities of the Lotion and makes a delightful shampoo. A CARD.

I wish to state to the consistent public, that owing to the extravagance of our particular subject I must criticise the origin. As I have learned statements have been frequently made of late to the effect, namely: That I sold out my part of stock to Mr. L. C. Bannister, and obligated myself to him to refrain from business in Erlanger. Now I will tell you that any such statement whatever is absolutely false in every particular, as my or our (Mr. Bannister and my) contract or article of agreement shows. We divided our stock equally, and neither he no I assumed any such obligation as has been stated by some who would try to injure a man because he fills a man's place. Now I hope sincerely this false alarm may be thoroughly understood, and regarded as it deserves to be, and that I may still have your confidence and support as of old. I Remain Most Respectfully yours,

IRA AYLOR.

Cunningham.—Richmond Climax.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and ries good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather side quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes. If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

Lawyers who have read the opinions of the Court of Appeals in the Powers case say the record made by Judge Cantrill in the trial of the case is almost without a parallel in the history of jury trials in the State. Out of 347 exceptions filed by the defense, the Court of Appeals sustains Judge Cantrill on all but four points.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 10, 1901. NO. 25.

THE primary election is over, and a great many picked some of the winners, but failed to connect with the entire slate.

IF it was not afraid it might be hauled up for contempt of court the RECORDER might remark that it is about time for Judge Tarvin to spring another sensation.

THE capture of Anguinaldo is confidently expected to bring the Phillippine war to a close, but progress in that direction has not been very great as yet.

THE loop holes made for escape by the opinion of the Appellate Court in the Powers case are so few, that the attorneys for Powers have given notice that they will file a petiton asking a modification of the opinion.

IF the Democrats show up in the fall election in Ohio as surprisingly as they did at the city elections held in that State on Monday of last week, sombody's Senatorial toga will be in jeopardy. But then there is that "if" figuring in the matter.

Gen. Cassius M. Clay fired on a deputy sheriff's posse that had gone to White Hall to several writ on him Friday. A pitched battle resulted, and the Old Lion was wounded, while several of the officers had narrow escapes. Gen. Clay's friends fear his mind is unbalanced.

When the county committee met, Monday, to count the vote cast at the primary election, J. W. Kennedy offered his resignation as a member of the committee and recommended J. L. Fraizer, of Union, as his successor. The resignation was accepted, and Mr. Fraizer was chosen to fill the vacancy.

IF each legislative district in the State should send as good a man to the House this winter as Boone proposes to send, the State will profit by reason of the next session of the legislature. This item was put in type before the vote was cast last Saturday, it being perfectly applicable, no matter which of the candidates won the nomination for representative.

"The most gifted man I ever knew in the way of memory," said a friend to the Times, "lived on Cumberland river in Monroe county. He was a born student and while he never made the least effort to turn his information into account was possessed of a store that would have stood him in good stead in the presence of men whose names have lived for generations in mind and song. He could repeat whole pages of books that he had not seen in ten years, and knew the history of America and her distinguished men as thoroughly as any ever did. When he died he was conveyed to his last resting place by friends and neighbors, who i. ife regarded him as a plain citizen, if but he had lived in the centers of activity his wonderful gift would have won for him fame and fortune."—Scottville Times.

Where it is possible to do so the laying hens should be separated from the rest of the flock. This is necessary because they should be fed differently. They should have a certain kind of feed and about as much of it as they willeat up clean. Whether the mash is fed morning or evening it should consist of a good egg-producing ration, but one made up of the various feeds such as bran, oats, corn meal, meat and middlings will do. A little salt and red pepper may be used to advantage at this season of the year. Alternate feeds by feeding whole grain. We do not like food that is made too soft and watery for anything. Feed in any manner that will prevent waste and at a time when the fowls are accustomed to being fed. If they are laying well they should have plenty of feed, for it is difficult to feed too much to a laying hen while she is laying. She is producing eggs at a rapid rate and she will not have to lay eggs many weeks until she reproduces her own weight. This requires food. If kept in comfortable quarters less will be required to keep up the animal heat, hence there is a saving by keeping them in warm houses.

Live Stock Notes.

Salt and ashes aid digestion in swine.

Lice rarely infest hogs that have plenty of sulphur.

Rusty old straw is one of the worst materials for bedding for swine.

Every swine breeder should have ample pasture for the pigs, with abundant clean water.

Every hog showing any sign of sickness should be at once taken out of the herd and isolated for treatment.

Cholera will be prevented if sulphur be mixed with the salt and ashes. The sulphur may be mixed with slop also.

When a pig refuses to eat and thumps and his hair is turned the wrong way, trot him out and give him a dose of ax. Make the dose a big one.

Let the pigs ask for their feed occasionally; just to put an edge on their appetite. As soon as they squeal for something to eat let them have it.

Texas is the banner mule state. Pike county, Mo., has the record for large mules of the kicking type.

A sheep seldom ever bleats unless he wants feed or salt or water. This innocent animal is a most facinating study for the lover of live stock.

There are a number of farmers in Illinois feeding 1,500 lambs this winter. A similarly large number fed lambs last winter. Why are they at it again? They made money last year and they will make it this winter.

A carriage or coach horse, the kind one sees in the cities on the driving thoroughfares, always shows style and manners, but very little speed. He does not need to have speed to constitute him a first class coacher.

Keep the mules trimmed nicely, but let the horses alone. They need their long manes and tails to complete their beauty, just as the young woman needs "a wealth of hair "to finish her appearance.

If you have horses to sell don't be smart and cut off their manes and tails, thinking you are doing the thing so English, "don't you know?" When you cut off the mane you cut off $25 from the value of the animal.

Ventilation is one means of warmth to a flock. Hot impure air chills instead of warming. There must be plenty of oxygen in the air or there will be no heat derived from it and the blood is not purified. Thus even in cold weather abundance of air must be let in the pens.

Overcrowding sheep is injurious. It is most so when the fleece is wet and the skin becomes overheated by reason of the sweating fleece. Then the skin is inflamed and the wool loosens or becomes felted by the warmth and pressure. Sheep will overheat in quite cold weather.

A farm flock will profitably enjoy a run on corn stubble which may have a good depth of snow on it, on pleasant winter days. What is good at one time or season may not be at another. Sheep may like to browse on pine brush in the summer, but it does not follow that this is good feed in the winter.

Where compulsory dipping is enforced, our Bureau of Animal Industry gives the choice of lime and sulphur and other preparations containing "certain ingredients." The "other dips" are of course chosen, and if scab is ever eradicated through the efforts of the Bureau, it will be the "other dips" instead of lime and sulphur that accomplish this result.

We are advised by the promoters that a $2,000,000 sheep company will be incorporaten shortly. The interested parties have commenced to secure options on breeding ewes in lots of 100,-000 and are also in the field of options on sheep ranches that can show a good profit during the past two years. It is a huge scheme and the sheep public will be interested in the final outcome.— American Sheep Breeder.

Editorial Paragraphs.

The girls at a certain Chicago seminary are said to be enjoying a very swell social experience. They have the mumps.

Mr. Rodenburg's friends contend that he is just as good a civil service man as McKinley was a gold man when elected on a gold platform. Come to think of it, maybe this is true.

General Harrison's last conscious words are said to have been an expression of pity for the wrongs of the Boers, a fact which if true, should endear him to lovers of liberty everywhere.

Mr Roosevelt's home town of Cyster Bay has been carried by the Democrats for the first time in history. We do not attempt to explain why this occurred. We merely rub our hands and smile.

No doubt the latest official scandal in the Philippines will prove highly edifying to the benighted heathen whom we are teaching to walk in the straight and narrow path of official rectitude.

Commissioner Evans, it is said has been forced to resign at last, despite his bitter protests. The White House coterie still insists that he has been yearning to leave office for months. Evidently somebody is lying.

Will General MacArthur now apologize to Editor Rice, whom he expelled from Manila for exposing the scandals which have now become so marked that the Government has been forced to make numerous arrests on account of them?

Senator Foraker is said to be very uneasy over the situation in Ohio. He may well be. If the Democrats carry the legislature, a Democrat will be chosen to Foraker's seat in the Senate; if the Republicans win, a friend of Mr. Hanna's will be chosen. It seems to be a case of the devil and the deep blue sea with Foraker.

The Cream.

Never let cream thicken.

Strain the milk as soon as drawn.

Never let milk or cream get chilled.

The best place to salt is in the churn.

Butter once warmed through will lose its flavor.

The food of the dairy cows must be uniform.

Slow milking and dallying is an injury to the dairy cow.

Extremes of ups and downs in food tend to dry up a cow.

Butter fat is the thing that determines the profit or loss in dairying.

In buying cows do not judge them solely by the amount of milk they give.

Keep the cream at 70 degrees before churning, do not let it stand too long; churn when it coagulates.

Berlin is to have schools for coachmen, in which drivers are to be taught how to get along in crowded city streets.

Pith of the Press.

One cannot help thinking that Aguinaldo would like to have taken something with that oath.—Atlanta Ledger.

While Mrs. Nation was in Cincinnati, did she make a trip Over the Rhine.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

The Fillipinos are not American citizens and they are not foreigners they are just Fillipinos.—Philadelphia Ledger.

It really looks as if Mr. Funston would manage to get away with his glory without precipitating a controversy of any kind.—Washington Star.

Did those men in the Quartermaster's Department over in Manila take what did not belong to them, or merely "annex" it?—Boston Herald.

President McKinley has never been accused of being irreverent. The way he is honoring the dead ones in his recent appointments is proof that he has not changed.—St. Louis Republic.

It may reasonably be assumed that Aguinaldo is not making advances without encouragement. We predict that he will wind up a "patriot" and our Republican contemporaries should be prepared for it.—Indianpolis Sentinel.

We have always contended that the power of preventing the debauchery of the voters by the using of money and whisky in the primary elections lies largely within the control of the county committees.

Is there any good reason why the committees cannot exercise their influence and best efforts toward purifying the primary contests by securing the pledges of the several candidates to abstain from the use of all money and whisky themselves and to do all in their power to keep their friends from it?

We are satisfied that such an agreement would be readily entered into by the candidates, and that, when once pledged, they would in almost every instance abide by it, because they would recognize it to be to their best interests to do so. The voters have no use for the candidate who violates pledged faith and his promises.

As our primary is now a thing of the past, without apparent reflection upon anyone, the suggestion of this or any better scheme that will lessen, if not stop, the evils complined of is timely.—Cynthianna Democrat.

The Franklin Circuit Court convened April 1st with quite a large docket. There are one hundred and sixty-one Commonwealth cases, eighty-six of which were continued from last term. There are twenty-three fiscal cases, fifteen of which were continued from the last term. There are seventy-seven common law cases, sixty-three of which were continued from the last term, and there are two hundred and ninety-five equity cases, two hundred and forty-nine of which were continued cases, making a total of five-hundred and fifty-six cases on the docket for this term. It looks to us like it is time for Franklin county to commence clamoring for a court of continuous session.—Western Argus.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poison set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but," he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1½ boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was as sound and well as ever." For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, and blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival. Try them. W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. Grant, Bellevue, will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

CARROLL COUNTY.

[News.]

Jo. T. Pyles sold his crop of tobacco about 7,000 lbs. to Harry Ketchum at 8½ cts all round.

A. J. Dunn sold to same his crop of about 4,500 lbs, at 8 cents for all but spodge and that at 4 cents. He also sold his and John Trinkle's crop of about 3,500 lbs, at 9 and 4 cents.

A dispatch from Frankfort yesterday morning announces the death of Geo. Herzog, which occurred Tuesday night from heart failure superinduced by rheumatism. He was about 24 years old, and was sentenced for 16 years at the January court for the killing of officer James T. Martin. His remains were shipped here for burial.

The splendid new rock crusher owned by Carroll county was brought in Thursday by "Squires Ramey and Dean, who are justly proud of their purchase. It was taken over the Kentucky river bridge, which stood the test without a quiver. It's right new as yet and of course not thoroughly regulated; when in good running order it will easily crush 80 yards of stone per day, and make them as fine as desired.

A Raging, Roaring Flood

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terriole cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Ohmaha said I had consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." Positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung troubles by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. Grant, Bellevue.—Price 50c and $1.00.

Cynthiana court the Democrat says: The day was rainy, preventing a large attendance, and but little stock on the market, which was of medium quality. Sold for Arnold & Gardner eight two-year old steers at $4.45 per hundred; ten yearling steers at about 4.50; some mountain steers and heifers at from $30 to $35. Fresh milch cows were in demand; sold several from $35 to $40 per head. Common work horses and mules were looked after from $25 to $75; several good sales were made privately at the stables for prime and sound ones.

On Tuesday while Earnest Webster, aged 23, late of this place, was working at Johnson's Cordage Works in Madison, he had his hand caught in a picking machine, mashing it in such a manner that it was necessary to amputate the thumb, index and middle fingers on his right hand. He also sustained serious injuries about the face, scalp and arms.

Chas F. Goslee resigned his position as private secretary to Dr. Joe G. Furnish, superintendent of Lakeland asylum, to make room for a Democrat, Victor Swope, of Owen county. Charley has been a most valuable assistant to his late father and also to Dr. Furnish, as he was thoroughly acquainted with the detail work of the asylum. He came up Tuesday night for a few days' visit to home folks.

Probably the most remarkable funeral that ever took place in the State was that of Thomas Sapp. He was born in Hancock county fifty-two years ago, and remained in bed forty-one years. He had traveled all over the world and made quite a fortune. Thirteen years ago he left home to travel with a show, and had never been home until Sunday morning when his remains were brought here and laid to rest in the cemetery at Dukes. He was thirty-two inches high and weighed forty pounds, and was said to be the smallest man in the world. Sapp was ossified.—Hawesville Plaindealer.

PRIMARY ELECTION NOTES.

Everybody had a tally sheet in his pocket, Saturday.

There were two close finishes —especially that for sheriff.

No serious difficulties reported as a result of Saturday's primary.

A large vote was polled, Saturday. Considerable interest was manifested in nearly every race.

Jailer Adams' popularity is increasing—he received more votes last Saturday than were cast for him four years ago.

The election at Burlington passed off quietly, although there were several energetic workers who were hustling in the interest of their respective favorites.

The news came in by telephone from all the precincts except Bellevue, and came slowly, and in some of the races first one candidate and then the other was in the lead, and the suspense during some of the intervals was painful to the closely pushed candidates who were present.

Esq. Byland and two or three others received the returns by the telephone in Lassing & Riddell's office. A close tab was kept on the Representative's race, and when all the precincts were heard from except Rabbit Hash Mr. Kennedy was leading by 21 vote's and then Mr. Byland conceded his nomination.

The nominations for district offices were as follow:

No. 4—M. C. Norman, justice of the peace, L. B. Dickerson, constable, receiving 96 votes to Martin Bailey's 51.

No. 5—J. H. Watson, justice of the peace, receiving 178 votes to J. J. Hudson's 159, Thomas Johnson, constable.

No. 6—J. H. Walton, justice of the peace, having received 151 to B. F. Sawyers' 149; Al Clutterbuck, constable, having received 62 votes to S. A. Tanner's 58; John Hampton's 28; Ben Osborns 53; Dave Buffington's 4.

Fisher Mitchell, who kept the toll gate near Burlington on the Petersburg pike for many years, died of consumption at the County Infirmary this morning. He had been there about ten days.

To make dairying the most profitable success, there must be a thorough knowledge of dairy cattle and their capacity as milk and butter producers. Feeding for a maximum butter yield with special reference to the lowest cost. A knowledge of cream raising and churning in order to obtain all of the butter which is in the milk. The profitable utilization of the skimmilk or by products.

Jail Roof Burnt Off.

Just as we were going to press this morning the jail roof was discovered to be on fire. The bucket brigade responded to the alarm and soon had the blaze under control, but the roof was in a manner destroyed. The fire was the result of a defective flue that has been giving the jailer considerable trouble. The Burlington bucket brigade is very apt to knock out a fire when it gets anything like an equal start with it.

The colored man confined in the jail gave the alarm by his yelling, and lost no time in getting out when the doors were unlocked.

The term, "halycon days," is derived from a pretty little fable of the Sicilians, who believed that during the seven days preceding and following the winter solstice, December 21, the halycon or kingfisher floated on the water in a nest in which her young were deposited, and that during this time of her brooding the seas were calm. OATH OF ALLEGIANCE.

Filipino Leader Renounces the So-Called Revolutionary Government.

Aguinaldo Will Urge Insurgents to Accept It—Is Preparing a Manifesto.

Washington, April 3.—The war department Tuesday received information from Gen. MacArthur that Aguinaldo has taken the oath of allegiance to the United States under the terms of amnesty offered by Gen. MacArthur by direction of the president.

The dispatch conveying this information contained much more than was given to the public. The portion withheld related to the future disposition of Aguinaldo, and made suggestions as to what the late chief of the insurrection might accomplish. No official statement could be obtained as to what finally would be done with the prisoner, who was captured last week by Gen. Fred Funston, but it was emphatically stated that he would be held for the present, but would be granted all possible immunity consistent with existing conditions. Gen. MacArthur has hopes that a great deal may be accomplished through Aguinaldo. During the time he has been a prisoner he has made quite a favorable impression upon Gen. MacArthur.

It has been suggested that under the terms of the notice of amnesty the prisoner should be set at liberty at once, but there is a provision in the amnesty proclamation which says that those who have violated the laws of war are excepted from its terms.

New York, April 3.—A Washington dispatch to the Herald says:

Important proposals, contemplating the surrender of all the insurgent forces in the Philippines, have been made to this government by Aguinaldo.

These proposals were stated in a dispatch received Tuesday from Maj. Gen. MacArthur, which also contained the news that the former insurgent leader had subscribed to the oath of allegiance to the United States.

Manila, April 4.—Chief Justice Arellano, who administered to Emilio Aguinaldo the oath of allegiance to the United States government, described Wednesday to a press representative the conditions leading up to and attending the ceremony which was semi-private.

Aguinaldo, still detained in an apartment of the Malacanan palace and awaiting orders from Washington, had expressed himself as anxious to learn more regarding the American system of government and had asked Chief Justice Arellano to enlighten him. The chief justice carefully explained the various measures passed by the Philippine commission, headed by Judge Taft, and showed him what provisions were made for education and progress and for municipal and provincial self-government. Listening with deep interest, Aguinaldo finally exclaimed: "I never believed the Americans would be so fair and liberal."

Before the conversation had ended he had agreed to take the oath of allegiance, and this was immediately administered.

Senor Arellano says: "Aguinaldo's action will induce all the insurgents to surrender, and I predict that the Islands will be completely pacified by June."

Aguinaldo is eager to visit the United States, but when I questioned him on the subject of holding office, he replied that he had no desires in that direction, and intended to retire to private life after a trip to America.

Washington, April 4.—After a consultation with the president, Secretary Root Wednesday night sent a cable message to Gen. MacArthur, giving him instructions regarding Aguinaldo and the views of the administration of some recommendations as to the Philippine affairs made by Gen. MacArthur. The contents of the cablegram will not be made public at present. It was stated at the war department Wednesday that Gen. MacArthur had made no communication relative to Aguinaldo Wednesday, and that the attitude of this government toward the insurgent chief has not changed.

Manila, April 5.—Aguinaldo has the assistance of Chief Justice Arellano and of Mr. Fisher, Gen. MacArthur's private secretary, in preparing his manifesto. The work is not completed, and the tenor of the contents is not divulged.

Chief Justice Arellano had a long conference with Aguinaldo. He says Aguinaldo is realizing the futility of further resistance, and is desirous of sparing the Filipinos additional distress, trusting to the justice and generosity of the American people. The chief of the revolution will urge the insurgents to cease fighting and accept American sovereignty.

Parkersburg, W. Va., April 4.—A big flood is coming down the Little Kanawha river. At Burnsville, the river is reported out of its banks. At Grantsville 30 feet is expected, and logs are passing 2,500 an hour. Considerable damage will be done.

RURAL FREE DELIVERY.

Superintendent Machen Issues a Circular of Instructions in Regard to This Service.

Washington, April 5.—Superintendent A. W. Machen, of the free delivery bureau of the post office department, has issued a circular of instructions covering rural free delivery throughout the country. It directs that petitioners for such service be heads of families, who shall show the relative population along the route, character of the roads, principal avocations of the people, and distances each one now has to travel to receive mail. A map of the routes proposed is preferred. The petition must be endorsed by either a senator or representative in congress. Each route must be over 20 miles long, serving at least 100 families, and those desiring the delivery hereafter must be prepared to put up suitable boxes. These boxes will be entitled to the protection of the United States statutes. Rural carriers are not required to deliver mail to houses standing back from the road. They may carry other business than United States mail. Patrons are required to co-operate by keeping the roads up to the standard in all weather. The maximum pay for carriers now is $500 per annum for a full route of approximately 25 miles. Carriers are to carry a supply of stamps, stamped envelopes and postal cards, and must cancel stamps on all letters collected.

IN INTEREST OF FORESTRY.

Young Trees Will Be Distributed Throughout the Country by the Agricultural Department.

Washington, April 5.—A new plan, having for its object the distribution of young trees throughout the country, will be put into practical operation by Secretary Wilson, of the agricultural department, next year. Preparations for this work are now in progress by the department, and many of the seedlings will be propagated in the grounds of the office here. An investigation has been made to discover the varieties which will thrive best in the various localities and the distribution will be made in a manner somewhat similar to that employed in the seed distribution authorized by congress. Especial attention will be given to trees of the nut-bearing, shade and lawn variety and oaks. Ashes and linden will constitute a prominent portion of the distribution. The secretary believes the idea will prove popular, and in view of the rapidly diminishing forest reserves, will be a decided benefit to the country.

TO BE MADE BUREAUS.

A Number of the Divisions of the Department of Agriculture Will Be Changed on July 1.

Washington, April 5.—Secretary Wilson is engaged on plans under which a number of divisions of the department of agriculture will be made bureaus on July 1. The divisions of forestry, chemistry and soils will be made bureaus and other divisions, whose work has to do with plants, will be consolidated into one bureau, to be known as the bureau of plants industry.

The grouping of the plant division, particularly the botany and pathology divisions, will secure economy by avoidance of frequent duplication of work. Prof. B. T. Galloway, of Missouri, now horticulturist and superintendent of gardens and grounds and formerly chief of the division of vegetable physiology, will be assigned as chief of the bureau of plants.

ANOTHER GUSHER.

A Well Drilled In Near Beaumont, Tex., That Is an Equal to the Famous Lucas Well.

Pittsburgh, April 5.—Col. J. M. Guffey, of this city, has drilled in another gusher near Beaumont, Tex. The oil, when struck, shot up in a solid column 100 feet above the top of the derrick, but a gate valve had been put in so that the flow of oil was readily shut in. This new gusher is the equal of the famous Lucas well, and makes the third this company has shut in awaiting the completion of the pipe line to Port Arthur and additional tankage.

Acting Secretary of the Navy.

DROVE OFFICERS AWAY.

Gen. Cassius M. Clay Has a Battle With a Sheriff's Posse.

It Is Reported the General Was Wounded—The Attacking Party Retired Without Serving the Writ of Delivery.

Lexington, Ky., April 6.—With the cry, "The Vendetta!" on his lips, Gen. Cassius Marcellus Clay, the famous abolitionist and duellist and former United States minister to Russia, led his little bodyguard to battle against a sheriff's posse which had gone to White Hall to serve papers upon the general in a civil case instituted against him by his daughter, Mrs. Mary B. Clay.

Many shots were fired on each side, and the posse finally departed without accomplishing the purpose of its visit. It is reported that Gen. Clay was wounded in the affray.

The principals in the battle were Gen. Clay and two of his bodyguard, Bud Literell and Jim Bolin, on one side, and Sheriff Colyer, Deputy Terrill and Frank Mason, of Madison county, on the other. The writ which the sheriff sought to serve was one ordering delivery of some furniture belonging to the general's daughter. The officers approached the house from the north, passing through the apple orchard. The general's Russian bulldogs set up a barking and the officers stopped at the yard. The general's bodyguard promptly came to the door and the sheriff announced that he desired a personal interview with the master of White Hall. Gen. Clay, in a few moments, came to the door, revolver in hand.

"Gen. Clay," said the sheriff, "we are here on a peaceful mission."

"You are on my property without leave and I will shoot you," replied the old man, who, almost blind, strained his eyes as if trying to make out the location of the enemy.

Sheriff Colyer sought shelter behind a large oak tree nearby, and his deputies also hid themselves. All pulled their weapons. Gen. Clay began firing in the direction from which he heard the voices.

The sheriff fired in return after the general had emptied the weapon, and his deputies also fired, they say, hoping to scare him into seeking shelter. Colyer was shooting wild, also, not desiring to kill the old man, who, although doing his best to kill him, believing he was firing upon an enemy.

After emptying the shotgun, Gen. Clay tried his revolver, which would not fire. He then took from the hands of the other guard a rifle and discharged it in the direction of the frightened sheriff and deputies. Exhausting his ammunition, Gen. Clay sought retreat. He went into his room, and, putting up the iron bars, ordered his men to adjust the pistols, three large navy weapons, always kept lying on a dresser. He armed himself with a large bowie knife and butcher knife. Stationing himself by the side of the door, he awaited further attack.

Some months ago Gen. Clay, who had been left alone after his child wife, Dora Richardson, ran away and left him, sent for Mrs. Mary B. Clay, a daughter, to come and live with him. Two weeks ago he told his daughter to go to his family and secure their consent to the release of all claims on the property which he occupies. He wanted to give the property to Dora, the young divorced wife, who is now the wife of Riley Brock, and resides on property given her by the general.

Mrs. Clay went away according to orders, and, returning a day or so later, was met at the door by the old man. His eyes were fiery. In his trembling hand he held a revolver grasped tightly. He demanded to know the result of the visit.

"It's all right," said the frightened daughter.

"All right is it?" retorted the infuriated man. "You lie. I know you are deceiving me." Leveling his revolver at his daughter's head, he added: "Leave my house and never come here again."

Securing a writ of delivery for her furniture, Mrs. Clay placed the paper in the hands of Sheriff Colyer. Gen. Clay still loves the child he married, and wants to give her his property, which at his death goes to his children. He thinks the "vendetta," about which he has talked and written for years, is on, and believed that he was shooting at his enemies, come to murder him in his home.

Poison for Quinine.

Quincy, Ill., April 6.—Mrs. Alex Uhland, of Newton, died from poison administered by her mother in the belief that it was quinine. Most Occupations.

Half the world seems to have found uncongenial occupations. Servant girls are trying to teach; natural teachers are tending stores; good farmers are murdering law, while Choates and Websters are running down good farms; and good farmers, in turn, are farming still in congress. Artists are spreading daubs on canvas who should be whitewashing board fences, Shoemakers write good verses for the village paper and natural statesmen are pounding shoe lasts, while other shoemakers are cobbling in legislative halls. Good mechanics and electricians are trying to preach sermons, and wondering why their congregations continue to sleep, while the Beechers are failing as merchants.—Success.

This is often the case when people strive to be economical, but where one's health is concerned it is false economy to be without simple remedies that cost but moderate prices. When Mr. C. W. Almost every druggist has Palmer's Lotion, but if yours does not, send to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl Street, New York, for samples of Palmer's Lotion and Lotion Soap.

A CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

It Will Be Established in the Philippine Islands July 1.

It Will Be Inaugurated in All the Larger Central Islands Excepting Samar and Mindoro—City Government for Manila.

Cagayan, Mindanao, P. I., April 8.—In response to interrogatories from Mr. Elihu Root, United States secretary of war, the Philippine commission has prepared recommendations as to the form of general civil government to be established for the Philippines July 1, and to continue until congress shall have organized a permanent government for the archipelago.

This temporary civil government is expected to consist of a governor, a cabinet and a legislative council, and it is believed that the members of the present commission will act as the principal advisers of Gov. Gen. Taft, although there will probably be a few Filipoinos in the council. The members of the provincial legislature will be appointed.

The commission will reach Manila May 1, after establishing provincial governments in all the large central Islands excepting Semar and Mindoro.

As soon as routine business has been disposed of, the commission will proceed to the organization of every remaining province in the island of Luzon, and will also deal with the matter of city government for Manila.

Conferences last week with many Morros, Mindanao tribesmen and others confirmed the members of the commission in their intention not to substitute provincial for departmental government in Mindanao and the Sulu group except by the organization of the province of Northern Mindanao. Judge Taft says the matter of abolishing slavery can and will be handled deliberately and tactfully, but that no legislation affecting polygamy among the savages is probable.

Capistrano, in a speech of welcome to the commissioners, participated in Sunday's discussion at Mismis. After completing the work of organization there, the commissioners visited Dapitan.

CLEARING THE HARBOR.

Santiago de Cuba, April 8.—Fifteen hundred pounds of dynamite were used by the authorities of the port in blowing up the forward superstructure of the sunken United States collier Merrimac, which has long impeded the entrance to the harbor. The explosion was plainly heard in the city five miles away.

Divers immediately descended and found 40 feet of clear water over the forward portion of the wreck.

Port Capt. Irvin began Monday to place mines aft, which he expects to explode in a week, thus completely clearing the harbor entrance.

The incident was highly spectacular. Residents on Smith Key, adjacent to the wreck, left the island fearing that their houses would be demolished. The overlooking hills were lined with people, and large numbers of pleasure vessels encircled the wreck at a safe distance. When the electric button was touched a pyramid of water rose 40 feet, and the surface was immediately covered with wreckage and tons of dead fish. The launches and yachts returned to the city laden with souvenirs of the wreck.

MADE A DASH FOR LIBERTY.

Prentice Tiller and G. H. Grant Escape From Officers—The Former Recaptured.

Chicago, April 8.—Prentice Tiller and G. H. Grant, alias A. B. Chase, alias C. Martin, who were recently arrested in Nebraska, and who were wanted by the federal authorities in Cincinnati and other cities, for robbing the United States mails, made a sensational dash for liberty in the Union station Sunday evening. Grant made his escape from the officers, who had the two men in charge, and is still at large. Tiller was captured. When they made their break for freedom they had just arrived in Chicago in charge of Deputy United States Marshal J. O. Moore and Sergt. Michael Dempsey, of Omaha. Before leaving the train the leg irons on the prisoners were changed to handcuffs, so they could go up the stairs to the dining room for breakfast. During the change one of the prisoners in some way got possession of the key to the handcuffs.

Sergt. Dempsey missed the key as soon as he reached the waiting room and, leaving the prisoners in charge of Deputy Moore, he returned to the car to search for it. With Deputy Moore sitting directly in front of them, Tiller fumbled with the handcuffs as if they were chafing his wrists and succeded in springing the lock.

Grant, the moment he was released, sprang upon Deputy Moore and pinioned his arms, telling Tiller to run. Tiller scrambled to his feet and started for the door, while the deputy marshal struggled with Grant, and frantically shouted an alarm to the startled passengers in the waiting room, directing them to catch Tiller. Grant informed the excited crowd that began to gather that Moore was a crazy man and told them not to pay any attention to his ravings. In response to the demands of the deputy some of the bystanders interfered. Moore left Grant in their charge and gave chase after Tiller.

When Deputy Moore returned to the station with Tiller in handcuffs he asked for Grant and was told by some of the bystanders that he had gone away. The police started on his trail, but lost trace of him a few blocks from the depot. Tiller was taken to Cincinnati Sunday night. Up to a late hour the police had not succeeded in locating Grant.

CANNIBALISM AT SEA.

Ghastly Story Told by Survivors of the Bark Angola Wrecked Near Manila.

London, April 8.—The Singapore correspondent of the Daily Express wires a ghastly story of cannibalism at sea brought to Singapore by two survivors of the Nova Scotian bark Angola, wrecked six days' sail from Manila, October 23 last. The correspondent says:

"The survivors, Johnson, a Swede, and Marticornu, a Spaniard, assert that the Angola struck a reef. Two rafts were built. The smaller, bearing five men, disappeared. The other, with 12 men, drifted for 40 days. The sailors ate barnacles, sea weed and finally their boots.

"On the 25th day two became insane and killed themselves. On the 26th a Frenchman killed the mate with an ax, drank his blood and tried to eat his brains, but was prevented by the others. Next day the Frenchman was killed while attempting to murder the captain. The survivors, all of whom were now insane, ate the Frenchman's body.

"Cannibalism continued until only Johnson and Marticornu remained. On the 43d day the raft stranded on Subi or Fiat, island in the Natuna group, northwest of Borneo. Johnson and Marticornu were awfully emaciated. Friendly Malays sent them by juk to Singapore."

PEACE NEGOTIATIONS.

There Is Likely to Be No Further Important Hitch.

Some of the Ministers Think That a Large Force of Troops Acting as Legation Guards Would Be a Great Mistake.

Peking, April 8.—Mr. Rockhill, United States special commissioner to Peking, had a long interview Saturday with Li Hung Chang, who satisfied him that there is not likely to be any further important hitch in the negotiations for a settlement between China and the powers. China has agreed to the list of punishments submitted by the ministers of the powers, asking only one concession, namely deprivation of office, instead of banishment, in the case of a man who is 70 years of age. To this the ministers have agreed.

Li Hung Chang says the court is extremely anxious to return to Peking as soon as the foreign troops evacuate the capital.

Some of the ministers of the powers begin to think that so large a force as 2,000 troops acting as legation guards in the city proper would be a great mistake. Such a body would have to remain in a space of one square mile. The troops could not be allowed outside the legation quarter armed, and it would probably not be safe for them to go unarmed.

It is thought by some of the ministers that, if the encampment were made from 12 to 15 miles away, with the necessary stores, this arrangement would be much preferable, as a telegram could bring the troops into the city immediately.

Moreover, several ministers have been insulted by troops of other nationalities. Mr. Rockhill and Sir Ernest Mason Satow, the British minister, were returning from dinner in Sedan chairs when the chairs were stopped by German soldiers, who proceeded to beat the bearers. The ladies of the party were greatly frightened.

The ministers generally fear that the presence in Peking of a considerable force of troops of various nationalities might be a source of international friction.

They are not entirely pleased with the military proposals of the generals, as they fail to see the necessity for the demolition of all forts.

WAR IN SOUTH AFRICA.

It Becomes Daily More Evident That the Boers Intend to Fight to a Finish.

London, April 8.—Lord Kitchener has informed the war office that 18 volunteer companies freed by reliefs are coming home and that arrangements are in progress for the speedy relief or further companies. He thus appears to be endeavoring to meet the demand that fresh troops be sent to the front to replace the state men.

The Pretoria correspondent of the Morning Post, who warns his countrymen against hoping for an early termination of hostilities or believing the stories that the Boers are tired of war, says:

"It becomes daily more evident that the Boers intend to fight to a finish. Many are surrendering, but they are men of no standing. The real fighting men are still on commando; and, although the recently successful British operations tend to bring the end nearer, it is evident that the Boers must be completely crushed before a general surrender is probable."

FOOT AND MOUTH DISEASE.

Agricultural Department Officials Watching All Reports From Abroad Concerning It.

Washington April 8.—The officials of the agricultural department are closely watching all reports from abroad concerning the extent of the foot and mouth disease, a fatal malady that is raging among the live stock in almost every country throughout Europe. For the last three years the outbreak has been general on the European continent, and the reports constantly arriving from various foreign points do not indicate any diminution in its extent. This government, as it has done since the epidemic reached such alarming dimensions, is refusing to admit any cattle, sheep or swine, except from the British Isles. This is done, not only to protect the vast live stock interests of this country, but also to protect over $30,000,000 or $40,000,000 annual export trade in cattle.

Military Value of Wheelmen.

London, April 8.—In the volunteer cyclists manouvers ordered by the British war office the attack on London Monday morning proved that the military value of wheelmen is largely dependent on the weather. The attacking force outgeneraled the defenders, but lost so many men in the rain and owing to the bad roads that it was unable to attack in force at the proper time.

The Thirtieth Volunteers.

RAILROAD COMBINATION.

All Great Systems in the United States to Be Placed Under Control of One Company.

New York, April 6.—Reports that huge railroad combinations are in process of formation are widely circulated here. Detailed statements concerning the plan already published looking to the combination of all the great railway systems of the United States under control of one company were given, but as a general thing prominent railroad officials and bankers declined to discuss the matter. According to all accounts the enterprise involved the greatest combination of capital ever known in the history of finance. It was said the company would be formed under the laws of New Jersey for the purpose of conducting general freight and transportation business throughout the United States; that the company would hold a controlling interest in all the great railway systems, and that the management of the road would be vested in the controlling company. According to the proposition each road would preserve its identity and corporate existence, but the new company would control the affairs of all. By this policy it was claimed large sums of money could be saved as a result of economies in management and the stoppage of rate cutting.

Dispatches received in this city Friday night from Cincinnati stated that a gigantic amalgamation of four railways under the guiding hand of J. Pierpont Morgan had already taken place. The roads mentioned were the Southern railway, the Cincinnati, Hamilton & Dayton, the Chicago, Indianapolis & Louisville and the Cincinnati Southern.

BROKE THE RECORD.

The Steamship Rhein, From Bremen, Landed 2,502 Passengers at Ellis Island.

New York, April 6.—The steamship Rhein, which arrived here from Bremen, broke the record as a passenger carrier. Besides her crew, which numbered over 400, she had 2,502 passengers. Of the latter but 53 came in the cabin.

The 2,449 steerage passengers were landed at Ellis Island, and although the officials there were busy with a thousand passengers brought here by other ships, those from the Rhein were passed before the immigrant depot closed for the day. The highest number of passengers of the third class which had previously arrived at this port on a single steamship was 2,200.

FIVE INCH NAVAL GUNS.

The First of the New Type Tested at Indian Head With Satisfactory Results.

Washington, April 6.—The first of the new type of five-inch naval guns designed for cruisers of the Denver class, was tested at the Indian Head proving grounds with very satisfactory results. A projectile weighing 60 pounds was fired with a powder charge of 26 pounds. The muzzle velocity reached the exceptionally high figure of 2,990 feet per second, showing a muzzle energy of 3,724-foot tons. This is 65 per cent. more muzzle energy than guns of the same type have made heretofore. It is sufficient to pierce seven inches of Krupp armor at the muzzle and five inches of Krupp armor at 2,000 yards.

LETTER CARRIERS.

An Innovation Looking to Their Comfort in Severe Hot Weather to Be Introduced.

Washington, April 6.—An innovation looking to the comfort of letter carriers throughout the country during the heat of summer probably will be introduced this year by official permission to them to divest their coats on their rounds when felt to be necessary. It is expected that the postmaster general in the near future will issue an order formally granting authority to postmasters for this purpose and modifying the requirements so as to allow the carriers to wear a suitable gray blouse, with turn-down collar and a black tie.

STATE ITEMS OF INTEREST.

DISAPPOINTED SWAINS.

The Elopement of Five Young Women From Potter College Nipped in the Bud.

Owensboro, Ky., April 5.—A sensation that happened in Bowling Green last Saturday night held the undivided attention of the grand jury Thursday and became public property, despite the utmost endeavors of many people of influence to have the details kept secret. The affair comprehends an interrupted elopement of five young women from Potter college, Bowling Green, one of the prominent seminaries for young women in the south.

About midnight five young men, all members of wealthy families, drove in carriages to the college and with ladders aided four young women to leave the building by climbing through the second story windows. While assisting the fifth to reach the ground the young men made so much noise that President Cabell was aroused. Seizing a shotgun, the president began shooting at the young men, who returned his fire. Two of the young men were wounded but the president was not hurt. The girls screamed, but returned to their rooms and the swains went away without them. The girls are members of the best families in Kentucky and if indictments shall be found it is probable they will have to appear as witnesses at the trial.

BORALMA AND THE ABBOTT.

An Effort Made to Secure a Race Between the Noted Trotters at Lexington in October.

Boston, April 6.—Efforts are being made to secure a match race between Boralma and The Abbott at the October meeting of the Kentucky Horse Breeders' association at Lexington, Ky., and Mr. Lawson, the owner of Boralma, has given his consent to the proposition. Should Mr. Scannell, the owner of The Abbott, see fit to accept the offer of the association, the match will be assured.

Secretary H. W. Wilson, of the association, in his letter to Mr. Lawson, asked: "Will you meet The Abbott with Boralma during our October meeting in Lexington, Ky., in a match for $10,000 a side, the association to add one-half of its gate receipts for that day which half we guarantee to amount to $10,000. If the match is made we will endeavor to arrange another race for a less sum between Crescens and Charley Herr. We have made same proposition to Mr. Scannell."

It is to this that Mr. Lawson has replied in the affirmative.

ELEVENTH ANNUAL MEETING.

American Saddle Horse Breeders' Association Adopts an Important Measure.

Louisville, Ky., April 6.—The eleventh annual meeting of the American Saddle Horse Breeders' association was held at Selbach's hotel Friday afternoon. An important measure was adopted which will cause numerous horses to be dropped from the register book. The blood lines of the foundation horses will be investigated, and a correct tabulated pedigree and history of them will be prepared and published in volume four of the register.

Two horses, Brinkers Drennon and Sam Booker, were ordered removed from the list, leaving their sires and given numbers in the register.

Gen. John B. Castleman, president of the association, congratulated the members that the demand had never been so great or prices so good for saddle horses as at present. He said breeders could add at least 50 per cent. to the value of each horse by early registration. The association decided to take membership in the National Live Stock association.

Steps were also taken looking toward an exhibit of saddle horses at the International Stock exposition, to be held at Chicago in December.

FUNERAL BENEFIT CO.,

In Kenton, Campbell and Boone Counties.

The announcement of the methods and terms of The Union Mutual Benefit Company, which for the small cost of 10 cents guarantees a $100 funeral for each subscriber, has attracted much attention in Covington, Newport, Dayton, Bellevue, Ludlow and Boone Co. The cost cannot exceed 15 cents per month to adults, of 10 cents per month to children, according to the United States statistics, which means that an adult member between 10 and 65 years of age pays only the following amounts for a funeral costing $700:

In 1 year	$ 1 80
In 2 years	3 60
In 3 years	5 40
In 4 years	7 20
In 5 years	9 00
In 6 years	10 80
In 7 years	12 60
In 8 years	14 40
In 9 years	16 20
In 10 years	18 00
In 15 years	27 00
In 20 years	36 00

In other words you will have to live 55 years and six months after becoming a member before you will have paid in $100. It must be remembered that you are placed in immediate full benefit—not one quarter or one-half, as with some other companies. This a Mutual Benefit Company, which takes care of you and me when in our deepest trouble—WHEN DEATH INVADES OUR HOME, and you are in immediate full benefit when death comes.

Remember we have no salaried officers to eat up your money. Supposing our membership numbered 10,000, one assessment of adults would bring in $1,500, which would pay for fifteen $100 funerals, before a second assessment would be made. Join now, for you can not tell how soon you may have trouble. Yesterday can never be called back. To-morrow may be too late. Act to-day. THE UNION MUTUAL BENEFIT CO., (COPYRIGHTED, 1900)

William Houston, the popular toll collector at the first gate out on the Florence pike, came very near having some experience with a cyclone, one day last week. He was at work on the road near Mr. Ferrell's, when he heard a noise like that of an approaching train. His horse became frightened, and Mr. Houston looked to discover only a short distance from him a large volume of cornstalks and other debris flying through the air. The twister struck Mr. Ferrell's barn on the side of the pike and removed several small sections of the roof and frightened the old gentleman badly, after which it took to the woods, where it made things lively.

AN EASTER SERMON.

Dr. Talmage Delivers a Timely Discourse on the Risen Savior.

A Prophecy on Our Own Resurrection—As Christ Has Risen So Will His People Rise—The Immortal Body.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

Washington, April 7.—The great Christian festival celebrated in all the churches is the theme of Dr. Talmage's discourse; I. Corinthians, 15:20: "Now is Christ risen from the dead and become the first fruits of them that slept."

On this glorious Easter morning, amid the music and the flowers, I give you Christian salutation. This morning, Russian meeting Russian on the streets of St. Petersburg, hauls him with the salutation: "Christ is risen!" and is answered by his friend in salutation: "He is risen indeed!" In some parts of England and Ireland to this very day there is the superstition that on Easter morning the sun dances in the heavens. And well may we forgive such a superstition, which illustrates the fact that the natural world seems to sympathize with the spiritual.

Hail, Easter morning! Flowers! Flowers! All of them a-voice, all of them a-tongue, all of them full of speech to-day. I bend over one of the lilies, and I hear it say: "Consider the lilies of the valley, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin, yet Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." I bend over a rose, and it seems to whisper: "I am the rose of Sharon." And then I stand and listen. From all sides there comes the chorus of flowers, saying: "If God so clothed the grass of the field which to-day is and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall He not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith?"

Flowers! Flowers! Braid them into the bride's hair. Flowers! Flowers! Strew them over the graves of the dead, sweet prophecy of the resurrection. Flowers! Flowers! Twist them into a garland for my Lord Jesus on Easter morning, and "Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Ghost; as it was in the beginning, is now and ever shall be." The women came to the Saviour's tomb, and they dropped spices all around the tomb, and those spices were the seed that began to grow, and from them came all the flowers of this Easter morn. The two angels robed in white took hold of the stone at the Saviour's tomb, and they hurled it with such force down the hill that it crushed in the door of the world's sepulcher, and the stark and the dead must come forth.

I care not how labyrinthine the mausoleum or how costly the sarcophagus or however beautifully patterned the family grounds, we want them all broken up by the Lord of the resurrection. They must come out. Father and mother—they must come out. Husband and wife—they must come out. Brother and sister—they must come out. Our darling children—they must come out. The eyes that we closed with such trembling fingers must open again in the radiance of that morn. The arms we folded in dust must join ours in an embrace of reunion. The voice that was hushed in our dwelling must be returned. Oh, how long some of you seem to be waiting for the resurrection! And for these broken hearts to-day I make a soft, cool bandage out of Easter flowers.

This morning I find in the risen Christ a prophecy of our own resurrection, my text setting forth the idea that as Christ has risen so His people will rise. He, the first sheaf of the resurrection harvest. He, "the first fruits of them that slept." Before I get through this morning I will walk through all the cemeteries of the dead, through all the country graveyards, where your loved ones are buried, and I will pluck off these flowers, and I will drop a sweet promise of the Gospel—a rose of hope, a lily of joy—on every tomb—the child's tomb, the husband's tomb, the wife's tomb, the father's grave, the mother's grave. And while we celebrate the resurrection of Christ we will at the same time celebrate the resurrection of all the good. "Christ, the first fruits of them that slept."

If I should come to you and ask you for the names of the great conquerors of the world, you would say Alexander, Caesar, Philip, Napoleon I. Ah, you have forgotten to mention the name of a greater conqueror than all these—a cruel, a ghastly conqueror. He rode on a black horse across Waterloo and Chalons and Atlanta, the bloody hoofs crushing the hearts of nations. It is the conqueror Death. He carries a black flag, and he takes no prisoners. He digs a trench across the hemispheres and fills it with the carcasses of nations. Fifty times would the world have been depopulated had not God kept making new generations. Fifty times the world would have swung lifeless through the air—no man on the mountain, no man on the sea, an abandoned ship plowing through immensity. Again and again has he done this work with all generations. He is a monarch as well as a conqueror; his palace a sepulcher; his fountains the falling tears of a world. Blessed be God! In the light of this Easter morning I see the prophecy that his scepter shall be broken and his palace shall be demolished. The hour is coming when all who are in their graves shall come forth. Christ risen, we shall rise. Jesus, "the first fruits of them that slept."

Now, around this doctrine of the resurrection there are a great many mysteries. You come to me and say: "If the bodies of the dead are to be raised, how is this and how is that?" And you ask me a thousand questions I am incompetent to answer. But there are a great many things you believe that you are not able to explain. You would be a very foolish man to say: "I won't believe anything I can't understand." Why, putting down one kind of flower seed, comes there up this flower of this color? Why, putting down another flower seed, comes there up a flower of this color? One flower white, another flower yellow, another flower crimson. Why the difference when the seeds look to be very much alike—are very much alike? Explain these things. Explain that wart on the finger. Explain the difference why the oak leaf is different from the leaf of the hickory. Tell me how the Lord Almighty can turn the chariot of His omnipotence on a rose leaf. You ask me questions about the resurrection I cannot answer. I will ask you a thousand questions about everyday life you cannot answer.

I find my strength in this passage: "All who are in their graves shall come forth." I do not pretend to make the explanation. You go on and say: "Suppose a returned missionary dies in this city. When he was in China, his foot was amputated; he lived years after in England, and there he had an arm amputated; he is buried to-day in yonder cemetery. In the resurrection will the foot come from China, will the arm come from England, and will the different parts of the body be reconstructed in the resurrection? How is that possible?"

You have noticed, I suppose, in reading the story of the resurrection that almost every account of the Bible gives the idea that the characteristic of that day will be a great sound. I do not know that it will be very loud, but I know it will be very penetrating. In the mausoleum where silence has reigned a thousand years that voice must penetrate. In the coral cave of the deep that voice must penetrate. Millions of spirits will come through the gates of eternity, and they will come to the tombs of the earth, and they will cry: "Give us back our bodies; we gave them to you in corruption; surrender them now in incorruption." Hundreds of spirits hovering about the fields of Gettysburg, for there the bodies are buried. A hundred thousand spirits coming to Greenwood, for there the bodies are buried, waiting for the reunion of body and soul.

All along the sea route from New York to Liverpool, at every few miles where a steamer went down, departed spirits coming back, hovering over the wave. There is where the City of Boston perished. Found at last. There is where the President perished. Steamer found at last. There is where the Central America went down. Spirits hovering, hundreds of spirits hovering, waiting for the reunion of body and soul. Out on the prairie a spirit alights. There is where a traveler died in the snow. Crash goes Westminster abbey, and the poets and the orators come forth; wonderful mingling of good and bad. Crash go the pyramids of Egypt, and the monarchs come forth.

Who can sketch the scene? I suppose that one moment before that general rising there will be an entire silence, save as you hear the grinding of a wheel or the clatter of the hoofs of a procession passing into the cemetery. Silence in all the caves of the earth. Silence on the side of the mountain. Silence down in the valleys and far out into the sea. Silence. But in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, as the archangel's trumpet comes pealing, rolling, crashing, across the mountain and sea, the earth will give one terrific shudder, and the graves of the dead will heave like the waves of the sea, and Ostend, Sevastopol and Chalons will stalk forth in the lurid air, and the drowned will come up and wring out their wet locks above the billows, and all the land and all the sea become one moving mass of life—all faces, all ages, all conditions, gazing in one direction and upon one throne—the throne of resurrection. "All who are in their graves shall come forth."

"But," you say, "if this doctrine of the resurrection is true, as prefigured by this Easter morning, can you tell us something about the resurrected body?" I can. There are mysteries about that, but I shall tell you three or four things in regard to the resurrected body that are beyond guessing and beyond mistake.

In the first place, I remark in regard to your resurrected body, it will be a glorious body. The body we have now is a mere skeleton of what it would have been if sin had not marred and defaced it. Take the most exquisite statue that was ever made by an artist and chip it here and chip it there with a chisel, and batter and bruise it here and there and then stand it out in the storms of a hundred years, and the beauty would be gone. Well, the human body has been chipped and battered and bruised and damaged with the storms of thousands of years—the physical defects of other generations coming down from generation to generation, we inheriting the infelicities of past generations. But in the morning of the resurrection the body will be adorned and beautified according to the original model. And there is no such difference between a gymnast and an emaciated wretch in a lazaretto as there will be a difference between our bodies as they are now and our resurrected forms. There you will see the perfect eye after the waters of death have washed out the stains of tears and study. There you will see the perfect hand after the knots of toil have been untied from the knuckles. There you will see the form erect and elastic after the burdens have gone off the shoulder—the very life of God in the body. In this world the most impressive thing, the most expressive thing, is the human face, but that face is veiled with the griefs of a thousand years. But in the resurrection morn that veil will be taken away from the face, and the noonday sun is dull and dim and stupid compared with the outflaming glories of the countenances of the saved. When those faces of the righteous, those resurrected faces, turn toward the gate or look up toward the throne, it will be like the dawning of a new morning on the bosom of everlasting day. O glorious, resurrected body!

But I remark, also, in regard to that body which you are to get in the resurrection, it will be an important body. These bodies are wasting away. Somebody has said that as soon as we begin to live we begin to die. Unless we keep putting the fuel into the furnace the furnace dies out. The blood vessels are canals taking the breadstuffs to all parts of the system. We must be reconstructed hour by hour, day by day. Sickness and death are all the time trying to get their pry under the tenement or to push us off the embankment of the grave. But, blessed be God, in the resurrection we will get a body immortal. No malaria in the air, no cough, no neuralgic twinge, no rheumatic pang, no fluttering of the heart, no shortness of breath, no ambulance, no dispensary, no hospital, no invalid's chair, no spectacles to improve the dim vision, but health, immortal health! O ye who have aches and pains indescribable this morning, ye who are never well, ye who are lacerated with physical distress, let me tell you of the resurrected body, free from all disease. Immortal! Immortal!

I go further and say in regard to that body which you are to get in the resurrection, it will be a vigorous body. We walk now eight or ten miles, and we are fatigued; we lift a few hundred pounds, and we are exhausted; unarmed, we meet a wild beast, and we must run or flee or climb or dodge because we are incompetent to meet it; we toil eight or ten hours energetically, and then we are weary. But in the resurrection we are to have a body that never gets tired. Is it not a glorious thought?

Plenty of occupation in Heaven. I suppose Broadway, New York, in the busiest season of the year at noonday is not so busy as Heaven is all the time. Grand projects of mercy for other worlds. Victories to be celebrated. The downfall of despotism on earth to be announced. Great songs to be learned and sung. Great expeditions on which God will send forth His children. Plenty to do, but no fatigue. If you are seated under the trees of life, it will not be to rest, but to talk over with some old comrade old times—the battles where you fought shoulder to shoulder.

Sometimes in this world we feel we would like to have such a body as that. There is so much work to be done for Christ, there are so many tears to be wiped away, there are so many burdens to life, there is so much to be achieved for Christ, we sometimes wish that from the first of January to the last of December we could toil on without stopping to sleep or to take any recreation or to rest or even to take food—that we could toil right on without stopping a moment in our work of commending Christ and Heaven to all the people. But we all get tired. It is a characteristic of the human body in this condition; we must get tired. Is it not a glorious thought that we are going to have a body that will never grow weary? O glorious resurrection day! Gladly will I fling aside this poor body of sin and fling it into the tomb if at thy bidding I shall have a body that never wearies. That is a splendid resurrection hymn that we have all sung:

So Jesus slept. God's dying Son
Passed through the grave and blessed the bed.
Rest here, blest saint, till from His throne
The morning breaks, to pierce the shade.

O blessed resurrection! Speak out, sweet flowers, beautiful flowers! While you tell of a risen Christ tell of the righteous who shall rise. May God fill you this morning with anticipation!

I heard of a father and son who among others were shipwrecked at sea. The father and the son climbed into the rigging. The father held on, but the son after awhile lost his hold on the rigging and was dashed down. The father supposed he had gone hopelessly under the wave. The next day the father was brought ashore from the rigging in an exhausted state and laid on a bed in a fisherman's hut, and after many hours had passed he came to consciousness and saw lying beside him on the same bed his boy. Oh, my friends, what a glorious thing it will be if we wake up at last to find our loved ones beside us, coming up from the same plot in the graveyard, coming up in the same morning light—the father and son alive forever, all the loved ones alive forever, never more to weep, never more to part, never more to die.

May the God of peace that brought again from the dead our Lord Jesus, that great Shepherd of the sheep, through the blood of the everlasting covenant make you perfect in every good work, to do His will, and let the associations of this morning transport our thoughts to the grander assemblage before the throne. The one hundred and forty and four thousand and the "great multitude that no man can number," some of our best friends among them, we after awhile to join the multitude. Glorious anticipation!

Blest are the saints beloved of God;
Washed are their robes in Jesus' blood.
Brighter than angels, lo, they shine,
Their wonders splendid and sublime.

My soul anticipates the day,
Would stretch her wings and soar away
To aid the song, the palm to bear,
And bow, the chief of sinners, there.

Work on the first factory for the manufacture of American shoes in Mexico began last month. Mexican leather will be used.

FOLLOWING SPAIN'S EXAMPLE

American Troops Used to Keep the Cubans Under Complete Subjection.

Three or four years ago, when Weyler introduced his reconcentrado policy into Cuba, the people of the United States were horror-stricken. The tales of suffering were at first not believed; the inhumanity of it all was incredible. But as one after another of reliable newspaper correspondents joined the ranks of those already in Cuba it became apparent from their reports that even the sensational press representatives who had preceded them had not exaggerated. They told in awful detail the sufferings of those compelled to leave their farms, already devastated and yielding but the most meager of crops, and move into the already crowded cities, where absolutely no provision had been made or could be made for their reception and care. From privation bitter enough in their own homes they were driven to the torture of death by slow starvation. As stories of cruelties added to cruelties came to our knowledge, indignation waxed hotter and hotter until it burst into flame, and Weyler was driven from Cuba, shortly to be followed by the Spanish army.

How sentiment on this subject has changed! How familiarity with the suffering of others has bred indifference! That same policy is being practiced in the Philippines to-day by our own army officers. The latest report from the island of Marinduque declares that "Maj. Smith, commanding the American garrisons on the island, has issued an order requiring all natives to live in the five principal towns where American troops are stationed. Those natives who continue to live in the country will be considered insurgents."

That is Weyler's policy, pure and simple. Try me you may, you can make nothing else of it. In the assertion as made that the inhabitants of the Philippines favor a "drastic policy" the officers in charge of the reconcentrado operations but add another Weyleresque touch to their work. It will be remembered how Weyler said that the reconcentrado policy was ordered at the request of the Cubans themselves. It will also be remembered what an unmitigated liar Weyler was shown to be. Is it probable, then—is it human nature, which is the same the world over—that these Filipinos are imploring the American army officers to drive them from their homes to starve in the garrison towns? Is it less of an outrage to inflict such things on the Filipinos than upon the Cubans? Is starvation more pleasant at the hands of our soldiers than at the hands of those of Spain? Is life less precious in Marinduque than in Cuba? How comes it that the horrors of 1897 were potent enough to drive us to war, while the same course of procedure in 1901 fails to arouse a protest?—Utica Observer.

CUBA IN THEIR TOILS.

Forces Behind the Administration Are Out After the Island's Goods.

Senator O. H. Platt, of Connecticut, author of the Cuban resolutions in congress which bear his name, says:

"I favor an independent republic in Cuba. I am wholly opposed to annexation, and do not wish to see that ever happen. The whole purpose of the action by congress is to make sure and stable such an independent Cuban republic."

If that is the whole purpose and the real purpose, it ought not to require any elaborate action by congress to put it into effect. This nation has already solemnly declared the right of the Cubans to freedom and independence. "The way to resume is to resume." The way to make the Cubans free is to let them alone, and notify other nations, if notice be necessary under the Monroe doctrine, that they, too, will be expected to let them alone. There may be details and technicalities, but there can be no real difficulties, if the pledge of the American people is to be carried out in good faith.

But if the case is otherwise, if the intent is to confer the name of independence while withholding the reality, then there is need for action by congress; there is need for pettifogging and quibbling, and equivocation of a sort in which President McKinley's recent speeches and papers abound. To say one thing and mean another requires care, if anybody is to be deceived thereby. Unfortunately, it would be difficult to find a dozen adult men who are familiar with current politics in Washington who believe that there is any genuine intent to give freedom and independence to the Cubans, or who doubt that ultimate annexation and "benevolent assimilation" of the Cubans is the real underground policy of the present administration. There is a steadily growing belief that the forces behind the McKinley administration intend to annex Cuba, "for her good"—and for her goods.—Albany Argus.

——If Mr. McKinley should come out for a third term in the presidency the oath of allegiance will have to be administered anew to Senator Foraker. It is understood that the sacrifice of his personal views and preferences were to go no further than the second term. He has delivered all the goods that can rightfully be expected from a man whose animosity toward Messrs Hanna and McKinley was well known even in the country blacksmith shops in Ohio. A new contract will have to be made before he does anything more. All the delivery wagons should be running in the direction of Foraker's headquarters now.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

"I Followed Mrs. Pinkham's Advice and Now I am Well."

A woman is sick—some disease peculiar to her sex is fast developing in her system. She goes to her family physician and tells him a story, but not the whole story.

She holds back something, loses her head, becomes agitated, forgets what she wants to say, and finally conceals what she ought to have told, and this completely mystifies the doctor.

Is it a wonder, therefore, that the doctor fails to cure the disease? Still we cannot blame the woman, for it is very embarrassing to detail some of the symptoms of her suffering, even to her family physician. This is the reason why hundreds of thousands of women are now in correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass. To her they can give every symptom, so that when she is ready to advise them she is in possession of more facts from her correspondence with the patient than the physician can possibly obtain through a personal interview.

Following we publish a letter from a woman showing the result of a correspondence with Mrs. Pinkham. All such letters are considered absolutely confidential by Mrs. Pinkham, and are never published in any way or manner without the consent in writing of the patient; but hundreds of women are so grateful for the health which Mrs. Pinkham and her medicine have been able to restore to them that they not only consent to publishing their letters, but write asking that this be done in order that other women who suffer may be benefited by their experience.

Mrs. Ella Rice, Chelsea, Wis., writes:

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—For two years I was troubled with falling and inflammation of the womb. I suffered very much with bearing-down pains, headache, backache, and was not able to do anything. What I endured no one knows but those who have suffered as I did. I could hardly drag myself across the floor. I doctored with the physicians of this town for three months and grew worse instead of better. My husband and friends wished me to write to you, but I had no faith in patent medicines. At last I became so bad that I concluded to ask your advice. I received an answer at once advising me to take your Vegetable Compound, and I did so. Before I had taken two bottles I felt better, and after I had taken five bottles there was no happier woman on earth, for I was well again. I know that your Vegetable Compound cured me, and I wish and advise every woman who suffers as I did to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Believe me always grateful for the recovery of my health."—MRS. ELLA RICE, Chelsea, Wis.

$5000 REWARD Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000, which will be paid to any person who will show that the above testimonial is not genuine, or was published before obtaining the writer's special permission.—LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

JOKE ON ESSAY WRITER.

How a Shrewd Ann Arbor Student Made Use of His Clever Friend.

There was at Ann Arbor once upon a time a youth clever at writing essays. Ofttimes he turned his ability to account by providing at stated rates college essays for lads either too lazy or dull to evolve these of their own composition. But while the aforesaid youth was a weight of great learning he lacked a certain shrewdness in affairs, says the Chicago Chronicle. One day a friend came to him in sore distress, saying that of him was required within 24 hours an essay on a subject of which he knew nothing. The college sage engaged to provide a 600-word effusion for the princely sum of $3, and on being told the theme ground out a marvel of erudition and polished diction in an hour's time. This he turned over to the friend, who promptly paid over the three simoleons. Then the latter dispatched the made-while-you-wait essay to a friend of his in a distant university town, who was the real person of whom this particular thesis was required. In accordance with an arrangement which previously had been made the youth in the far-away burg sent by way of compensation a check for $5, which the lad with the wisdom of the serpent coolly pocketed, smiling sardonically as he thought of the learned but unsophisticated collegian whom he had exploited.

CANADA'S BIG FISH CATCH.

Value of the Great Industry Is Beyond the Ordinary Man's Conception.

The annual report of the department of fisheries, which has just been published at Ottawa, shows that no less than 70,863 men were last year earning their living by exploiting Canadian waters, using 5,506,760 fathoms of reel and other fishing gear, representing a capital of $10,000,000. Nearly 1,200 schooners and tugs manned by 8,970 sailors, as well as 70,892 other fishermen, using over $8,000 boats, found occupation in this vast industry. The lobster plant alone is estimated at $1,334,180, comprising 553 canneries, dispersed on the seaboard of the maritime provinces.

No less than 18,708 persons found employment in this branch of the fishing industry, using 1,360,000 traps. The salmon preserving industry in British Columbia, comprising 69 canneries and representing a capital of $1,380,000, gives employment to 18,977 hands. The amount of capital invested in the fisheries last year exceeded that of the year previous by $289,743, and 719 more men were engaged in the industry.

The total value of the catch of fish in Canada for the year amounts to $21,591,706, being an increase of about $2,250,000 over the preceding year.

WONDERFUL MEGAPHONE.

By Which the Footfall of a Burglar May Be Heard Half a Mile Away.

A wonderful megaphone that would carry the sound of a burglar's shoeless foot on the stair at midnight to a policeman a half mile away, and a cry for help from Harlem to Brooklyn, has recently been discovered by Horace L. Short, of Brighton, England, says the New York World.

The machine is an ordinary phonograph with a trumpet about four feet long. Inside this trumpet is a mechanism resembling a steam whistle. The phonograph cylinder is of silver marked by a sapphire needle, and when this needle has traveled over the cylinder a second time the sound waves pour out of the trumpet in a way to eclipse a steam siren.

It was placed on roofs of high buildings at Devil's Dyke, near Brighton, and made to carry messages to people ten miles away.

Used as a concert machine in stormy weather Mr. and Mrs. Suburbs could recline in their Morris chairs in front of the fireplace and enjoy the efforts of New York artists without the trying ride over Brooklyn bridge.

A Cow as a Valentine.

At Otterbein university the other night, says the Indianapolis Press, a Jersey cow, with "Your Valentine" painted on its side, was placed in the recitation room of Prof. Snavely with a dozen pumpkins and several shocks of fodder. During the night the cow pushed its head through a window pane and broke several seats.

EASTERN PROBLEM.

Communication of Unusual Importance From Russia.

Way Found to Dispose of the Manchurian Question and to Bring Russia in Accord With Other Powers.

Washington, April 6.—The United States government has received a communication from the government of Russia of unusual importance, bearing on conditions in China, and particularly those relating to Manchuria. The document is of such a character as to have produced a profoundly favorable impression, and at the state department it is looked upon as the most salutory development that has occurred for many months in the problems of the east. As to the exact terms of the communication there is no official statement thus far, although later it probably will be communicated to the public. Secretary Hay received it from the Russian ambassador, Count Cassini, and took speedy steps to lay it before the president. The latter shared the secretary of state's gratification that a way has been found to dispose of the complications over the Manchurian question and to bring Russia into strong accord with the other powers. At the Russian embassy no information was obtainable as to the communication, Count Cassini asking to be excused from all inquiries.

While there is an entire absence of authoritative information, yet it is understood that Russia now takes occasion to give positive assurances of the disinterested sentiments which have animated her throughout the consideration of Chinese questions. As to Manchuria, it is made clear that Russia's course never has varied in the purpose to leave that province an integral part of China and to retire the Russian troops as rapidly as safety would permit. This, however, it is made plain in the communication, has been Russia's course throughout, notwithstanding assertions to the contrary. But as a more signal evidence of Russia's purpose, and in harmony with the czar's aspirations for peace and harmony between the nations, the Russian government now gives assurances of the most definite and satisfactory character as to the execution of this purpose. The extent of the assurances can be best judged by the impression made in the highest official quarters here that the threatened crisis over Manchuria has been completely averted.

The Russia communication is the more significant coming at a moment when the press advices from Europe asserted that Russia was collecting an army of 300,000 men for the purpose of holding Manchuria without reference to the desire of the other powers. There is no doubt that Russia has a large military force in Manchuria, so that had she determined to hold the province she has the military establishment already on the ground, prepared to maintain her occupancy.

To the officials in Washington one of the most gratifying features of Russia's action is that it is responsive to Secretary Hay's not of March 1 last.

INSANE MOTHER'S DEED.

She Held Her Child in a Fire Until Its Body Was a Mass of Charred Flesh.

Parkersburg, W. Va., April 6.—Held in a fire by its mother until its head was literally burned away and its body a mass of charred flesh, the year-old child of Mrs. Morris met an awful death. No other cause than that of insanity can be assigned for the mother's awful deed.

Mrs. Morris lives with her family and children in Stinson, southern Clay county. Seemingly she was contented and happy until a few days ago, when the woman began to evince a dislike for her youngest born. The woman after the discovery of her crime was sullen and would give no reason for the deed other than she was weary of the care of her child and thought it would be better dead.

Business Failures.

BAD FOR PROTECTION:

Changing Commercial Conditions Bring About an Awkward Situation for Tariffites.

It begins to look as if the advocates of a protective tariff were to divide into opposing camps. The "infant industries" are now full grown, and are disposed to devour one another. They were a happy family as long as there was enough of the "home market" to go around, and they waxed fat, if not cherubic, under the pampering. The American people indorsed the brand of food and its wholesale administration, although certain unpatriotic, impracticable and objectionable people called attention to the dangers of letting infants have their own way. In obedience to the warning, the brand of food was changed a time or two, but the petted darlings raised such an outcry that they not only compelled the foster-parents to yield, but also to grant them an increase of diet to compensate for the temporary deprivation.

Is it not an ironical outcome that protection's civil war should break out during the administration of a man who has been looked upon as its high priest? It was really a great day for the beneficiaries of protection when McKinley stepped into power. His selection was taken as an indorsement of the protection principle and as a final disposition of the controversy whether individual enterprises should have the support of the government. But if the advocates of protection would learn nothing from maxims at home, they were compelled to consult markets when they went abroad. Their first lesson came when they discovered that alien peoples would only trade on fair terms, and in no event would they yield all the profits. Our manufacturers then began to understand that it takes two to make a bargain, and, what was more singular, a trade could actually result with benefit to both sides! But in compliance with a long-formed habit, our tariff beneficiaries were disposed to hold on to a good thing when they had it, and they adopted another plan in lieu of dealing with nations on fair terms. They would use the tariffs protecting the home market as so much bounty, and, with the advantage thus gained, they would undersell by a good figure their competitors abroad. But this very result is defended by tariff advocates, and is pointed to as a vindication of their policy! If the consumer here, at the very doors of the factory, protests that he has to pay more for his goods than people across the sea for the same products after the cost of export has been added, he is pronounced unpatriotic and a hinderer of his country's great and beautiful expansion policy.

Up to the war with Spain the protection advocates stood together, but that conflict brought about a change in conditions. As it happened, the soils of our new possessions were especially adapted to the raising of sugar cane and tobacco, two articles of production which promised to form two new industries here, to the glorification of the country and the "protection of American labor." The first shock to the protection theory was given by the Porto Rican tariff bill. The sugar trust, the sugar and tobacco growers, after a fierce contest, won their point in the principle that the bill embodied. Certain "protectionists," who voted against the proposition to levy tariffs on Porto Rican goods, reconciled their action with their old-time principle by welcoming the suggestion that Porto Rico was not, after all, a foreign territory. Their consistency was thereby preserved. But the colonies and Cuba may be expected to add further trouble to the protectionists when syndicates, attracted to them, shall want the United States for a market.

The recent edict of Russia added another disturbing factor to the situation. The managers of the steel and iron industries have not recovered from the blow yet, but they threaten, in their daze, to go back on the principle of a lifetime. Shall this nation, they ask—note their unselfishness always—run the danger of dwarfing its foreign trade just for the sake of benefiting a few tobacco and sugar growers and the sugar trust? The proposition is an outrage! Moreover, Secretary Gage was not the man they took him for if he could not stretch the provisions of the law for the general good. But, unfortunately, to these objectors are opposed, not the innocent and helpless consumer of the "home market," but a sugar and tobacco trust or two, which have also had the benefits of a long experience in looking out for their own interests. Here at last, then, ensues an instance in which patriots and the flag are arrayed on both sides of the controversy. Will they fight it out? The consumer has no objections. Will they compromise on reduced tariffs? Again the consumer will be benefited.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——John Sherman, the greatest financier in the republican party, repudiated the Philippine policy of his party; Benjamin Harrison, the last republican president before McKinley, repudiated the Philippine policy of his party; Thomas B. Reed, the most distinguished republican out of office has repudiated the Philippine policy of his party. These things might disturb the president, but for the fact that Mr. Hanna is ever near and keeps the finger of destiny pointed toward the orient.—The Commoner.

——Secretary Gage announces that he does not propose to use any part of the surplus in the purchase of bonds. No doubt the treasury before the ending of the next fiscal year will need every dollar of surplus that hands can be laid upon. Billion dollar congresses are exhaustive.—Philadelphia Record.

SWEETHEART IS FAITHLESS.

Young Woman Journeys to Dawson Only to Find That Her Lover Was Married.

Dawson dispatches give the details of the arrival there of Miss Nina Moore, of San Francisco, who went to the Klondike capital with the expectation of marrying Capt. W. H. Bledsoe, one of the best known of Yukon river pilots. Miss Moore is 24 years old, and went to Cape Nome last spring, where she was employed as a stenographer in an abstract office. She is well connected in San Francisco, and went north primarily to secure gold claims in her own right. While there she met Capt. Bledsoe. They became engaged, and it was arranged that she should return to San Francisco and he would follow this winter and marry her. Late in the fall she received letters stating that it would be impossible for him to go to San Francisco, and asking her to return to Dawson. Miss Moore agreed to the plan, expending more than $1,000 for her trousseau and transportation.

Just before reaching Dawson she learned that Bledsoe had married a variety actress known as Mme. Lloyd, a week previous, and was then enjoying his honeymoon. On reaching Dawson, Miss Moore went to the office of the Alaska Commercial company, which employs Bledsoe, which furnished her funds to reach home, with the understanding that the money advanced would be deducted from Bledsoe's salary next season. Miss Moore and Bledsoe did not meet.

TURKISH WOMAN RIDES CYCLE

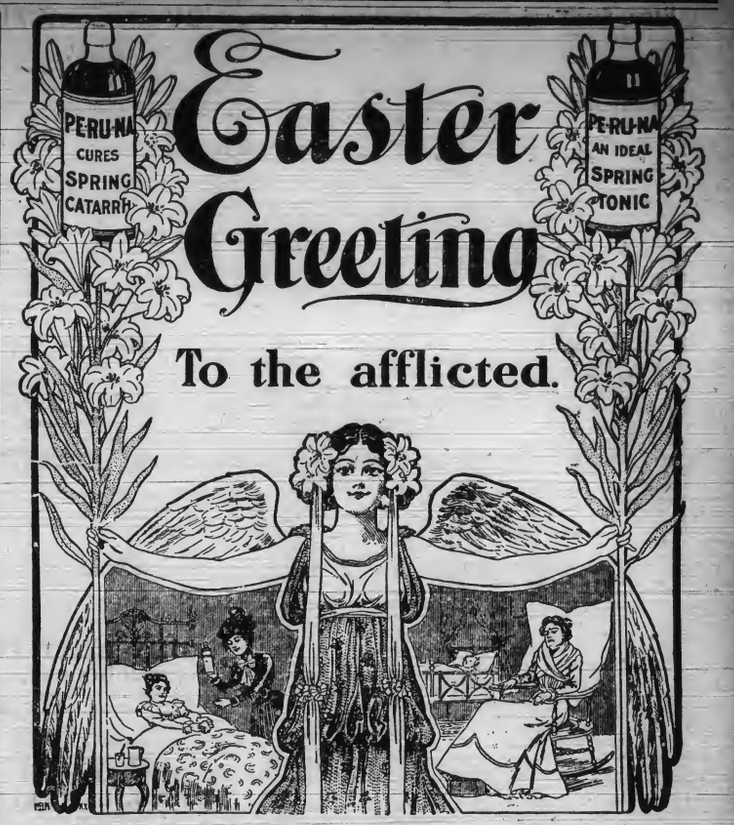
Wife of Sultan's Minister to Washington Even Discards Her Veil.

There is a new topic among the residents of Cleveland Park, Washington city, over the latest achievement of Mme. Ali Ferrouh, the wife of the Turkish minister, who now rides a "bike" as well as any of her American sisters. The gossips, who regard this departure from native form as commendable independence in Mme. Ferrouh, recall the fact that little more than a year ago she was as zealously shielded from observation as any Mohammedan woman in her own realm.

Mme. Ferrouh has gradually been adopting decided new-woman ideas, and now she rides about the park with an up-to-date American costume, and of late has even discarded the veil she used to wear over her face. Mlle. Ferrouh, sister of the minister, always accompanies Mme. Ferrouh.

WOLF WHIPS HOUNDS.

Eighteen Dogs Are Unable to Vanquish One Timber Animal.



Details of a thrilling fight in which an enormous timber wolf vanquished a pack of 18 hounds reached Mattoon, Ill., the other day. It occurred on the Sizemore farm, near Marley, Edgar county, and was witnessed by Siebert Scott, William Creech and Mark Davidson, who were at work in a sugar camp. They saw the wolf running, followed by the dogs. The pursued animal was weak from the long chase, and, seeing the men, ran into a shallow creek. There it turned at bay. The hounds attacked it viciously for an hour, but retired with slit noses, lacerated flanks and bleeding bodies. The wounded but victorious wolf was shot and killed by Scott as it clambered upon the bank.

Chicago's Rival.

India has a population of 294,000,000. There is little hope, says the Chicago Times-Herald, that Chicago will be able to overtake her during the present century.

If every one in the world were healthy and happy what a glad day Easter would be. But the sun rises every Easter morning on a multitude of sick and afflicted. The Easter lilies gladden the hearts of the sick and well alike.

But to the sick something more than the Easter lily is necessary to bring that hope and cheer which every one expects on Easter day. The well need no physician, but the sick need a remedy.

Nearly one-half the people in the United States are suffering from some form or phase of catarrhal ailment. These ailments take different forms at different seasons of the year. In the springtime catarrh assumes a systemic form, producing nervousness, lassitude and general languor.

Systemic catarrh deranges the digestion and through deranged digestion it impoverishes or contaminates the blood. Thus we have blood diseases and nervous derangements through systemic catarrh.

Peruna is a specific for these cases. No other remedy yet devised by the medical profession is able to successfully meet so many phases of spring ailments as Peruna.

A First Class Tonic.

Wm. A. Collier, Assistant Paymaster U. S. N., writes: "I have taken Peruna and recommend it to those needing a first-class tonic."

A Great Tonic.

Hon. M. C. Butler, Ex-U. S. Senator and Ex-Governor of South Carolina, writes from Edgefield, S. C.: "I have been using Peruna for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine and besides a great tonic."

Splendid for the Nerves.

Robert B. Mantell, the famous actor, writes from New York City: "Peruna is splendid and most invigorating—refreshing to the nerves and body."

For General Debility.

Hon. Jno. V. Wright, of the Law Department, General Land Office of Tennessee, writes: "I wish everyone who is suffering with general debility or prostration could know of Peruna."

A Spring Tonic.

Mrs. D. W. Timberlake, Lynchburg, Va., says: "There is no better spring tonic than Peruna, and I have used about all of them."

A Good Tonic.

Captain Percy W. Moss, Second Arkansas Volunteers, writes from Pargould, Ark.: "I find Peruna a very good spring tonic, and will readily recommend it at any time."

Builds Up the Entire System.

Miss Jennie Johnson, 3118 Lake Park avenue, Chicago, Ill., is Vice President of Chicago Teachers' Federation. She writes: "Peruna restores the functions of nature, induces sleep and builds up the entire system."

Makes Steady Nerves.

D. L. Wallace, Charter Member International Barbers' Union, 13 Western avenue, Minneapolis, Minnesota, writes: "I now feel splendid. My head is clear, my nerves are steady, I enjoy my food and rest well."

The Best of Tonics.

Hon. W. C. Chambers, Chief Justice of Samoa, says: "I have tried one bottle of Peruna and I can truthfully say it is one of the best tonics I ever used."

A Grand Tonic.

Mrs. Gridley, mother of Captain Gridley, of the "Olympia," writes: "I used Peruna and can truthfully say it is a grand tonic."

For Overwork.

Mr. Tefft Johnson, a prominent actor of Washington, D. C., writes from Fourteenth and "P" streets: "In the effort to improve a condition impaired by overwork, I have found nothing that has done as much good as Peruna."

For a Worn-out System.

Mrs. Catherine Toft, President "Valkyrien Association," 5640 Cottage Grove avenue, Chicago, Ill., writes: "I often advise Peruna in cases of a worn-out system and a broken down constitution."

Farm, Stock and Crop.

A Fayette county farmer sold his tobacco crop, 100,000 pounds, at 10 cents. Ten thousand dollars is a nice little sum to realize on one little crop of tobacco.

Northwestern Iowa has begun shipping choice butter to Porto Rico. The first consignment left Sioux City a few days ago, being sent from a very large creamery.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat says: "The bray of Missouri's indispensable product, the mule, is now heard around the world from Cape Town to Hoilo, and frequently drowns the warring drum beat as it circles the globe."

The California orange crop is enormous, and millions of oranges are rotting in packing houses and in the groves for lack of transporation facilities. The railroads claim that they carried 50 per cent more than last year, and that the trouble is with the size of the crop.

Spring lamb, raised in hot-houses, sells at thirty cents a pound in New York. It comes chiefly from Salem N. J. The sheds in which the lambs run are covered with glass to give them the benefit of the sun. The little animals are so frail that exposure to the winter would kill them.

Nelson Morris, the Chicago millionaire packer, is planning the erection of a $2,000,000 packing-house at Honolulu. The proposed house is for the purpose of supplying the Hawaiian and other adjacent islands with fresh meat without being compelled to use the present system of refrigeration.

A well known tobacco man of this city says the work of worming tobacco in Virginia is greatly simplified by catching the flies. Tubs partly filled with water are placed in various portions of the field; after sunset lighted lanterns are placed immediately above the tubs: the flies are attracted by the lights, and fall into the water and are drowned.—Winchester Democrat.

It is an old fact in England, the cultivation of tobacco as a crop is prohibited by a tax so high on every acre sown with tobacco seed that no Englishman could afford to grow it. The origin of this prohibition is still more curious. It originated in the reign of Charles II, when Parliament passed a law forbidding the growth of tobacco in England for the express purpose of encouraging trade with the new colony of Virginia.

The lamb crop will be quite large in Clark county this year, for probably a larger per cent. of the crop was never saved than has been this season. The larger portion of them have been sold at 5½ cents for the early deliveries, and 5 cents for later. Most of these sales were made some months ago, as for some reason speculators have not been very anxious to purchase recently. While the number of lambs will be large, they are not at all forward on account of the absence of green forage and the late spring.—Winchester Democrat.

The Land of Chestnuts.

The home of chestnuts is in France, where an enthusiastic admirer declares that they are "as common as beans in Boston." On such an extensive scale are they cultivated that one factory in Lyons handles over twenty-five million pounds every year. The "Marrons" are of course the great luxury, but among the poorer classes the smaller chestnuts, or "chatignes," are eaten.

The United States consul at Lyons, John C. Covert, visited a large chestnut factory which employs two hundred and fifty women and girls. The chestnuts are peeled and boiled and placed for three days in a vanilla syrup; then they are drained, coated thinly with vanilla, and prepared for shipment.

Mr. Covert is anxious that America should go extensively into chestnut-growing, and believes that as sugar is fifty per cent. cheaper here than in France, the candied product would soon undersell the French article.

However, as marron trees do not yield profitably till they are ten years old, Mr. Covert admits that there is no immediate prospect of a reduction in the price of the candied nuts.

Those alarmists who predicted the extinction of the horse by the trolley car and the automobile did not count upon the possibility of a demand for the noble animal from other sources. At Omaha the other day, bids were opened for four hundred horses for the newly organized Fourteenth cavalry at Fort Leavenworth. The bids ranged from $139 to $150 a horse, a pretty stiff price, but what was the quartermaster's department to do? The cavalry must have good horses, and good horses come high. The War Department has not yet seen fit to adopt the automobile for cavalry purpose. There is nothing in the situation to warrant any further lamentations over the decline and fall of the equine.

When a number of elephants are shipped a strong structure is erected on deck and there they are stabled, chained by the feet. No doubt in an emergency they could easily walk away with their chains and the deck flooring, throwing the stable aside if it offered any impediment to their progress and the door happened to be shut. Elephants, fortunately, are not always putting forth their prowess and the chains in ordinary weather and ordinary circumstances keep them sufficiently in check. About twenty years ago William Jamrach, who had made a fortune, was returning from India with a cargo of elephants, black panthers, tigers, cheetahs, leopards, hyenas, apes, serpents, orang-outangs and rare birds of all kinds. He valued the lot at $35,000. The Agra—that was the name of the ship he was coming home on—was swinging at her anchor off Point deGalle, Ceylon.

Suddenly there was heard a fearful crash that gave pause to everything. The chattering, the screaming, the growling and the roaring of the animals stopped dead. The startled men looked for just a moment straight in the face of each other. Then the exclamation, "Great heavens, she's sinking!" was followed by a clamor that just blotted out the stillness. At one and the same moment both man and beast seemed to realize the situation and at one and the same moment they all began to exhibit symptoms of the alarm they felt. In the case of the men they were free to devise means of escape and they immediately busied themselves accordingly. In the case of the animals they were confined and had to undergo the horror of facing a death they were powerless to avert. It is natural for an animal to die in combat with an enemy and while the combat lasts there is hope of escape. There is no facing of death here, the animal is otherwise—engaged, too, in a natural way. But with the animals cooped up on the Agra, with never an enemy to fight, it was far different, and they gave vent to cries of unbounded despair. The elephants made a noise, too, but there was not one touch of despair there. It was the business-like sound of crashing timber, and before the Agra had reached bottom a herd of elephants was swimming to Ceylon.—Cassell's Magazines.

How to Attain Old Age.

Of the giving of recipes for long evity there is apparently no end. Every man or woman who ehas reached out far beyond the allotted threescore years and ten is made the subject of an entertaining argument to prove the points of this or that contender.

Every abnormality in the shape of strength of arm, of back, of general system, is used as an illustration of the virtues of this or that system of exercise or living. It is the opinion of a good many laymen that mankind does entirely too much thinking on the subject of how to live to a ripe old age. Less worry on this point might lead to desired results.

But there will be less worry. Even now the list of systems for prolongation of man's days is being augmented. The very latest suggestion comes from a physician of credit and renown. He thinks that there is a very great deal of benefit or of injury in the wearing of certain kinds of clothing.

According to this authority, the wearing of flannel next the skin is immensely injurious to the general run of men and women. Cotton is king in his opinion. For summer wear, he suggests a calico skirt, while balbriggan cotton is his idea of winter covering. The main point of his theory is the necessity of wearing always the same kind of material next to the skin, whether this be of linen, cotton or wool.

Outdoor exercise is highly recommended—that is, if cycling be excepted. Wheeling is not considered a sane performance by this judge.

Go at the early potato field "hammer and tongues." Put on the disc, spring tooth, acme, smoothing harrow and plank drag, or anything else that will chop it up and help chop it up and to make it as fine as an ash heap. Then do it again. Set the disc to cut deep and fairly plow it up, crossing the piece once or twice, allowing the disc to lap one-half. Do not stop at pulverizing the surface for this or any other crop, but cut and mellow and make your soil fine right down to the bottom of the furrow if possible, which will give the millions of hairlike rootlets that will later penetrate to this depth every opportunity to reach and feed on all the available plant food contained in every small particle of soil. When satisfied that your soil can not be better prepared you are ready then to make your first application of fertilizers, in which you can afford to be very liberal, since any subetance left from the rank feeding potato plant will be available for the following or "second" crop, so that no part of it will be lost.—Ohio Farmer.

Young Women

The entry into womanhood is a critical time for a girl. Little menstrual disorders started at that time soon grow into fatal complications. That female troubles are killing graveyards proves this. Wine of Cardui establishes a painless and natural menstrual flow. When once this important function is started right, a healthy life will usually follow. Many women, young and old, owe their lives to Wine of Cardui. There is nothing like it to give women freedom from pain and to fit young women for every duty of life. $1.00 bottles at druggists.

Miss Della M. Strayer, Tully, Kan., "I have suffered untold pain at menstrual periods for a long time, was nervous, had no appetite, and lost interest in everything, in fact was miserable. I have taken four bottles of Wine of Cardui, with Thedford's Black-Draught, when needed, and to-day I am entirely cured. I cannot express the thanks I feel for what you have done for me."

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 17, 1901. NO. 26.

Kentucky is the home of a great many persons, who expect to get liberal amounts of the colossal Edwards estate in New York. Edwards was a batchelor, leased his large estate for 99 years in 1782, and went to sea and never returned.

Some idea of the way the government was robbed in the purchase of vessels at the outbreak of the war with Spain may be gathered from the fact that the transport Terry, for which $150,000 was paid, was advertised for sale at an upset price of of $40,000, and not a single bid was received. When bought by the government this steamer was an old excursion boat on Long Island Sound, under the name Hartford.

The Interior-Journal says: "The unusual sight of lambs nursing a female hound can be seen at Capt. B. F Powell's. The Captain had three pet lambs that the hound, whose pups had been taken from her, became very much attached to and now she plays the role of mother to them to perfection. Capt. Powell also has a couple of lambs that have hair instead of wool on them. The little things look almost as much like pups as they do like lambs."

It is probably a fact that if hog raisers would allow their pigs to grow to maturity naturally, say, till they are a year old, before attempting to fatten them and would use only aged and matured breeding animals the ravages of the cholera would be vastly lessened, if not entirely eradicated. This plan is being tried by enough to-day who are entirely exempt from visitations of this pest to prove almost conclusively that herein lies the secret of their success. This is worth consideration.

There is a funny question up over near Chillicothe, Ohio, which the courts will have to settle. A farmer had a public sale and among other things sold was a field of fodder, standing in shock. The man who bought it sold it the next day. Then along came that wind storm of Sunday two weeks ago and when the last purchaser went on Monday with wagons to haul the fodder away, not a shock was there. The wind had scattered the shocks all over Ross county. Now the man wants his money back and will sue for it.

The crop reports received by Commissioner of Agriculture Nall from all sections of the State show that the weather for the greater part of March was favorable for spring plowing, although the temperature was too low to allow much corn to be planted, except along the southern border. Farm work has generally progressed well throughout Kentucky and a few warm days will set the corn planters at work. The general conditions on April 1 were much better then they were a month ago, and the wheat crop has moved up from 68 to 89.8, a gain of 12 points. The indications are for four-fifths of a crop. Rye has made a gain of 11 points during the month, while barley has shown up much better recently.

There are a good many men who are lying out under the green sod to-day because they tried to please everybody, says an observant exchange. When they started out in life they made up their minds that everybody should be satisfied with them, but they did not succeed in making anybody happy but the undertaker. The world is full of fault finders and grumblers and a man can't walk five minutes in any given direction without meeting them. Even when a man turns his face to the wall, kicks the foot of the bed, expires, there are people who will find fault with it. Some will say that he ought to have done it twenty years ago, while others will say he ought to have waited a little longer for the sake of his family. The man who just dogs along from day to day, and does his best regardless of what people say, is the one who is the hardest to kill, and when at last he does die there are about as many bouquets laid on his casket as there are on the casket of the man who worried himself into Abraham's bosom.

HORSES FOR MARKET.

Farmers Should Raise Only the Best Draft Animals.

In the first place, farmers should raise draft horses, writes J. B. E. Jacot in The Prairie Farmer. The breeding of road horses is a specialty for which farmers are not favorably situated. A light, all purpose horse is not the horse for market and therefore not the horse to raise. There is always an abundance of poor horses, they are not in demand, therefore raise the very best.

Here is an illustration: A man sold six horses to shippers, realizing $1,900 for them. Four sold for $300 a piece and two for $350 each. They were all good draft horses. About the same time I knew of another man who fed two horses for market. They were not good ones, and when he thought they were ready for market he could not sell them, so he kept them awhile longer, finally selling them both for $100.

In both these instances the horses were about the same age. It took nearly the same amount of work and of feed to prepare the horses for market fn each case. It is clear, therefore, that it pays only to raise the best. No direct rule for the feeding of horses can be laid down, but this much may be said: The horse should be fed and cared for by one person as much as possible and at regular intervals. This person should study to understand the horse under his care. He must know the effect of each feed and vary the feed accordingly. He must also know how to exercise each horse and improve every opportunity for its training. Teach it to be obedient and at the same time not afraid of him. Subdue by diligence and patience rather than force. It is not very advantageous to feed only one or two horses at a time. Feed several, and in that way make it a business, and you will be known to be in the business and will have more buyers. While you are selling one horse you will be advertising the others.

Be well posted on the horse market. Stick to your prices and bargains. Make yourself acquainted with as many dealers in horses as possible. Cooperate with them. Be frank and always represent a horse for what it is. Build up your business and make yourself felt as a prominent factor. Make it a point to have always good horses for the market.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

Love is a longing for something that you never know you don't want till you get it.

When a woman isn't saying more than she means she is meaning more than she says.

One of the funny things about living in the country is that if your clothes fit you half of the old women will believe you are living an evil life.

There is only one thing that can look as contented as a woman with a new silk dress on sitting in a front pew in church with her husband. That is a cow.

When a married man goes out and gets full he is smart enough to get an old bachelor to take him home, because he knows his wife will blame it on the old bachelor. —New York Press.

At Vincennes a balloon experiment has been carried out with a view of ascertaining how high the balloon could go; the balloon occupied by Capt. Balsan and M. Godard, attained an altitude of 22,006 feet. During the ascent Captain Balsan became insensible and was almost paralyzed, and only by the prompt attentions of his companion, who administered oxygen, was he able to recover. After that both held the oxygen tubes in their mouths. At 22,000 feet they still had ballast to throw out, but they had become so weak that their combined strength would not enable them to throw the bag over the side, and they were compelled to descend.

B. L. Martin says there is a grapevine near Grain's schoolhouse that measurers forty-six and one-half inches in circumference, four feet from the ground. It stands about five feet from a tall oak tree whose first branches are fully sixty feet from the ground, and the vine does not touch the tree until the branches are reached.—Danville Advocate.

INDIAN SIGNALS.

The Long Distance Code by Which the Red Men Conversed.

The traveler on the plains in the early days soon learned the significance of the spires of smoke that he sometimes saw rising from a distant ridge or hill and that in turn he might see answered from a different direction. It was the signal talk of the Indians across miles of intervening ground, a signal used in rallying the warriors for an attack or warning them for a retreat when that seemed advisable.

The Indian had a way of sending up the smoke in rings or puffs, knowing that such a smoke column would at once be noticed and understood as a signal and not taken for the smoke of some campfire. He made the rings by covering the little fire with his blanket for a moment and then suddenly removing the blanket and allowing the smoke to ascend, when he instantly covered the fire again. The column of ascending smoke rings said to every Indian within 30 miles: "Look out. There is an enemy near." Three smokes built close together meant danger. One smoke merely meat attention. Two smokes meant "Camp at this place." Travel the plains, and the usefulness of this long distance telephone will quickly become apparent.

Sometimes at night the settler or traveler saw fiery lines crossing the sky, shooting up and falling, perhaps taking a direction diagonal to the line of vision. He might guess that these were the signals of Indians, but unless he were an old timer he might not be able to interpret the signals. The old timer and the squaw man knew that one fire arrow (an arrow prepared by treating the head of the shaft with gunpowder and fine bark) meant the same as the as the column of smoke puffs—viz: "An enemy is near." Two arrows meant "Danger." Three arrows said imperatively, "This danger is great." Several arrows said, "The enemy are too many for us." Two arrows shot up into the air at once meant, "We shall attack;" three at once said, "We attack now." An arrow shot off in a diagonal direction said as plainly as pointing a finger, "That way." Thus the untutored savage could telephone fairly well at night as well as in daytime."

Say, Do You Know

That the average man counts time by pay days?

That no woman is as pretty as she sometimes looks?

That if you want to be successful, don't squeal, but root?

That the road to success is paved with good advertisements?

That a bright smile is a woman's molases that catches the flies.

That a loaded pistol is a bad thing to fool with, or to have a fool with?

That it never occurs to a boy that he will some day know as little as his father?

That the sweetest girls are seldomest seen because they are at home busy at work?

That the best thing that can happen to a man is to have a wife who is also his chum?

That those who make hay while the sun shines are the most liable to get sun-struck?

That trouble is about the only thing some people can borrow without giving security.

That good advice is good for the wayward boy, but it is nothing like a good whipping, very often?

That a man's friends often know of his engagement before he and the girl most interested are aware of it?

That a palmist may tell all about the human hand, but when it comes to poker hand they have to pass.

That when a woman is in great trouble she cries, but when a man is deeply distressed he gets on a drunk?

That the reason why so many people live beyond their means, is because of the credit system? They buy more than they are able to pay for.

Pennies do not consist of copper alone, there being in them 2 per cent of tin and 3 per cent of zinc to 95 of copper. They cost the government about 42 cents a pound exclusive of stamping, and there are 1,418 in a pound, so that the government makes a fair profit on every pound minted, since while they are redeemable in gold, but few are presented. At present they are all coined in Philadelphia by law, because there was formerly no demand at all for them in the Southwest and in the far West.

People for miles around flock there every night to hear Mrs. Annie Hanold, who is conducting the meeting. This action on her part has caused those who are superstitious to think she has supernatural powers and as a consequence the people are terribly excited over the services being held there.

STATE NEWS.

The Hancock county grand jury remained in session a week and returned only one indictment and that was against a man who had whipped a mule.

Henry Pickrell, of Carlisle, who died last week, was one of two brothers and five sisters whose combined ages were 639 years, and the average age 91 and 2-7 years. All were vigorous up to the time of death, and their mental faculties were clear to the last.

Citizens of Madison county held a mass-meeting at Richmond and discussed plans to prevent the removal of Central University to Danville. The efforts on the part of the curators of the college to bring about a consolidation with Centre were denounced and resolutions were adopted appointing committees with power to take legal action if necessary. Chancellor Blanton explained the position of Central University, and said that unless the consolidation was brought about the school would be obliged to close its doors, as funds to carry it on were lacking.

A laughable incident happened in the Bourbon Circuit Court last week. George Henry Allen, colored, was found guilty of stealing a mule, and under the statutes this being his third conviction, he received a life sentence in the penitentiary. When the Clerk read the verdict of the jury giving him a life sentence Allen exclaimed: "Gosh! That's a mighty long time for a poor nigger." Judge Cantrill instructed the jury that they would have to bring a specific verdict for the stealing of the mule, and then add the life sentence on afterward. The jury retired and when they returned, the clerk read the sentence of five years in the penitentiary. The negro, thinking they had reconsidered, gave a sigh of relief and exclaimed: "Now, that's better." When the clerk finished reading, and he heard the life sentence attached, he sank back in his chair with a groan, and remarked to his lawyer: "Gee, boss, they sent me for life and five years more."—Bourbon News.

Somthing About Funston.

Gen. Frederick Funston was born in Ohio in 1896, but was reared on a farm in Kansas. He started to college, but his money gave out and he did not graduate. He then did a little newspaper work and then collected fares on Santa Fe trains, between Kansas City and El Paso. He began his career of adventure by a trip into the the Death Valley of California to collect botanical specimens for the government, in which he had a very bad time.

Then for the department of agriculture he made a canoe trip from the head of the Yukon river through the Klondike country, to the river's mouth and received special public thanks of the department He then lived in New York by writing feature articles about his western adventures till the Cuban rebellion began, and in 1895 he joined the Cuban army intending to correspond for a New York paper. He distinguished himself in action and Gomez made him a captain.

When our war with Spain began the governor of Kansas appointed him colonel of a regiment. His exploit in swimming a river in North Luzon, under a hot fire, made him known to the country and the army.

Gen. Funston is a small man in statue, unusually so. He belongs as intimated before, to the class of heroes that Dumas wrote about. None of the three musketeers exceeded him in the audacity and success of his enterprises.

The traffic in votes in Indiana seems to be confined to no particular locality, and has become such a serious matter, that the rural press is devoting considerable space to the discussion of the evil. The North Vernon Republican, says: "It has been told us by a prominent Democratic manager, and it may be that Republican managers might indorse the statement with some modification, that one-fourth of the voters in Jennings county are of the kind whose votes may be bought, and the intimation was also given that at the election last fall that many purchases of votes were made. This is surely a lamentable condition of affairs and is evidently getting worse. In other counties in the State the situation must be very similar, but very unsatisfactory to other citizens, and in some counties an effort is being made to change the condition. In Montgomery county a number of those who sold their votes were prosecuted and disfranchised, as the law provides. This ought to have a salutary effect on those who were guilty but were not prosecuted. In Clark county last week one man was convicted and sentence given. In Jennings if prosecutions were to be begun we believe some present residents would become non-residents before the papers could be served on them. With the proportion as stated, what a hustle there would be if all were indicted, as every man who sells his vote should be. If this is not done who is to say that one-third of the votes cast at the next election will not be bought votes? Votes ought not be in the market like coffee and sugar, and we doubt not those who do the the buying would be glad to be relieved of the trouble and expense incident to getting this kind of votes. It is not a nice business, but some folks think it has to be done."

THE JOY OF RELIGION

Dr. Talmage Urges All to Try Its Uplifting Power.

He Characterizes Religion as God's Daughter — Sermon from the Text, "Her Ways Are Ways of Pleasantness."

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage sets forth religion as an exhilaration, and urges all people to try its uplifting power; text, Proverbs 3, 17: "Her ways are ways of pleasantness."

You have all heard of God's only begotten Son. Have you heard of God's daughter? She was born in Heaven? She came down over the hills of our world. She had queenly step. On her brow was celestial radiance. Her voice was music. Her name is Religion. My text introduces her. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness, and all her paths are peace." But what is religion? The fact is that theological study has had a different effect upon me from the effect sometimes produced. Every year I tear out another leaf from my theology, until I have only three or four leaves left—in other words, a very brief and plain statement of Christian belief.

An aged Christian minister said: "When I was a young man, I knew everything. When I got to be 35 years of age, in my creed I had only a hundred doctrines of religion. When I got to be 60 years of age, I had only 50 doctrines of religion. When I got to be 90 years of age I had only ten doctrines of religion, and now I am dying at 75 years of age, and there is only one thing I know, and that is that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." And so I have noticed in the study of God's word and in my contemplation of the character of God and of the eternal world that it is necessary for me to drop this part of my belief and that part of my belief as being nonessential, while I cling to the one great doctrine that man is a sinner and Christ is his Almighty and Divine Saviour.

Now I take these three or four leaves of my theology, and I find that in the first place and dominant above all others is the sunshine of religion. When I go into a room, I have a passion for throwing open all the shutters. That is what I want to do this morning. We are apt to throw so much of the sepulchral into our religion and to close the shutters and to pull down the blinds that it is only through here and there a crevice that the light streams. The religion of the Lord Jesus Christ is a religion of joy indescribable and unutterable. Wherever I can find a bell I mean to ring it.

If there are any in this house this morning who are disposed to hold on to their melancholy and gloom, let them depart this service before the fairest and the brightest and the most radiant being of all the universe comes in. God's Son has left our world, but God's daughter is here. Give her room. Hail, princess of Heaven! Hail, daughter of the Lord Almighty! Come in and make this house thy throneroom.

In setting forth this idea the dominant theory of religion is one of sunshine. I hardly know where to begin, for there are so many thoughts that rush upon my soul. A mother saw her little child seated on the floor in the sunshine and with a spoon in her hand. She said: "My darling, what are you doing there?" "Oh," replied the child, "I am getting a spoonful of this sunshine." Would God that to-day I might present you with a gleaming chalice of this glorious, everlasting Gospel sunshine!

First of all, I find a great deal of sunshine in Christian society. I do not know of anything more doleful than the companionship of the mere funmakers of the world—the Thomas Hoods, the Charles Lambs, the Charles Mathewses of the world—the men whose entire business it is to make sport. They make others laugh, but if you will examine their autobiography or biography you will find that down in their soul there was a terrific disquietude. Laughter is no sign of happiness. The maniac laughs. The hyena laughs. The loon among the Adirondacks laughs. The drunkard, dashing his decanter against the wall, laughs.

There is a terrible reaction from all sinful amusement and sinful merriment. Such men are cross the next day. They snap at you on exchange or they pass you, not recognizing you. Long ago I quit mere worldly society for the reason it was so dull, so inane and so stupid. My nature is voracious of joy. I must have it.

I always walk on the sunny side of the street, and for that reason I have crossed over into Christian society. I like their mode of repartee better. I like their style of amusement better. They live longer. Christian people, I sometimes notice, live on when by all natural law they ought to have died. I have known persons who have continued in their existence when the doctor said they ought to have been dead ten years. Every day of their existence was a defiance of the laws of anatomy and physiology, but they had this supernatural vivacity of the Gospel in their soul, and that kept them alive.

Put 10 or 12 Christian people in a room for Christian conversation, and you will hear eight to ten o'clock hear more resounding glee, see more brilliant strokes of wit and find more genuine and profound satisfaction than by any merely worldly party. Even when I say a "worldly party" I mean not to which you are invited [illegible] what all the circumstances [illegible] is the best for you to attend, not to which you go because under all circumstances of the case it is better that you do, and, leaving the shawls on the second floor, you go to the parlor to give formal salutation to the host and the hostess and then move around, spending the whole evening in the discussion of the weather and in apology for treading on long trains and in effort to keep the corners of the mouth up to the sign of pleasure, and going around with an idiotic he-he about nothing until the collation is served, and then, after the collation is served, going back into the parlor to resume the weather, and then at the close going at a very late hour to the host and hostess and assuring them that you have had a most delightful evening, and then passing down off the front steps, the slam of the door the only satisfaction of the evening.

I know there is a great deal of talk about the self-denials of the Christian. I have to tell you that where the Christian has one self-denial the man of the world has a thousand self-denials. The Christian is not commanded to surrender anything that is worth keeping. But what does a man deny himself who denies himself the religion of Christ? He denies himself pardon for sin, he denies himself peace of conscience, he denies himself the joy of the Holy Ghost, he denies himself a comfortable death pillow, he denies himself the glory of Heaven. Do not talk to me about the self-denial of the Christian life. Where there is one in the Christian life there is a thousand in the life of the world. "Her ways are ways of pleasantness."

Again, I find a great deal of religious sunshine in Christian and divine explanation. To a great many people life is an inexplicable tangle. Things turn out differently from what was supposed. There is a useless woman in perfect health. There is an industrious and consecrated woman a complete invalid. Explain that. There is a bad man with $30,000 of income. There is a good man with $800 of income. Why is that? There is a foe of society who lives on, doing all the damage he can, to 75 years of age, and here is a Christian father, faithful in every department of life, at 35 years of age is taken away by death, his family left helpless. Explain that. Oh, there is no sentence that oftener drops from your lips than this: "I cannot understand it. I cannot understand it."

Well, now religion comes in just at that point with its illumination and its explanation. There is a business man who has lost his entire fortune. The week before he lost his fortune there were 20 carriages that stopped at the door of his mansion. The week after he lost his fortune all the carriages you could count on one finger. The week before financial trouble began people all took off their hats to him as he passed down the street. The week his financial prospects were under discussion people just touched their hats without anywise bending the rim. The week that he was pronounced insolvent people just jolted their heads as they passed, not tipping their hats at all, and the week the sheriff sold him out all his friends were looking in the store windows as they went down past him.

Now, while the world goes away from a man while he is in financial distress, the religion of Christ comes to him and says: "You are sick, and your sickness is to be moral purification; you are bereaved, God wanted in some way to take your family to Heaven, and He must begin somewhere, and so He took the one that was most beautiful and was most ready to go." I do not say that religion explains everything in this life, but I do say it lays down certain principles which are grandly consolatory. You know business men often telegraph in cipher. The merchant in San Francisco telegraphs to the merchant in New York certain information in cipher which no other man in that line of business can understand, but the merchant in San Francisco has the key to the cipher, and the merchant in New York has the key to the cipher, and on that information transmitted there are enterprises involving hundreds of thousands of dollars. Now, the providences of life sometimes seem to be a senseless rigmarole, a mysterious cipher; but God has a key to that cipher and the Christian a key to that cipher, and, though he may hardly be able to spell out the meaning, he gets enough of the meaning to understand that it is for the best. Now, is there not sunshine in that? Is there not pleasure in that? Far beyond laughter, it is nearer the fountain of tears than boisterous demonstration. Have you never cried for joy? There are tears which are eternal rapture in distillation.

There are hundreds of people who are walking day by day in the sublime satisfaction that all is for the best, all things working together for good for their soul. How a man can get along through this life without the explanation is to me a mystery. What! Is that child gone forever? Are you never to get it back? Is your property gone forever? Have you no explanation, no Christian explanation, and yet not a maniac? But when you have the religion of Jesus Christ in your soul it explains everything so far as it is best for you to understand. You look off in life, and your soul is full of thanksgiving to God that you are so much better off than you might be. A man passed down the street without any shoes and said: "I have no shoes. Isn't it a hardship that I have no shoes? Other people have shoes!" until he saw a man who had no feet. Then he learned a lesson. You ought to thank God for what He does instead of grumbling for what He does not. God arranges all the weather in this world—the spiritual weather, the moral weather, as well as the natural weather. "What kind of weather will it be to-day?" said some one to a farmer. The farmer replied: "It will be such weather as I like." "What do you mean by that?" asked the other. "Well," said the farmer, "it will be such weather as pleases the Lord, and what pleases the Lord pleases me."

Oh, the sunshine, the sunshine of Christian explanation! Here is someone bending over the grave of the dead. What is going to be the consolation? The flowers you strew upon the tomb? Oh, no. The services read at the grave? Oh, no. The chief consolation on that grave is what falls from the throne of God. Sunshine, glorious sunshine! Resurrection sunshine!

Sometimes you wish you could make the tour of the whole earth, going around as others have gone, but you have not the means. You will make the tour yet, during one musical pause in the eternal anthem. I say these things for the comfort of those people who are abridged in their opportunities, those people to whom life is humdrum, who toil and work and aspire after knowledge, but have no time to get it, and say: "If I had the opportunities which other people have, how I would fill my mind and soul with grand thoughts!" Be not discouraged, my friends. You are going to the university yet. Death will only matriculate you into the royal college of the universe.

Besides that, we shall have all the pleasures of association. We will go right up in the front of God without any fright. All our sins gone, there will be nothing to be frightened about. There our old Christian friends will troop around us. Just as now one of your sick friends goes away to Florida, the land of flowers, or the south of France, and you will not see him for a long while, and after awhile you meet him, and the hollows under the eyes are all filled and the appetite has come back and the crutch has been thrown away, and he is so changed you hardly know him. You say: "Why, I never saw you look so well." He says: "I couldn't help but be well. I have been sailing these rivers and climbing these mountains, and that's how I got this elasticity. I never was so well." Oh, my friends, your departed loved ones are only away for their health in a better climate, and when you meet them they will be so changed, and after awhile, when you are assured that they are your friends, your departed friends, you will say: "Why, where is that cough? Where is that paralysis? Where is that pneumonia? Where is that consumption?" And he will say: "Oh, I am entirely well. There are no sick ones in this country. I have been ranging these hills, and hence this elasticity. I have been here now 20 years, and not one sick one have I seen. We are all well in this climate."

And then I stand at the gate of the Celestial city to see the processions come out, and I see a long procession of little children, with their arms full of flowers, and then I see a procession of kings and priests moving in Celestial pageantry—a long procession, but no black tasseled vehicle, no mourning group, and I say: "How strange it is! Where is your Greenwood? Where is your Laurel Hill? Where is your Westminster abbey?" And they shall cry: "There are no graves here." And then listen for the tolling of the old belfries of Heaven, the old belfries of eternity. I listen to hear them toll for the dead. They only strike up a silvery chime, tower to tower, east gate to west gate, as they ring out: "They shall hunger no more, neither thirst any more, neither shall the sun light on them nor any heat, for the Lamb which is in the midst of the throne shall lead them to living fountains of water, and God shall wipe away all tears from their eyes."

Oh, unglove your hand and give it to me in congratulation on that scene! I feel as if I could shout. I will shout. Dear Lord, forgive me that I ever complained about anything. If all this is before us, who cares for anything but God and Heaven and eternal brotherhood? Take the crape off the doorbell. Your loved ones are only away for their health in a land ambrosial. Come, Lowell Mason; come, Isaac Watts. Give us your best hymn about joy celestial.

What is the use of postponing our Heaven any longer? Let it begin now, and whosoever hath a harp let him thrum it, and whosoever hath a trumpet let him blow it, and whosoever hath an organ let him give us a full diapason. They crowd down the air, spirits blessed, mustering in cavalcade of triumph. Their chariot wheels whirl in the Sabbath sunlight. They come! Halt, armies of God! Halt until we are ready to join the battalion of pleasures that never die!

Oh, my friends, it would take a sermon as long as eternity to tell the joys that are coming to us. I just set open the sunshiny door. Come in, all ye disciples of the world who have found the world a mockery. Come in, all ye disciples of the dance, and see the bounding feet of this Heavenly gladness. Come in, ye disciples of worldly amusement, and see the stage where kings are the actors and burning words the footlights and thrones are the spectacular. Arise, ye dead in sin, for this is the morning of resurrection. The joys of Heaven submerge our soul. I pull out the trumpet atop. In thy presence there is a fullness of joy; at thy right hand there are pleasures forevermore.

Blest are the saints beloved of God;
Washed are their robes in Jesus' blood,
Brighter than angels, lo, they shine,
Their glories splendid and sublime!

My soul anticipates the day
Would stretch her wings and soar away;
To aid the song, the palm to bear,
And bow, the chief of sinners, there.
Oh, the sunshine, the glorious sunshine, the everlasting sunshine!

WORK THAT IS NEVER DONE.

Household Duties That Are Ever Recurring in the Lives of Wives and Mothers.

"If things would only stay done—If I could look back over the day and see one thing accomplished that will not have to be done over again to-morrow, I should not get so tired of it or feel so discouraged!"

How many millions of wives and mothers have made some such comment as this on the monotony of household tasks! It is not alone the deadly sameness, the constant repetition of little duties; it is even more the feeling of futility, the apparent failure to accomplish any enduring results. The bread that was baked this morning will be gone to-morrow. The dishes are washed and put away only to be used and washed again. The linen fresh from the ironing-table will be back in the laundry by the end of the week. The rooms swept clean the other day already need sweeping again. The children call for endless sympathy and attention.

A man's work may be ever so hard; it is less often clouded by this sense of unproductiveness. It usually brings a definite reward in the feeling of something accomplished, some tangible result achieved. The architect points to the finished building and says: "I designed it." The carpenter and the mason who see the structure growing under their hands know that it will stand for years, an unimpeachable witness to their industry and faithfulness, says Youth's Companion.

But the things which are tangible are not always those which are most real or most useful. There are other noble works besides fine buildings. The young man who goes out into the world healthy and clean-minded, strong in principles which he acquired at home, and firm in the belief that there is no other woman in the world quite so good as his mother—he is a nobler work even than a Parthenon or a Taj Mahal. And the daughter who has grown to womanhood with a pure heart, and hands trained to perpetuate in a new home the deeds of usefulness and comfort learned in the old—is she less to the world than brick and marble?

"Do not think that nothing is happening because you do not see yourself grow or hear the whir of the machinery," says Henry Drummond. "All great things grow noiselessly. You can see a mushroom grow, but never a child."

NEARLY ALL ARE HONEST.

Post Office Official Says Employes Are Seldom Detected in Dishonest Practices.

"Speaking about honesty among men," said a post office official, reports the Washington Star, "I will give you a fact or two which may prove interesting on that point.

"When it comes to an army of workers those employed under the post office department seal of security, certainty and security, make the other branches of the government, including the army and navy, respectively look like dwarfs.

"In the first place there are over 76,000 postmasters, over 15,000 letter carriers, over 8,500 railway mail service clerks, about 15,000 clerks in post offices, 22,800 star route drivers, 7,100 mail messengers, about 2,000 special office route drivers, or about 147,000 persons in all, and others not employed under the approximate enumerations constitute probably an army of about 150,000 men and women. Thousands of postmasters are of the latter sex, and several hundred more are employed here in Washington in the department.

"All of this great force of workers is directed, controlled and managed by less than 800 officials and clerks in the big granite building opposite the home of the Star.

"Yet out of this vast army but 292 were arrested last year for violations of the postal laws, of whom 119 were postmasters, 29 assistant postmasters, 48 clerks in post offices, eight railway mail clerks, 30 letter carriers, 29 mail messengers and 19 employed in other positions. There are many of us who are so constituted that we cannot withstand temptation. The knowledge that the public uses the mails for the transmission of money is always more or less of a temptation to this class. These figures, which will surprise those who read them, reflect great credit upon the personnel of the service, made up as it is of all sorts, kinds and degrees of men, as well as bear evidence to the honesty which is a characteristic of American life."

Queerest Railroad in the World.

The queerest railroad in the world runs in and out and around a public garden on the outskirts of Paris, called the "Jardin d'Acclimitation." In appearance it resembles a cross between a great Chinese dragon and a sea serpent. The engine forms the head of the enormous beast, and the steam arising from its nostrils is quite in keeping with the fabulous tales of dragons, who are popularly supposed to breathe forth smoke and flame. Each car forms a joint of the creature's sinuous body, and the seats are along the sides—back to back. To go gliding through the woods and open grounds of this park on this curious monster is a fascinating sport.—N. Y. Herald.

A MENACE LAID BARE.

The Blowing Up of Derelict Cleveland Successfully Accomplished by Mr. Bryan.

Hon. Grover Cleveland is a political derelict, dismasted and waterlogged, floating ponderously in lonely seas, a menace to navigation. Following the well-known rule in such cases made and provided, Hon. William J. Bryan has proceeded to blow him up. The job was well done—how well, our readers may judge from the following extracts from the Commoner:

"Mr. Cleveland and his political associates are long on high sounding phrases, but short on definitions. If Mr. Cleveland's recent admonition had been spoken, instead of written, it might have been explained by a wink or a gesture suggesting that he himself was the embodiment of the principles to which the party should return, but when the words appear in cold type they require a key.

"When the battle was on between a republic and an empire—between a democracy and plutocracy—between bimetallism and monometallism—he refused to say a word or lift his hand in behalf of 'the rank and file' for whom he now expresses such an affectionate solicitude. As soon as the election was over he came forth from his seclusion and made the air vocal with his suggestions. Assuming to be inspired by a purer democracy and boasting of a superior virtue, he began to offer unsolicited advice to the party to which he once belonged. He is like the soldier who was described as 'invisible in war and invincible in peace.'

"To desertion of the party organization and betrayal of the principles of the party he adds ostentatious pretense of interest in the plain people, while he conceals his ideas in ponderous and platitudinous phrases. If he will clearly and candidly define the democratic principles about which he is so prone to talk, the people can decide for themselves whether he is the same Mr. Cleveland who turned the treasury over to a foreign financial syndicate and intrusted J. Pierpont Morgan with the combination of the government vaults, and who supported the republican ticket because his administration was not indorsed—the same Mr. Cleveland who denounced trusts in his message, but failed to enforce the law against them—the same Mr. Cleveland who condemned imperialism and then gave passive support to an imperialistic president, or whether he has repented of his folly and is ready to accept the democratic creed."

If there is a democrat in the country who dissents from this characterization of the man who set out in 1893 to destroy the party which had twice elected him to the presidency we do not know his name. It is conceivable that creatures of the Dickinson, Bynum and J. Sterling Morton order might utter a word of protest, but any disclaimer from them would only add to the force of the indictment. Mr. Bryan has simply undressed the Princeton recluse with his pen, and he stands before the world much as God made him—the missing link between hypocritical democracy and trust plutocracy. The picture is not attractive, but it will not soon be forgotten.

Mr. Bryan possesses the unusual ability of writing quite as well as he talks. Mr. Cleveland has something of the same faculty, but in his case it is based upon that interesting phenomenon known to billiardists as reverse English.—Washington Times.

POINTS AND OPINIONS.

——Ross Hanna is an indisputable success in some fields of political enterprise, but as a breaker of senatorial deadlocks he is a 20-carat failure.—Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald.

——If the administration keeps on in its present course of imperialism and the spoils system, there will be more ex-congressmen after the next election than it can provide places for.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——Dictating the Cuban constitution is a most remarkable proceeding for the chief magistrate of a free people. But it is entirely consistent with the principles of imperialism and in perfect consonnnce with the actions of an emperor!—Tammany Times.

——Immense frauds have been discovered in the commissary department at Manila. That is but natural. When the administration steals islands, it is to be expected that its employes will take the cue and get a few keepsakes too.—St. Paul Globe.

——Republican members of congress who have returned from a flying trip to Cuba are convinced that the Cubans are utterly unfit for self-government. What appears to have inspired this belief is the manifest reluctance of the Cubans to let other people govern them.—Philadelphia Record.

——Speaking of the third-term suggestion, Senator Hanna says that nothing is further from the president's thoughts. He adds: "I do not believe that the idea has ever entered his head." As Senator Hanna is popularly supposed to decide what ideas shall enter President McKinley's head, this is in a certain sense authoritative.—Boston Globe.

——At the present time Mark Hanna is the very personification of republicanism. He stands for the centralization of wealth and the unlimited license to classes in return for political favors. He is the champion of a foreign policy for the promotion of the international interests of the trusts. He is the defender of any sort of methods in politics that insure success in elections and for that reason he is worshiped by republican politicians. He is running the machine and he will continue to run it.—Indianapolis Sentinel.

REQUESTS ARE MODEST.

Commercial Interests of Porto Rico Make Reasonable Appeal for Recognition.

The chamber of commerce of San Juan, Porto Rico, has evidently become pretty thoroughly Americanized, to be sure as it may with the mass of the people of the island.

Grounds for this opinion are supplied by a dispatch from that insular town in which it is stated that the body named has decided to present a petition to President McKinley through Gov. Allen "asking for a loan, for free trade, for an extension of the constitution and for a protective tariff on coffees entering the United States."

It is added that "the president of the chamber of commerce, looking upon these requests as unreasonable, has resigned." That worthy gentleman evidently has not become very thoroughly Americanized. He is much too sensitive.

What is there unreasonable in these requests, from the American point of view? The San Juan commercial body wants a loan—for the city, presumably, not for itself. What is there unreasonable about that when exposition promoters in our home cities ask not for loans, but for out-and-out appropriations of millions, and not only ask, but receive?

The chamber asks for free trade, meaning, no doubt, free trade with the United States, of which Porto Rico is a territory. What is there unreasonable about that? Every territory acquired before 1898 enjoys free trade with the United States. Besides, the Foraker act provides for this very thing as soon as the insular legislature provides for a sufficient revenue to be raised from other sources than duties.

The chamber asks for "an extension of the constitution," clearly meaning an extension to the people of Porto Rico of the rights enjoyed by Americans under the constitution. Surely there is nothing unreasonable in that. We have never before denied those rights to any people over whom we have exercised jurisdiction except temporarily, pending the organization of civil government, or in cases of rebellion.

They ask for a duty on coffee imported from foreign countries into the United States and the free admission of Porto Rican coffee. What is there unreasonable about this from the McKinley point of view? Doesn't every interest in this broad land not only request, but demand, precisely that kind of protection from the government at Washington? Certainly. Everybody knows that.

Why, even cruel and tyrannical Spain puts taxes on all other coffee, even that grown at home, for the protection of the Porto Rico coffee growers. Are we to be less kind and protective than Spain was? McKinley forbid!

The president of the San Juan chamber was too sensitive by three-quarters — nay, nine-tenths. He should go to Spain, where supersensitive people are modest in their demands upon the government.—Chicago Chronicle.

TRUSTS AND THE TARIFF.

Still Another Example of the Fostering Tendency of Protection.

That the tariff results, on occasion, at least, in producing trusts and advancing prices is illustrated by what has happened in the tin plate industry. The total annual production of tin plate in the United States to-day is about 10,000,000 boxes. The price is $4 a box, making the value of the product $40,000,000. The price in England is $2.30 a box. The price in this country is thus greater than the price in England by $1.70 a box—the exact amount of the tariff. The total difference in price to the American consumers is $15,000,000. There are not to exceed 25,000 men employed altogether in this industry. The American people to-day, therefore, are paying for tin plate sufficient excess over the amount they would pay at English prices to pay every man employed in this business $600 annually, which is more than the average wages of the man.

At the time of the formation of the American Tin Plate company tin plate was being sold by the individual factory at about $2.23 a box, and the factories made a profit of about 10 per cent. at this price. Indeed, the Tin Plate company professed to have made $20,000,000 last year, just 100 per cent. on the value of their product. It is estimated that the entire value of the American Tin Plate company, property, plants, raw and manufactured material, is not to exceed $20,000,000. The company is capitalized at $20,000,000 preferred stock, 7 per cent. cumulative, and $30,000,000 common stock. There is outstanding $28,000,000 of common and $18,325,000 preferred stock.

One share of common and one share of preferred stock were given to the original members of the tin plate plants in exchange for their plants on a basis of $100 for the two shares, being $80 for the preferred and $20 for the common, the promoters—the Moore Brothers, William B. Leads and D. G. Reed—receiving a bonus of $10,000,000 in common stock. The entire common stock was practically water. Common stock has just been quoted at 71 and preferred at 114, making a difference in value of watered stock of $23,000,000 in two years. The common stock has paid 8 per cent. dividends and the preferred stock pays 7.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

MOST PERFECT FOOD.

Milk Contains All the Ingredients Necessary for the Well Being of the Human Organism.

Milk is the most perfect food known, and the only substance provided by nature that contains all the necessary ingredients for supplying the various constituents required in the human organism. No other single article of food approaches it in this respect, and upon no other substance can life be sustained for so long a period as upon milk. The first demand of the infant is for milk, but the child is too often brought to a realization of the deceitfulness of human nature by being compelled to accept as a substitute a watered combination which gorges the stomach, but affords little nourishment.

Milk, to the infant, is in every respect the staff of life. In old age there is no other article of food upon which so much reliance can be placed to sustain the diminishing strength of the vital forces. Bread has long been regarded as the staff of life, but it falls far short in fulfilling the requirements of human economy, when compared with milk, though it supplies many of the demands of nutrition in a pleasant and palatable form.

The use of milk is coincident with the earliest history of man, and for centuries was one of the principal articles of food. When the children of Israel were let out of bondage in Egypt to Canaan, "a land flowing with milk and honey," only milk was promised; bread was not on the bill of fare. The use of milk as a food is universal; it is demanded by people all over the civilized world, therefore its care and protection against impurities and adulterants, by which it is accidentally or intentionally contaminated, requires stringent regulations on the part of the authorities.—N. Y. Weekly.

Grape for Long Keeping.

The Vergennes grape, one of the best long keeping varieties, is also superior in size, quality, beauty and vigor of vine. It is one of the varieties of best quality, always ripens perfectly in central Ontario and is eatable before it is quite ripe or fully colored. It is an extremely valuable grape for long keeping and can be kept in an open basket until midwinter in a cool, dry room. I have kept them in perfect condition packed in sawdust until Easter, for many years. Color red, berry and bunches very large and compact, enormously productive, vine vigorous and hardy if not overloaded.—W. Warnock, in Farm and Home.

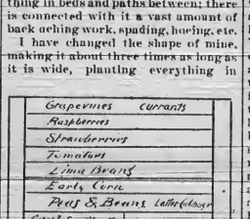
THE FLOWER GARDEN.

A List of Desirable Out-Door Plants for People Whose Time Is Occupied by Other Work.

Those who love flowers, and find their time so fully occupied that they cannot bother with annuals or seed of any kind, can have a brilliant display all summer with perennials. First of these is perennial phlox; our grandmothers used to call it "Jerusalem pink." It can be purchased in all colors, and if the long tresses of flowers are kept cut they are kept in bloom a long time. Some of the catalogues advertise to send them by mail for five cents apiece. They can be planted out at any time until the first of June. A round bed bordered with these, with Madame Crozy, and Florence Vaughan cannas in the center, makes one of the grandest displays that one would wish to see. Care must be exercised in planting out, not to set the young plants too close, as they grow very fast, blossoming the first season, and begin to crowd each other. Every year the roots must be divided.

Next on the list will be the perennial larkspur. The old-fashioned name was bee lark-pur or monkshood. These, too, must be given plenty of room, and their long tresses of "heavenly blue" must be cut when faded, to prolong their period of bloom.

For a yellow display nothing will compare with the golden glow rudbeckia. It sends out its double yellow blossoms for a week, and like the rest, is perfectly hardy. For a display of white flowers standing alone on the lawn, few flowers give better satisfaction than the hyacinthus Candicans. They are bulbs, and as hardy as an oak. Each bulb will send up two or three stems two or three feet tall, and these stems are filled with innumerable pure white bells, that are very pleasing to the eyes; but they are lacking in fragrance.



Now we will name one vine, the japonica, or hardy moon flower. In ordering, be sure you call for the hardy variety. The tuber resembles a sweet potato. You can purchase a large blooming-size tuber for 25 cents. The blossoms of this variety are white and very large, and stay out nearly all day. Plant the tuber deep in good rich soil, where it can remain. All plants named here, except cannas, require no care and are not troubled by insects.—Mrs. John Gaillard, in Ohio Farmer.

MANAGING A GARDEN.

Ohio Farmer Describes a Method Which, He Thinks, Saves Considerable Time and Labor.

There are doubtless many who, like myself, do not find much time to devote to the garden. I know two farmers who have discontinued their gardens, saying that they do not pay for the work they require, and there are many who would not have any worth mentioning if the women folks did not volunteer to lend a hand. Take the common form of garden with everything in beds and paths between; there is connected with it a vast amount of back aching work, spading, hoeing, etc.

I have changed the shape of mine, making it about three times as long as it is wide, planting everything in rows, excepting a few onions and small truck, and cultivating with a horse. I have a cultivator and a wheel hoe. The work of the garden is horse work almost entirely. Early in spring the ground is plowed deeply and harrowed until in the best of order. It is furrowed out by horse and the only hand labor required is occasionally with the wheel hoe, although this is not necessary where weeds are not bad. I leave a space of sod at each end to turn on. An hour or so every week is sufficient for the cultivating, which should be shallow and level.

I am so pleased with this change that I give the particulars of it here, thinking it may be of help to some one else. I present herewith a diagram showing the plan of my garden as it was last summer. It can be modified to suit individual needs, only it is best to put the perennial plants, grapevines, etc., by themselves, so that the balance can be plowed in one place early in the spring.—C. Davis, in Ohio Farmer.

Dairy Product Inspection.

Secretary Wilson will soon make rules in regard to the inspection of butter intended for export, which are calculated to build up a foreign market for American butter, especially in the east. Some years ago China and other countries afforded a good market for American butter, but as congress provided no rules for the inspection of this commodity merchants began substituting a poor class of goods and destroyed the market. At the last session of congress legislation was enacted which empowered the secretary of agriculture to cause the inspection of dairy products intended for export, and to furnish a certificate as to the character of the goods. Rules and regulations will be framed and enforced whereby first-class products will be properly identified abroad.

Butter should be exposed as little as possible to air from the time it is churned until it is packed.

Milk of different temperatures should never be mixed.

NEW ARMY RATION.

Receives the Full Approval of President McKinley.

Garrison and Travel Rations Remain Practically Unchanged — Entirely New Ration Is That for Troops in Field in Active Campaign.

President McKinley the other day gave his approval to the new army ration which has been under consideration for months, and which was authorized by the army reorganization law. There is no material change in the garrison ration which will be issued to troops at permanent posts. The standard articles of fresh beef, flour, beans, potatoes, prunes, coffee, sugar, vinegar, salt, pepper, soap and candles remain about the same. The item of sugar is increased five pounds per 100 rations. The former items of sirup and molasses are omitted.

For troops stationed in Alaska the issue of candles is increased from 1½ pounds to two pounds to the hundred. The travel ration is practically unchanged, the standard articles being soft bread, canned corn, beef, baked beans, coffee and sugar. The item of canned tomatoes, 50 pounds to the hundred rations, is added. Formerly this item was only issued to troops which had been out five days. The item of beans is cut down to 25 pounds from 33 pounds or 45 pounds, according to the size of the can, per hundred rations.

An entirely new ration is that for troops in the field in active campaign. This is about the same as the garrison ration in composition and quantity, except that baking powder is added, and 12-5 ounces of jam takes the place of 1 3-5 ounces of prunes as the fruit component.

It has been found that the troops in the field, especially those in the tropics, crave sweets. For this reason the sugar ration for both garrison troops and troops in the field has been increased, and jam is added to the list as a necessity rather than as a delicacy.

The new order provides for food for troops on army transports and for an emergency ration to be used only at such times and in such places that regular rations are not obtainable.

SAYS WE ARE SLOW.

Harmsworth, the London Editor, Leaves a Parting Thought on American Newspapers.

Alfred Harmsworth, the proprietor of the London Daily Mail and other publications, has sailed for home. When asked whether he had reason to change his opinion, which he expressed on his arrival here, as to changes which will be made in newspapers, he said:

"No. I believe that the changes will come, and that there will not be a gradual change. Some one will step in some time and make the changes. You are slow in many things in this country. Here they are fast as far as elevators, motor cars and other things are concerned, but very slow in other ways. In England we are testing and beginning to adopt some improvements which have already been tested and adopted here. Just so we have in use in England improvements that are not used here. The newspapers in England are too heavy and those here are too light. Your afternoon editions are too frequent. In the anxiety to get out first there is often not enough time to handle the news. I have seen many good things here which I shall adopt when I return to England. The papers here lack courage."

DAN GROSVENOR SAYS:

"Peruna is an Excellent Spring Catarrh Remedy---I am as Well as Ever."

HON. DAN. A. GROSVENOR, OF THE FAMOUS OHIO FAMILY.

Hon. Dan. A. Grosvenor, Deputy Auditor for the War Department, in a letter written from Washington, D. C., says:

"Allow me to express my gratitude to you for the benefit derived from one bottle of Peruna. One week has brought wonderful changes and I am now as well as ever. Besides being one of the very best spring tonics it is an excellent catarrh remedy." Very respectfully, Dan. A. Grosvenor.

Hon. John Williams, County Commissioner, of 515 West Second street, Duluth, Minn., says the following in regard to Peruna: "As a remedy for catarrh I can cheerfully recommend Peruna. I know what it is to suffer from that terrible disease and I feel that it is my duty to speak a good word for the tonic that brought me immediate relief. Peruna cured me of a bad case of catarrh and I know it will cure any other sufferer from that disease."

Miss Mattie L. Guild, President Illinois Young People's Christian Temperance Union, in a recent letter from Chicago, Ill., says:

"I doubt if Peruna has a rival in all the remedies recommended to-day for catarrh of the system. A remedy that will cure catarrh of the stomach will cure the same condition of the mucous membrane anywhere. I have found it the best remedy I have ever tried for catarrh, and believing it worthy my endorsement I gladly accord it."

Mrs. Elmer Fleming, Minneapolis, Minn.

"I have been troubled all my life with catarrh in my head. I took Peruna for about three months, and now think I am permanently cured. I believe that for catarrh in all its forms Peruna is the medicine of the age. It cures when all other remedies fail. I can heartily recommend Peruna as a catarrh remedy."

The spring is the time to treat catarrh. Cold, wet winter weather often retards a cure of catarrh. If a course of Peruna is taken during the early spring months the cure will be prompt and permanent. There can be no failures if Peruna is taken intelligently during the favorable weather of spring.

As a systemic catarrh remedy Peruna eradicates catarrh from the system wherever it may be located. It cures catarrh of the stomach or bowels with the same certainty as catarrh of the head.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

POOR LITTLE JOHNNY! AND HIS "TUMMY"!

Small boys, and many times large ones, and occasionally girls, too, big and little, suffer terribly from convulsive pains or "cramps" in the bowels and stomach—pain so violent that it "doubles up" the ones attacked, and makes it impossible for them to stand up.

Some people call it colic, but most honest, plain-spoken people call it "belly-ache" and very properly, for the seat of the trouble is in the bowels, and caused by the violent efforts of the bowels to rid themselves of something which doesn't belong there. The small boy usually gets it from over-eating or from eating forbidden fruit, and suffers mostly in the summer time.

It's spring now, and "in times of peace, prepare for war." Let the boys and girls and the big folks, too, for that matter, clean out the clogged channels filled with winter bile and putrid undigested food, strengthen the 30-feet of bowel canal, liven up the livers, and "summer bellyaches" will have no terrors, because they won't happen. The way to make the body ache-proof is to use CASCARETS, gentle, sweet, fragrant CASCARETS, the perfect system cleaners and bowel strengtheners. For fear that anybody in the family should ever be attacked by belly-ache, keep a box of CASCARETS in the house always, and remember that all pains and troubles in your insides are

He was born 78 years ago near Clarysville, Campbell county, and was an exemplary citizen.

On yesterday (Sunday) Drs. Loomis of the Kenton County Board of Health, and Renshaw, manager of said county's pest house, were seen at the Phoenix Hotel, just after their arrival from Bracht Station, (Key West P. O.) where they had located nine cases of smallpox in the house belonging to S. H. Mullins and occupied by two brothers named Jones, who came from Corinth and followed the business of selling whisky, beer, etc., in the premises. The nine cases showed all the various stages of the disease, and the house was immediately guarded. Mr. Geo. Laws, of this place, is installed as the principal quarantine official. Dr. Bagby, of this place, accompanied the Kenton county officials, and, had no little to say to one of the Jones Bros., who seemed altogether anxious for only one thing, and that was to have the business go on. In plain words, Jones had no thought only of selling whisky, carring very little for the spread of the loathsome disease, if the hellish traffic was allowed to go on unmolested. Whisky drinkers may see from this what regard the seller has for the good of the community in which they are located. It is somewhat remarkable that citizens of that vicinity have taken no steps to abate the dangerous nuisance.

Harve Smith has beaten all previous records of mail carriers at this place, he having made his round trip, a few days since, in less than two hours.

Prof. Snyder, immediately after the primary, turned his attention to gardening, which he prosecuted with that vim and vigor that characterised his canvass.

The sale of A. C. Kelly's nursery stock, last Saturday, was well attended, and the stock met with ready sale, the people knowing that every tree was true to name.

We wish to rectify the mistake made week before last in regard to James Rogers' tobacco crop. It is 100 acres of corn for which he is preparing land instead of tobacco.

Mrs. Satchwill has improved the looks of the property she recently purchased of Mrs. Annie Clore, by repairing the out buildings, and when she gets the dwelling painted you will hardly recognize the premises.

Copies of last Sunday's St. Louis Post Dispatch reached Burlington that day at 11:30 a. m.

Land for corn appears to be breaking nicely this spring, and it will be easily put in condition for planting.

The farmers are very anxious for a period of settled weather, that they may get their corn land prepared.

W. E. Vest, O. P. Conner and J. E. Smith, went to the mouth of Gunpowder, yesterday to procession some land.

The base ball season opens tomorrow, and the cranks on that subject will again find interesting reading in the daily papers.

James D. Cloud and sons, of this neighborhood, are among the neatest farmers in this county. We have had occasion to pass through their farm several times the past ten days, and have looked in vain for a grub or briar. Every fence row and every hollow is perfectly clean, and nicely set in grass, while no bare, washed points appear to mar the looks of the farm.

Pen, a venerable canine belonging to A. M. Acra, committed suicide some time Sunday night, by jumping into Lum Lucass' sistern, where Mr. Lucass found him early Monday morning, when he went to draw water to be used in cooking the morning's meal. A dispatch dated Kokomo, Ind., April 14, says. "Nearly 100 descendants of Andrew House, reported to have left an undivided estate worth now $300,000,000, held a national convention here yesterday, seven states of the union being represented. To their surprise their attorney, Frank Huston, of St. Paul, Minn., did not appear, and the true condition of affairs was not demonstrated. It was a disappointment to those who had traveled hundreds of miles, some of whom had been led to believe they could carry the money home with them. The disgust of the attendants reached a climax when it was shown that the United States Attorney for the Maryland district in which the estate was alleged to be located had repeatedly stated that no such estate existed in Maryland. The delegates returned to their homes disillusioned."

Discovered After Death That She Had Two Children.

One, a Boy, the Present Claimant, Was Placed in an Orphan Asylum at Louisville, Ky., by "Dr. Keattle."

"Dr. Keattle" died at Punta Gorda, Fla., in 1896. Then it was discovered that the "Doctor" was a woman, and that for 30 years she had masqueraded. The woman was a mother. Those who were supposed to know say that in 1853 a little boy was placed in the Protestant Episcopal Orphan asylum at Louisville by "Dr. Keattle," then confessedly a woman, known as Kate Haviland. The boy's name was Hugh H. Haviland. He was later bound out to a farmer and finally rose to an independent position at Greenville. This is the story of Hugh Haviland told by himself.

For nearly 40 years he knew nothing of his parents. Then came a letter from a New York lawyer, G. Tarleton Goldwaithe, 141 Broadway, who wrote that while searching for heirs of "Dr. Keattle," whom death revealed to be a woman, he had found that in 1853 she, going by the name of Kate Haviland, had put Hugh H. Haviland in the Protestant Episcopal Orphan asylum at Louisville. Hugh H. Haviland, Greenville, is regarded as that boy. That Kate Haviland was "Dr. Keattle" was, it is said, practically established by witnesses in New York and Brooklyn.

But Hugh H. Haviland is heir to but half the fortune. A girl who is expected to divide it with him, Grace H. Clark, Elliott Haviland's niece, as Lawyer Goldwaithe says, believes herself sole heiress to Imbray Clark, of Australia, who died worth $25,000,000.

Hugh Haviland's little sister, Kate Haviland's other child, according to Lawyer Goldwaithe, was put by the mother with foster parents. The girl grew up, married Imbray Clark, and went west with him. In 1877 they went to San Francisco, and there a child was born. Within two weeks the delicate mother, Kate Haviland's girl, died. The baby was placed in the hands of Mrs. Martha A. Griswold, superintendent of the home of the friendless, by Imbray Clark, who sailed almost immediately for Australia. Several years after Mrs. Griswold heard of Clark's death, and advertised for some one to adopt the little orphan girl. The Elliotts responded, and on August 21, 1878, were granted papers of adoption by a court in San Francisco.

In 1897 the Elliotts learned that Imbray Clark had left a fortune of $25,000,000, to which there was no heir, and began a fight for their foster daughter's rights. The estate is tied up in the English courts, and though hundreds of claimants have come forward, none has been able to prove claims to the satisfaction of the British authorities.

Grace M. Clark Elliott had almost given up hope when Lawyer Goldwaithe's letter came, telling her she was heiress to the estate of her grandmother, the spurious "Dr. Keattle," of Punta Gorda. Now Miss Elliott expects to prove her claim.

THE ELECTROGRAPH.

A Test of Thos. Mills' Invention Between Chicago and Columbia University a Failure.

Chicago, April 12.—Failure marked a test which drew a number of men of science to the Quadrangle club, University of Chicago. It was an effort to transmit and receive pictures by telegraph between Columbia university, New York, and the University of Chicago. The instrument, or electrograph, had worked successfully over distances of several hundred miles, but owing to induction of the wires in New York, would not record the thousands of fine dots of which the pictures are composed. Thomas Mills, the inventor of the electrograph, was in charge of the test in this city, and his assistant, H. R. Palmer, directed operations in New York. In the latter city there was gathered a number of men of world-wide fame, among whom were Thomas A. Edison, Nikola Tesla, Signor Marconi and Prof. Pupin.

The electrograph resembles in a slight degree a large graphophone. The paper on which the picture is reproduced is wrapped around a cylinder, upon which a very sensitive stylus makes its dots corresponding in light and shade to the dots composing the half-tone illustration. Messrs. Mills and Palmer, in view of the lack of success, decided to delay further tests a few days.

GEORGE Q. CANNON DEAD.

The Funeral Services Will Be Held in the Tabernacle, Salt Lake, Next Wednesday.

Salt Lake, Utah, April 13.—Upon receipt of the news of the death of George Q. It was decided to hold the funeral services in the tabernacle on next Wednesday at noon. Special rates will be made by the railroads and a large attendance is expected from every part of the state.

In 1849 he went to California on missionary work and in 1850 went to the Hawaiian islands and remained there for four years. In 1855 he established the Western Standard in San Francisco. In 1860 he was made a member of the quorum of the Twelve Apostles. He was a delegate in congress from 1872 to 1880 and is one of the counselors to the president of the Mormon church. He is prominently connected with many of the business enterprises in Utah.

A FATHER'S REVENGE.

An Alabama Man Shot and Killed a Negro for Criminally Assaulting His Daughter.

Tuscumbia, Ala., April 13.—Emmett Crittenden, a well known farmer of Spring Valley, in this county, shot and instantly killed a Negro named West for criminally assaulting Crittenden's oldest daughter. When Crittenden was informed of the assault he loaded a double-barrel shotgun and went to the field where West was working. He calmly told West he had come to kill him. With a frightened look the Negro cried, "I ain't dun nuffin," and started to run. Crittenden fired twice and 24 buckshot passed through West's head and body. Crittenden came to Tuscumbia and surrendered to the sheriff.

CUBAN CONVENTION.

It Placed Itself on Record Against the Platt Amendment By a Vote of 18 to 10.

Havana April 13.—The Cuban constitutional convention placed itself upon record Friday against the Platt amendment by a vote of 18 to 10 on a resolution that the convention should declare itself opposed to the amendment "on account of the terms of some of the clauses and the way in which they are drawn, and also on account of the contents of others, especially Clauses III., VI. and VII."

The conservatives assert that this action is embarrassing, inasmuch as it practically ties the hands of any commission that might be sent to Washington.

Washington, April 13.—Secretary Long received a dispatch from Commander Hemphill saying that the torpedo boat Thornton had been put on her trial over the Barren island course and run about 45 minutes at a speed of 26.5 knots, when the forward boiler gave out. He adds that no one was hurt. The contract requires a continuous run of two hours at a speed of 26 knots per hour. Considerable repairs will likely be necessary before another trial can be had.

THE BUBONIC PLAGUE.

Disease Appears to Be Spreading Throughout the World.

During the Week Ending February 8 There Were in Bombay 1,770 Cases, With 1,293 Deaths, an Increase.

Washington, April 12.—Thousands of cases of bubonic plague in all parts of the world since November 1 last have been reported to the marine hospital service. At Rio de Janeiro, from February 1 to 20, there occurred five new cases and three deaths. At Hong-Kong, China, three cases, all fatal, occurred during the week ended February 18. The plague is steadily increasing in Cape Colony, according to reports received both in London and Paris. The official report from Cape Colony for the week ended March 2 shows 50 new cases, 12 deaths and four suspects; for the following week, 50 cases, 18 deaths and 11 suspects. Several Europeans have been attacked and a number of natives have been found dead from the disease. The rats are reported to be "trekking" from Cape Town in great numbers, and at Simonstown the rats are reported to be dying from plague.

At Mauritius during the two weeks ended March 8 there were in the island 18 fresh cases of plague and 25 deaths. On March 14 two fresh cases are reported to have occurred in Perth, West Australia. The marine hospital surgeon in charge at London has reported that the rumor of suspected plague at Southampton, published in the Paris papers, probably is unfounded, but extra precautions are being exercised at that port in view of the large number of troops returning from South Africa. The plague at Karnkogun, Russia, is stated in the official report from Paris to be on the decrease, the same report saying that 15 deaths from cholera occurred at Singapore, Straits Settlement, during the last week of January. A report published in a Berlin paper March 11 and forwarded here says the plague at Cape Town is now attacking the well to do people.

Marine Hospital Surgeon Greene at Berlin has just reported that in the Kirgisen reservation, Russia, 13 persons have fallen victims to plague, and in the presidency of Bombay, British East India, during the week ended February 8, there occurred 1,770 plague cases and 1,293 deaths, an increase of 349 cases and 314 deaths over the previous week. In Bombay city last week there were 1,056 cases of plague, an increase of 308, and 1,359 deaths ascribed to plague. Up to March 2 150 plague cases had occurred in Cape Town, of which 72 terminated fatally. In Argentine five plague patients are in the legation hospital at San Nicolas on February 7, and plague was suspected in the cities of Belleville and Marios Juarez, of Cordoba province.

Official notice has been received that the government of the Danish West Indies has raised the quarantine against Port Said and Smyrna and declared the port of Brisbane, Queensland, free from plague.

THE BEST HE EVER SAW.

A Missourian Pronounces on the Farming Possibilities of Western Canada.

Just at present considerable interest is being aroused in the fact that a few new districts (of limited acreage) are being opened out by the Canadian Government in Saskatchewan and Assiniboia (Western Canada), and any information concerning this country is eagerly sought. Mr. W. R. Corser, of Higginsville, Lafayette Co., Mo., was a delegate there during last summer, and writing of his impressions he says:

"I found surprising yields of grain of all descriptions. One farmer I visited threshed of 175 acres:

"900 bushels of wheat from 15 acres,
40 bushels to acre.
"600 bushels of barley from 10 acres,
60 bushels to acre.
"15,000 bushels of oats from 150 acres,
100 bushels to acre.

"The samples were all No. 1.

"I also saw a considerable number of stock. Swine do well and there is no disease amongst them. They are a good source of income to the farmer. The cattle on the range beat anything I ever saw. Fat and ready for beef, fully matured and ripened on the nutritious grasses of the prairie. I am firmly convinced that this country offers better facilities for a poor man than any I have ever seen."

Information concerning these lands can be had from any agent of the government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere.

DO YOU FEEL LIKE THIS?

Pen Picture for Women.

"I am so nervous, there is not a well inch in my whole body. I am so weak at my stomach and have indigestion horribly, and palpitation of the heart, and I am losing flesh. This headache and backache nearly kills me, and yesterday I nearly had hysterics; there is a weight in the lower part of my bowels all night down all the time, and pains in my groins and thighs; I cannot sleep, walk, or sit, and I believe I am diseased all over; no one ever suffered as I do."

This is a description of thousands of cases which come to Mrs. Pinkham's attention daily. An inflamed and ulcerated condition of the neck of the womb can produce all of these symptoms, and no woman should allow herself to reach such a perfection of misery when there is absolutely no need of it. The subject of our portrait in this sketch, Mrs. Williams of Englishtown, N.J., has been entirely cured of such illness and misery by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and the guiding advice of Mrs. Pinkham of Lynn, Mass.

DAMAGING TESTIMONY.

Ex-Gov. W. O. Bradley Testifies in the Ripley Case.

Bradley's Testimony May Result in a Requisition on the Governor of Indiana for the Return of Ex-Gov. Taylor.

Frankfort, Ky., April 11.—Ex-Gov. W. O. Bradley, who was chief counsel for Ex-Gov. W. S. Taylor in the gubernatorial contest before the legislature last year, gave sensational testimony Wednesday afternoon in the trial of Capt. Garnett D. Ripley, who is charged with conspiring with Taylor and others to bring about the murder of Wm. Goebel. Mr. Bradley detailed a conversation which he said he had with Capt. Ripley while the latter was in charge of his military company during the occupancy of the state capitol by the Taylor troops last spring, in which Ripley told him of frequent conferences with Goe. Taylor prior to the assassination. The witness said that Ripley told him he was in the executive office the day before the shooting and complained to Taylor because he had not called out his (Ripley's) company, and asked him when he should have the company ready. Taylor replied, "My God, haven't you brought them yet? Goebel will not live 24 hours," or "can not live 24 hours."

Judge W. H. Yost, associate counsel with Bradley in the contest case, according to the witness, was present and heard the conversation. In response to a question as to whether he (witness) heard of any conspiracy to kill Mr. Goebel, the witness stated that on January 25, the day the train load of mountineers arrived, some one, he could not now recall who, told him that parties in the crowd were waiting in front of the state house to kill Goebel.

"I said," continued the witness, "it shall be stopped. I will go in the senate chamber and come out with Goebel and see that he is not hurt or insulted."

The general opinion here is that the Bradley evidence will result in a requisition on Gov. Durbin, of Indiana, for the return of ex-Gov. Taylor to the state for trial. This, however, will not be made at once.

Frankfort, Ky., April 12.—The testimony in the case of Garnett Ripley brought out nothing sensational Thursday that had not already been anticipated. Judge W. H. Yost testified corroborating the evidence given by former Gov. W. O. Bradley Wednesday.

Frankfort, Ky., April 13.—The prosecution will conclude its testimony in the Ripley case Saturday. The defense will move for peremptory instructions for a verdict of acquittal. The lawyers for the prosecution do not believe this will be sustained in view of the ruling of the court permitting the introduction of the evidence as to the conspiracy overruling the objections of the defense on this point. They assert that the evidence of ex-Gov. Bradley and Judge Yost connects Ripley in a way to preclude peremptory instructions.

Erasmus Ditto, who lives in Ripley's neighborhood, testified to having a conversation with Ripley during the contest over the governorship. Witness asked Ripley if he thought Goebel would be declared governor. Ripley responded, "If he is, he will never take his seat."

John Ricketts said he talked with Youtsey on numerous occasions. Youtsey told him the only way to win the contest was to "put Goebel out of the way," and said it could be done from the secretary of state's office, and the assassin could escape through the basement and not be discovered. A few minutes before the assassination Youtsey called on him and others to accompany him to the executive buildings and said that something was going to happen. Witness remembered what Youtsey had said about putting Goebel out of the way and did not go. Shortly after this the killing occurred.

Frankfort, Ky., April 15.—The prosecution in the Ripley case rested at noon Saturday. Wharton Golden was on the stand. He repeated the story that he told on the stand at the Powers trial at Georgetown in all its details, telling of the assistance he gave in bringing armed people from the mountains to Frankfort and of threats of Taylor and Caleb Powers against the life of Goebel and other democrats. His only statement concerning the prisoner at the bar was that he saw Ripley during the month of January, 1900, in the office of Adjt. Gen. Collier, and they were talking about furnishing guns to Ripley's company.

The trial of Garnett D. Ripley was resumed Monday. The defendant was the first witness for the defense. Ex-Gov. Bradley and Judge W. H. Yost could not be seen Sunday, but it is known they positively affirm that Ripley made the statement to them that Gov. Taylor used the words, "Goebel has not 24 hours to live," or, "Can not live 24 hours longer."

THE KIDNAPING CASE.

H. C. Henderson, in Jail at Dallas, Tex., Says He is One of the Cudahy Kidnapers.

Dallas, Tex., April 15.—There was a meeting at the county jail Sunday between County Attorney George W. Shields, of Omaha, and H. C. Henderson, who asserts that he is one of the Cudahy kidnapers. This meeting was arranged Saturday on a statement from Henderson to Shields that he would probably talk after having consulted his attorneys.

Mr. Shields said Sunday that Henderson still declined to make a detailed statement of his alleged connection with the kidnaping and that his talk was full of generalities and had very little of the details that are wanted. He also said that Henderson is very cautious as to what he says about this case, though he will converse volubly on other subjects connected with Omaha.

Mr. Shields said that it was probable that E. A. Cudahy and his son would come to Dallas within the next few days to see Henderson.

Omaha, Neb., April 15.—E. A. Cudahy said Sunday that his going to Dallas, Tex., would depend entirely on the result of County Attorney Shields' visit to that city in connection with the alleged confession of H. C. Henderson as to his complicity in the abduction of young Cudahy last December. Should it become practically certain that Henderson was one of the kidnapers, Mr. Cudahy and his son will leave for Dallas during the present week, when the young man will attempt to identify Henderson.

COL. JAMES C. BERRET.

Former Mayor of Washington and One of Its Best Known Citizens, is Dead, Aged 80 Years.

Washington, April 15.—Col. James G. Berret, former mayor of Washington and one of its best known citizens, died here Sunday, aged 86 years. He was a native of Baltimore and had twice been a member of the Maryland legislature, and 1858 and 1860 was elected mayor of Washington, D. C., as a democrat. Col. Berret had the friendship and esteem of many public men, both democrats and republicans. He was chairman of the inaugural committee when President Cleveland was inaugurated the second time, and during both the Cleveland administrations was always a welcome caller at the white house. On August 26, 1861, Col. Berret, by order of Secretary Seward, was arrested as a southern sympathizer, the charge against him being that he had written "Certain letters containing treasonable utterances against the United States government." He was sent to Fort Lafayette, in New York harbor, and held there for two weeks as a military prisoner. When President Lincoln heard of the arrest he ordered Col. Berret's discharge.

These will be taken to Manila. For Guam there is a large quantity of provisions and clothing and 500 good sized orange trees.

Fifty officers will go on the ship as passengers. A number of them will be accompanied by their wives. The Solace is weighed down with old guns and chains taken along as ballast for the return trip. A large draft of sailors will arrive from the east on Monday to take passage on the Solace.

Labor Troubles at St. Paul.

St. Paul, Minn., April 15.—Trouble of a serious character is brewing among the building trades of St. Paul and a general strike is said to be imminent. The trouble came about through a demand made on the painters and decorators by the masters' association that they withdraw from the Building Trades Council. The painters have resisted this demand.

MINISTERS MOVE SLOW

Their Dilatory Tactics in the Negotiations Cause Comment.

The Missionary Statements Regarding a Rebellion in Mongolia Are Not Supported by the Facts, Says Prince Ching.

Peking, April 15.—Prince Ching says all his reports go to show that the missionary statements regarding a rebellion in Mongolia are not supported by the facts. Neither does he believe that the rebellion of Gen. Tung Fu Hsian amounts to much.

"It is the object of certain elements," he asserts, "to make it seem that China is in a condition of constant broil, rendering it unsafe for the foreign troops to be withdrawn. Those who have this in view will magnify a village quarrel into a big rebellion. The missionaries, naturally timid, take these rumors in good faith."

The conduct of the ministers of the powers over the negotiations with the Chinese plenipotentiaries causes much adverse comment among the military authorities.

Their dilatory tactics have prevented what might have been accomplished two months ago. Even now the meetings of the ministers are postponed for the most trivial causes. For instance, the desire of one minister to go on a picnic to the tombs of the Ming dynasty prevented the holding of a meeting for a number of days. Then M. DeGiers and other ministers insisted upon celebrating Easter and thus a week was consumed. In a third case an unnecessary visit by one minister to Tien-Tsin held up the negotiations for four days. These are fair illustrations of what has been almost continuous from the beginning.

Peking, April 15.—Komoura Yutaro, the Japanese minister, accompanied by Gen. Yamaguchi, the Japanese commander, recently called upon Prince Ching and notified him that the return of Emperor Kwang Su to Peking was urgently desired.

Prince Ching was informed that the emperor's wishes would be respected by the foreign troops, and that every courtesy would be shown him.

It was pointed out to the Chinese plenipotentiary that the emperor's return was of the highest possible importance as affecting the maintenance of the integrity of the Chinese empire, and that he should come accompanied by every available soldier, by at least 20,000 men if possible.

These troops, it was further contended by the Japanese minister, must be sent to Manchuria, as the Russians reported great disturbances there, and it was not right that the task of quelling the trouble should be thrown upon the shoulders of one nation. Finally, Prince Ching was assured that, if the 20,000 Chinese troops could not suppress the disorders in Manchuria, other powers would send an international force to co-operate with China, which all the powers regarded as a friendly power. No reply having been received to this communication, Li Hung Chang was Sunday notified to the same effect, and told that Emperor Kwang Su must give an immediate answer.

POLITICAL CRISIS IN SEOUL.

Kim Yang Chun Beheaded for Attempting to Make His Son an Heir to the Throne.

Tacoma, Wash., April 15.—A sensational political crisis exists in Seoul, capital of Coren. The news was brought Sunday night by the steamship Duke of Fife that the government has beheaded Kim Yang Chun for planning to make the son of the emperor's favorite mistress, Lady Om, heir to the throne, displacing the prince imperial, son of the murdered queen. The decapitated official was the leader of the Kim faction, which has been engaged for months in deadly rivalry with the Min faction, led by Min Kong Sik, for the domination of Corean politics. The Min faction learned of the plot against the prince imperial and a street fight between the factions resulted. After Kim Yang Chun was beheaded, that clique gathered in such force that Min Kong Sik and his chief supporters were imprisoned, Min being ordered banished to 12 years. Ku Won Chai, minister of war and another official, adherents of Kim Yang Chun, resigned and precipitated a cabinet crisis. Li Chi Yong, minister of the household, and new governor Yim Tak Yong, of Kyonkido, were arrested for complicity in the same plot.

Big Gold Strike.

Spokane, Wash., April 15.—The Spokesman Review reporter, who has returned from the gold discoveries on St. Mary's river, in Kootnai, Idaho, confirms previous reports of the richness of the discovery. Miners can take out from $400 to $500 per day.

London, April 15.—The government of Coren, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from St. Petersburg, has decided to build 32 coast fortresses to resist a possible Japanese invasion.

ON THE CROSSING.

A Party of Four People Run Down by a Train, Three Being Killed and One Injured.

Wilkesbarre, Pa., April 15.—A party of four people, while crossing the tracks of the Lehigh Valley railroad at South Wilkesbarre, were run down by the Buffalo express, going north. Three of the party were killed and one injured. The dead are: Morris O'Connell, Mrs. Morris O'Connell, Mrs. Frank Cranmer. Injured: Frank Cranmer.

O'Connell and his wife were entertaining the Cranmer couple, whose home is in Bradford county. During the evening they visited relatives in this city, and at 1:30 Sunday morning started to return to the home of the O'Connell's. When they reached the crossing at South Wilkesbarre a freight train was blocking it. As soon as the freight train moved out the party started to cross the tracks, but did not notice the approaching passenger train from an opposite direction. The express train failed to see the people on the track until the locomotive had plunged into them. The two women were hurled a great distance in the air, and when picked up were dead. Both bodies were badly mangled. Mr. O'Connell had both legs and one arm broken. He was taken to a hospital, where he died in a short time. Mr. Cranmer was able to step back from the tracks before being struck with full force and escaped with slight injuries.

MRS. NATION ARRESTED.

Kansas Saloon Smasher Charged With Obstructing the Street—Released On Bond.

Kansas City, Mo., April 15.—Mrs. Carrie Nation was arrested in this city Sunday night on the charge of obstructing the street. She was taken to the police station in a patrol wagon but was released on a cash bond of $6. Her trial in the police court was set for Monday morning. Mrs. Nation lectured in Kansas City, Kan., Saturday night and came over to the Missouri side Sunday morning. She started on a tour of investigation among the down town saloons Sunday evening. A crowd of a thousand men and boys followed her and at Twelfth and Walnut streets, where there are saloons on three corners, she was arrested because the crowd following her blocked the streets. She roundly lectured the saloon men whom she visited.

ZIONISTIC MOVEMENT.

Hebrews Held a Meeting in Milwaukee and Approved a Plan to Restore Ancient Jewish Prestige.

Milwaukee, April 15.—Fifteen hundred Hebrews held a meeting Sunday in the interest of the Zionistic movement and demonstrated approval of the plan which it is hoped will restore the ancient prestige of the Jews as a nation. The plan is to raise a fund sufficiently large to purchase the land of Palestine from the Turks and make it a refuge for the oppressed Jews of every land. One of the branches of the organization is located in Milwaukee and has a constantly increasing membership. D. Caro, of this city, is one of the chief promoters of the movement.

IN FAVOR OF PEACE.

The People of the Province of Capiz Flocked to See the United States Philippine Commission.

Capiz, Province of Capiz, Island of Panay, P. I., April 15.—The people of this section of Panay flocked to Capiz Sunday on foot and in carriages to meet the members of the United States Philippine commission and to attend the explanation of the principles upon which provincial government is to be established here Monday. Thousands were present at the meeting held in the theater.

Representatives of the natives asserted that federalist movement, combined with the liberality of the laws being enacted by the committee, had caused the recent rapid pacification in the northern part of the island.

The province of Capiz has suffered greatly from worm, rinderpest and locust plagues, and popular sentiment is unanimously in favor of peace and civil government.

Killed His Brother-in-Law.

Wichita, Kan., April 15.—At Granite, Okla., Sunday, J. T. New killed his brother-in-law, John Doyle. Both had revolvers, but Doyle did not attempt to use his weapon. He went into a neighbor's house to avoid the quarrel, but New followed him and shot him three times. Bad blood had existed between them. New is under arrest.

Died in the Insane Asylum.

STATE ITEMS OF INTEREST.

A PITCHED BATTLE.

Two Killed and Two Wounded is the Result of a Fight Between Detectives and Desperadoes.

Mayking, Ky., April 13.—Two killed and two wounded is the result of a pitched battle between desperadoes on one side and John W. Wright, the celebrated detective, and his men, on the other, at Boone's Fork, above here in Letcher county.

The trouble has been expected for months, as Wright and his posse have been searching for the remaining seven members of the lawless kuklux gang, who, with eight others, brutally murdered Mrs. Minia Hall and her son, Sherwood Reynolds, at Boone's Fork, last November. The parties have declared that they could not be arrested.

Friday Wright and his men—Solomon Wright, his brother; Henan and Floyd Flemings; "Wild Bill," the Cincinnati officer; John Radcliff, a man named Osborne, William Wright, Isaac Millard and one whose name could not be learned—came upon two of the enemy, Creed Potter and John Reynolds, who opened fire.

For twenty minutes the firing waged at close range, the shots having been heard for miles around.

In the midst of the fight John Reynolds retreated with a probably fatal wound in his left shoulder. Creed Potter kept up the fight alone until his ammunition gave out, and he was forced to give up.

When the smoke cleared away William Wright, the 18-year-old son of the late W. S. Wright, who was assassinated a year ago by John and Noah Reynolds, lay dead. A steel ball had pierced his abdomen. He died fighting the enemy to avenge his father's death.

A second victim was Isaac Millard, formerly of Pike county. A ball passed through his left breast. A man named Osborne was shot through the right leg.

Frankfort, Ky., April 13.—The Lexington and Louisville batteries of state guard were put in readiness to be sent to Letcher county, where a sheriff and two deputies are reported to have been killed while trying to arrest several mountain desperadoes, charged with the murder of Mrs. Jemina Hall and her son. The county judge of the county wired for troops fearing further trouble, but later news was to the effect that troops are not needed and they will not be sent.

THE FEUDISTS.

Twenty Recruits to the Ku Klux Gang Entrenched in the Mountains—A Battle Imminent.

Mayking, Ky., April 15.—Twenty men extra, comprising the Potters and Bentleys, all tough characters, of Boone's Fork, the scene of much disorder, above here, joined the Reynolds faction Sunday. They are heavily armed and prepared for any emergency. A dozen of the men are guarding John Reynolds, their wounded man, while the remainder occupy good positions in the mountains above, where a splendid view of the surrounding country is afforded.

The Wright side received an even dozen new "recruits" Sunday. They comprise a brave set of men and are all good marksmen. The Wrights have their dead buried and are now ready for battle.

HEAD END COLLISION.

Engineer and Yardmaster Killed Near Middlesboro—Fireman Fatally Hurt.

Middlesboro, Ky., April 13.—A head-end collision on the Louisville & Nashville railroad Friday afternoon at 3:35 o'clock, between here and Wee Pineville, resulted in the death of Will Sharp, engineer, and Will Fretwell, yardmaster at this place. Sharp was killed outright, but Fretwell lived an hour. Frank Wilson, fireman, was perhaps fatally hurt, and nearly every man on each train was more or less bruised. A freight from Corbin ran to Middlesboro for a work train.

One Killed, One Injured.

Williamsburg, Ky., April 13.—A fall of slate in the Morgan mine Friday morning resulted in the death of Ode Taylor and the injury of Giles Carroll.

NO RELATIVES.

Two Prominent Kentucky Families Say They Are Not Related to a Woman Arrested for Bigamy.

Louisville, Ky., April 12.—Mrs. Alice Gladys Breckinridge Castleman Burns, who claimed to be a daughter of Gen. John B. Castleman, of Louisville, and who has just been indicted for bigamy by a Jersey City grand jury, is in no way connected with the Castleman or Breckinridge families. Gen. Castleman is out of the city at present, but members of his family declare that they did not know anything about the woman who adopted the name of the general's oldest daughter. When the case of the woman first came up some weeks ago Mr. Castleman received inquiries from all over the country about her, but could answer only that he did not know anything about the prisoner. It is alleged Mrs. Burns simply made use of a slight resemblance to Miss Castleman to temporarily assume her name and gain a footing in society.

WAR ON SUNDAY SALOONS.

The Police at Lexington, Ky., Make the Rounds and Several Arrests Were Made.

Lexington, Ky., April 15.—The war on Sunday saloons here is being continued. The police, after midnight Saturday night, made the rounds, arresting William Rennick, proprietor of the English Kitchen; Mat Souter, of the Mecca, and the bartender at the saloon of Shouse & Looney. The mayor insists that the saloons must remain closed on Sunday, closing at midnight Saturday.

The war on the poolrooms also is being kept up. On Saturday both rooms opened and the entries were posted, when the police interfered and caused the rooms to be closed. The trouble appears to be a fight between the poolroom men, who will not combine and run one room.

WINCHESTER-HILL WEDDING.

Mayor Tom L. Johnson and Family, of Cleveland, O., Will Attend.

Louisville, Ky., April 12.—Kalert J. Tilford, city building inspector, received a letter Thursday from Mayor Tom L. Johnson, of Cleveland, in which Mr. Johnson said that he was coming to Louisville to remain a week or ten days. He and his wife and family will attend the wedding of Miss Mary Tyler Hill and Frederick Churchill Winchester, which will take place April 30. Mr. Tilford is a cousin of Cleveland's new mayor. In his letter Mr. Johnson says that he has been deep in politics and hopes to secure some rest during his stay in Louisville. It is probable that local democratic leaders will give a dinner in honor of Mr. Johnson while he is in Louisville.

Lexington, Ky., April 12.—Kentucky State college, represented by Clark Landy, Lexington, subject, "The Reign of Law," won the fourteenth annual Kentucky inter-collegiate oratorical contest here Friday night. The Farmers Cooperative movement being pushed in this county by F. P. Walton, who is employed by J. M. Walker & Co., of Cincinnati, mention of which has previously been made in these columns, is meeting with quite a boom. Mr. Walton informs us that he very seldom fails to interest a farmer in the enterprise. The plan in brief is to procure the names of active, trusty farmers who take a membership and pay a fee of $5, when a thousand are made up who will trade through the same channel, concentrating their patronage, thereby getting wholesale rates on all supplies purchased. There are some who feel a little cautious to enlist in this enterprise on account of responsibility, but this fear is removed by a clause which expressly provides that the members are to be held responsible for no debts, whatever, they simply being members of a cooperative body bound together for mutual benefit and protection. J. M. Walker & Co., capitalize the business and derive their benefit as wholesalers, and take all responsibility. The enterprise has many good and useful features to recommend it to the farmers in reach of its headquarters, and they are not slow in seeing them. The $5 membership fee will be consumed in working the enterprise up and in expenses incident thereto. The agent has worked the most of the county, and desires to express his thanks to the people who have so cordially received him, and who have so liberally given their support to the enterprise he is pushing, and to pledge his very best efforts in their behalf in its future workings. The same applies to other territory in which the enterprise is now being worked.

Editorial Paragraphs.

The United States has claimed twenty five millions indemnity from China but professes its willingness to scale down its claims to whatever sum China can afford to pay.

Congressman Hull has started for Manila. The question is whether he has gone, as he says, to study the general situation, or to help on the work of the timber-grabbing corporation of which he is president.

Mayor Johnson of Cleveland is shaking things up in his town, as he threatened to do. He proposes adn enforces—a reassessment of property which will compel the big corporations to pay their share. Good for Tom.

Now Mr. Morgan has organized a drygoods trust, with a capital of twenty million. The universal trust is rapidly approaching, and when it arrives, we, the people, will probably simply confiscate it and run it as a national co-operative concern.

Maine has decided that she is getting tired of having all the corporations and trusts organized in New Jersey—and leaving their fees there—and has passed the most liberal laws in existence to entice them within its borders. Thus the trail of the octopus is over all.

We don't understand why the Boers should be so anxious to cut off the British supplies of horses and mules from New Orleans. How else could the British get their supplies? And if the British were not well supplied, how could the Boers capture such a good transport service?

The wreck of the Merrimac has been destroyed by dynamite. Counting everything, this vessel cost the United States nearly a million dollars; this however, was less than it would have cost us had Sampson's plan for blocking the Spanish fleet inside the harbor by means of it, been successful.

Perry Heath is hesitating whether to accept a job at the St. Louis Exposition that carries a salary of $10,000. Perry is probably in the condition of the minister who prayed for guidance as to whether he should accept a call with a big raise in salary, and who, pending a reply, had his funiture packed for removal.

Representative Babcock, of Wisconsin, Chairman of the late Republican Congressional Campaign Committee, has realized at least that the United States must give as well as take in its foreign trade relations. However, the millionaires who own the Republican party have rallied against him, and there is little hope of anything being accomplished until the Democrats get in again.

He Kept His Leg.

Twelve years ago J. W. Sullivan, of Hartford, Conn., scratched his leg with a rusty wire. Inflammation and blood poison set in. For two years he suffered intensely. Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but," he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1½ boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was as sound and well as ever." For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, and blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival. Try them. W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelaner, Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. Grant, Bellevue, will guarantee satisfaction or refund money. Only 50 cents.

The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rises good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 60, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 24, 1901. NO. 27.

THE salaries of the officers appointed directly by the President amount to $20,000,000 a year $80,000,000 in four years, which is an immense amount of patronage for one person.

THE acquittal of Garnett Ripley in Franklin Circuit Court of the charge of conspiring to assassinate Senator Goebel gives the lie to the charge that any man tried for that crime before Judge Cantrill is sure to be convicted, guilty or not guilty.

AN Owensboro high school was stampeded the other day by a deputy sheriff who entered the building to summon some of the male pupils to appear before the grand jury. Each of the older boys thought he was wanted. Conscience will betray the guilty.

THE Boone county Democrats should roll up a big majority for the county ticket this fall, as it is composed of good men from top to bottom. This is what is known as an off year, but that is no reason why as many or more Democrats should not go to the polls next November as showed up at the recent primary election.

ONE House of the Arkansas legislature has passed a bill making it illegal for a person to take a drink without having first secured from the county clerk a license stating that he is a duly authorized drinker of the State of Arkansas. The license will cost $5 a year. This proposed law has caused a commotion in the State.

JUDGE MAJOR was one of the attorneys who defended Ripley in the Franklin Circuit Court last week. He made a speech of one hour and a half in the defense of his client. The Judge's numerous friends here are glad to know that he is yet possessed of so much vigor, and capable of doing so much labor in the professional field.

Postmaster Baker of Louisville, is to be reappointed and to receive $1,000 a year increase in salary. Increases will follow all through his office, and there will be fifty promotions, five new clerks, six more carriers, three new substations and six full postal stations. There are prospects also for street railway postal cars in Louisville.

They are trying another man at Frankfort, Ky., for killing Goebel, before a strictly partisan Court—the Judge, other officers, and all of the jury, being Democrats.—Rising Sun Recorder.

Yes, and he was acquitted, by that partisan Court. The Recorder did not take the pains to tell its readers when the Powers and Howard cases were reversed by the Court of Appeals, the opinion in the Powers case being strictly partisan.

THE Lexington Herald which supported the Republican party in the recent Presidential campaign with all the ability Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge commands, says of affairs in the Philippines:

"The thefts in thecommissary department in the Philippines have gradually undergone euphemistic changes until all guilt has disappeared and soon commendation will take the place of condemnation. At first they were defalcations, thefts, frauds. Then General Corbin "was skeptical." Then Gen. MacArthur reported that "the frauds were not sufficient to cause concern," and "the press reports were misleading." Then the frauds became "irregularities." Now they have become "differences of opinion"—what a pleasant and oleaginous phrase!—as to the construction of some army regulations about "saving" and the power of "sales." And even whitewash will not be needed to restore the unfortunate robbers to the confidence of the Adjutant General and his friends.

"All this is sickening and shocking. It is known all over America that in the Philippines have been frauds, dishonest dealings with the insurrectos, and much peculation. Not a peculator or defaulter in Cuba has yet been brought to trial; not a fraud committed at Washington has been punished. The peculations and frauds in the Philippines may be slurred over, but they will remain a stain as does the miserable "embalmed beef."

Editorial Paragraphs.

Colorado is certainly up to date in its women's suffrage methods. One of the fair sex out there was recently arrested for repeating.

McKinley would be glad to care for all the lame ducks, but, unfortunately, there are not enough good jobs to go around, unless he creates a few new commissions.

Tom Johnson is making a big splash in Cleveland at present. It remains to be seen whether he will continue to splash, or will go to the bottom of the tureen and remain quiet there.

J. Pierpont Morgan should syndicate himself. No one man can possibly undertake the vast number of enterprises with which he is being credited in the newspapers both at home and abroad.

Governor Allen says that Porto Rico is most prosperous. Of course he cannot deny that thousands of people in the interior are on the edge of death, but he seems to assert that they are dying from gormandizing and not from starvation.

If Minister Loomis said the things about President Castro that he is credited with saying, it is not wonderful that he was looked upon as being hostile to the Government of Venezuela. Mr. Loomis evidently made a mistake in thinking that he was sent abroad solely in the interest of the asphalt trust.

The British are slowly but surely yielding in South Africa. The latest step is to recall Sir Alfred Milner, who was one of the arch mischief makers who brought on the war. Yet the British now have 250,000 men in the field, 60,000 of whom are mounted, while the Boers have not more than 10,000. It is David and Goliah over again.

The Republican leaders are rallying to the protection of the trusts threatened from within by Babcock's anti-tariff bill. Thus, the Republicans are throwing away their only chance for continued supremacy and are delivering themselves into the hands of the Democrats. "No tariff on trust-made articles" will be the slogan in the next campaign.

The scandals at Manila have taken the same line that those at Havana did. At first, the man who exposed them was punished by expulsion, and his charges were denounced as false; then the frauds were admitted, but were said to be small; now the administration pats itself on the back and declares that its zeal in running them down is unequalled in history.

TOM JOHNSON, recently elected Mayor of Cleveland, Ohio, is an example of what a young man with a proper amount of grit can accomplish. He was born in Scott county this State, on July 17th, 1854. His family was very poor and for a time he helped support it by selling papers on the streets. He started in the street railroad business at Louisville, and before he was 19 years of age he was superintendent of a street railway. He has been twice a member of Congress from one of the Cleveland districts.

THE RECORDER is in receipt of the 28th annual report of Lakeland Asylum for the insane. The report goes into details and contains a vast amount of information. There have been several changes in the direction of retrenching expense since Dr. Furnish was installed as Superintendent. The current expenses of the institution for the year ending December 30th, 1900, were $202,410 83.

THE prospect of raising a cavalry company in Frankfort has been under consideration for some time. It is proposed to make it a portion of the State Guard and about thirty well known young men of the city have agreed to go into it. Gen. Castleman will be asked to superintend the preliminary details.

By the will of the late Thornton F. Marshall, J. E. Thompson, editor of the Bracken Chronicle received $5,000. The was gift bestowed upon a worthy gentleman, and a good newspaper man.

In the Anderson Circuit Court the jury in the case of Leroy Strutton, indicted for the murder of Newton Searcy in the Court house yard last August, brought in a verdict of guilty, and fixed the punishment at confinement in the penitentiary for life. Holly Strutton, a brother of Leroy, who was jointly indicted, was sentenced at a former term of court to be hanged.

Within two and a half miles of St. Paul Station, on the C. & O., is to be found an almost inexhaustible supply of fire clay on the Neff tract of land, and some men with a little capital to invest there could make an independent fortune. Water supply is plentiful from a small creek called Scaffold Lick, and the shipping point at St. Paul is one of the best. This should be looked after by those who are interested.—Lewis County News.

Aunt Rosa Jackson, a worthy colored woman of this city, came into the Hustler office yesterday to renew her subscription, and informed us that the first colored school in the town was taught by her just after the war, a stable being used for the schoolhouse. She was also first to organize a Sunday-school for her race, and the services were conducted in a tobacco factory. Her efforts have all been along the line of elevation. She is a credit to her race. —Madisonville Hustler.

One of the most unusual ticket stories on record is told by Conductor Felix Wright, who runs into Fulton on the Illinois Central. He collected a ticket from Clinton to Fulton, sold December 21, 1892, a few days ago on his train. The old man who presented it for passage said he bought it about eight years ago, but heard there was a wreck on the road, and was afraid to get on the train. He never summoned up courage enough to ride on a railroad until last Wednesday. —Paducah Sun.

The egg industry is getting to be enormous in Clark county. As an evidence of this fact one firm shipped March 20 a carload of eggs that contained 11,400 dozen. April 6 they shipped another carload containing 13,520 dozen, or a total of 24,920 dozen in two weeks. Among this number were 1,100 dozen duck eggs and 400 dozen goose eggs. An average price of nine cents was paid for hen, fifteen for duck and forty cents for goose eggs. They will be shipped to Boston for cold storage.—Winchester Democrat.

Very few people have any adequate idea of the business that is done in this city in the poultry line, for it is something enormous and scatters thousands of dollars throughout the county. Two firms in this city during March shipped from this city by express alone twelve carloads of poultry. The cars averaged 16,000 pounds, and the poultry was paid for at the rate of 7½ cents per pound. Each carload, therefore, represents $1,200 paid to the poultry raisers. Besides the twelve cars by express, there were two sent by freight during the month, making in all fourteen carloads of poultry shipped out of this city by two firms. These fourteen carloads cost the shippers $16,800.—Bowling Green Times Journal.

The President will start on his Southern and Western trip on the morning of April 29. A stay of six hours will be made in Memphis on the following day.

GALLATIN COUNTY.

(From Warsaw Independent.)

The State Board of Equalization increased the valuation of land in Gallatin county 25 per cent at its session last week. Hon. R. B. Brown went to Frankfort last week to get a reduction believing the increase in valuation to be an excessive rate and his efforts may bear good fruit for our tax payers. Mr. Brown succeeded in getting a reduction of six per cent. in the increased valuation, reducing it from 26 to 20 per cent. increase over the county assessor's figures.

The farmers of this section have sown a large amount of grass seed this season, far more than usual, and it is very creditable to them to thus take precautionary measures to build up and recuperate the parts of their farms that have been usually allowed to run into waste land. The continuous sowing of grass seed yearly on these waste places will soon recuperate many acres of valuable land in this quarter and improve its value greatly.

Richard Wilson, the horse buyer of Lexington, bought in a addition to the horses enumerated last week, a fine four year old Denmark gelding from James T. Griffin for $262 50. The horse is the get of Frank B. Denmark, owned by Marion Parker, of Carroll county. Mr. Wilson also bought a fine four year old bay gelding from Lee Gridley for $250. This gelding was by Bond's old Chief Denmark, and was one of the finest general purpose horses in the county. Will Bledsoe went to Cincinnati Friday night with Mr. Wilson to show him his fine four year old sorrel gelding by the Smith Denmark horse of near Worthville, and succeeded in selling the horse to Mr. Wilson for $300, thus getting $500 for his two horses.

The jury in the case of the Commonwealth against Fred N. Gulick on trial for his life for killing his brother in-law, William Poor, after a night's deliberation returned a verdict Saturday morning, just before noon, of not guilty. The prisoner was visibly effected by the verdict, which he had all along confidently asserted would be the outcome, but quickly regained his composure, and after shaking hands with his lawyers, a number of friends and each of the twelve jurors, gladly walked accompanied by his faithful wife from the court-room a free man. The verdict was a great surprise to a number of our people and especially to those who did not attend the trial. A majority of those who heard the evidence and arguments looked for a hung jury or a light sentence, while the defendant at all times expressed himself as confident of his acquittal.—Pendletonian.

Mr. D. A. Meacham, of this city, is no longer incredulous as to dreams. He was in Mayfield Wednesday night, and dreamed that his brother, Mr. Ashton Meacham, of Crofton, Ky., whom he had not seen for seven years, would arrive here to-day on a visit to him. Mr. Meacham came home and was so impressed with the reality of the dream that he actually went out to the train yesterday afternoon to meet him and returned home via the post-office.

There his disappointment was lightened. He received a letter from his brother, stating that he would arrive here to-day, and he did on the afternoon train.—Paducha News.

An old farmer was skeptical about telephoning. He didn't believe you could holler to anyone out of hollering distance. The telephone agent said to him:

"If your wife could talk to you ten miles away, and you could recognize her voice, would you believe then?"

"Yes," said the farmer "ef Nancy talks to me ten miles off, I'll have to give in, for I can re-cog-nize her voice under any circumstances."

Nancy was taken to town ten miles away, the telephone connection was made and the farmer was told to talk to his wife.

"Hello, Nancy," said he.

Just then a flash of lightning struck the wire and the farmer was knocked heels over head.

"That's Nancy," said the farmer, is he picked himself up.

KANSAS LETTER.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

After having lived in Kansas for 15 years, I recently visited my old home in your county, to see my relatives and old friends. I found that a great many of my old associates had passed away during my absence, while a great many young people, all strangers to me, had taken their places. Those of my associates of 15 years ago, whom I met, looked much better than I expected to find them. I remained one month with my Kentucky people, and then returned to my home in Southern Kansas. While in Kentucky I was asked a great many questions about Kansas, and I imparted all the information I could. Kansas is all right. Boone county did not look right to me. The soil is too yellow, and the grass does not look like it appeared to me 15 years ago. Fences have gone down and the timber has disappeared. When I returned to Kansas I found the ground covered by the growing wheat, the prospects for which were never better here. There is no wheat in Missouri, Illinois or Indiana, and you know there is none in Kentucky.

I would like for some of you Kentucky people to see our growing crops they could not be better.

DAVID F. UTZ.

Of the many extraordinary things for which patent protection has been granted, a hole seems to be the most useless and impossible. Yet there are many patents for holes, and, what is more, the patents are valid and valuable. One of the best relates to holes in ship's bottoms for the admission and escape of water to the condensers.

Everyone who has seen a screw steamer under way will have noticed a stream of water issuing from her side, a little above the water line; that water is pumped into the ship for the purpose of condensing the waste steam that leaves the cylinders and returning it as water to the boilers.

At last it occurred to agenius that if a hole were made in the bottom of the ship forward of the condenser and another abaft it, the water would circulate around the condenser without the aid of a pump. It is for the shape of these holes, so that they will offer less resistance to the water when the ship is traveling fast, that several patents have been granted.

Now, just before the leaves put out, is the time to spray the plum trees. Use the blue vitriol mixture —four pounds vitriol and four pounds fresh lime to the barrel of water, and add one-fourth pound Paris green. Make your druggist guarantee the poison to be of full strength and pure. The spray mixture will destroy the spores of the fungus which produces the rot, and will kill the curculio that feed upon it. Spray with the same just after the bloom falls. The poison kills some of the insects before they lay their eggs, and also some of the larvae when first hatched. Shaking the trees causes many of the curculio to fall to the ground. If they are swept up and burnt or buried it will save much of the fruit from being stung. Keeping chickens in the plum orchard is a help, also, especially if the trees are jarred frequently.

The Paris Gazatte prints the following and vouches for its truth: "A certain gentleman over in an adjoining county united with the church. He was made Superintendent of a Sunday School, and wishing to leave a record of which he could feel justly proud, he got up an excursion did not plan out very well, and $50 represented the sum total of the gross receiqts. Being somewhat disappointed, but not without hope, he took that $50 and bought himself some red and blue chips in a poker game then being conducted in Pokopolis. When he got up from the table in the gray dawn of morning, he found he was $500 winner. This $500 he took to the Sunday-school with him and moved that it be expended in purchasing a libary. This was done Everybody was astonished at the amount realized from the excursion knowiug that but few people attended it, so they began to inquire where the money came from. Finally it leaked out, and the church did't do a thing but eall that member up on the carpet and expel him for gambling. But they didn't give back the library.

There will be between 50,000 and 100,000 additional acres of land devoted to rice culture in the South next year.

The Voting Machine Law.

[Aurora (Ind.) Independent].

Immediately after the election people were so exasperated at the slow counting and the minor errors that the demand for voting machines was very earnest and general. Doubtless the feeling is very much the came now; if it is not it would be if an election had just been held. The Legislatare, however, acting in harmony with the general expressed opinion, passed a law which makes it possible for counties to purchase and use voting machines. This act provides for the appointment of a voting machine commission by the Governor, one of whom shall be a mechanical expert, who will be paid by the owners of the machines asking for an examination into their merits. No county or municipal officer can purchase a machine which is not approved by the commission.. The machine selected must secure absolute secrecy in voting to the voter and have arrangements for seven full party tickets. The law further provides that if a voter is so cautious about candidates that no name on the seven tickets suits him, he can write out a ballot and deposit it in a receptacle connected with the voting machine. To prevent inferior machines being sold to county commissioners the law requires that the party selling them shall give bonds to keep them in working order for five years.

One of the distinctive features of the act is that the precinct for the voting machine shall contain six hundred voters, or nearly two and a half times as many voters as in the maximum number under the present law. If the voting machine were adopted in Marion county its 240 precincts would be reduced to eighty or ninety, and in the city of Indianapolis to about sixty-five or seventy. Thus the compensation of election officers would be reduced about two thirds. The further provisions of the bill relate to the manner of voting and of making returns.

The State has a law which insures the purchase of the best machines in the market if the County Commissioners will take the responsibility of purchasing them. Unless there has been no change in public sentiment since the last election the voters of Indiana are in favor of the adoption of voting-machines. This is particularly the case in the cities and more densely populated portions of the State. Now is the time to agitate the subject in order to have the machine in use in November.

A Raging, Roaring Flood

Washed down a telegraph line which Chas. C. Ellis, of Lisbon, Ia., had to repair. "Standing waist deep in icy water," he writes, "gave me a terrible cold and cough. It grew worse daily. Finally the best doctors in Oakland, Neb., Sioux City and Ohmaha said I had consumption and could not live. Then I began using Dr. King's New Discovery and was wholly cured by six bottles." Positively guaranteed for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung troubles by W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. Grant, Bellevue.—Price 50c and $1.00.

About the most disgusted individual on earth certainly must have been the cracksman who entered the safe in the Sentinel office Monday night. It was really a good April Fool's joke, and if he is apprehended stands a good chance of being sent to Lakeland asylum for lunacy, as no one but a crazy man would expect a safe in a newspaper office to contain any money.

The burglary was committed on Monday night between the hours of half-past nine and half-past eleven o'clock. No trouble was experienced in opening the safe, all the combination was left on the lock as usual. The Steel receptacle or "strong box" was then removed by means of a chisel. After taking the box from the safe the burglar prized open the back end and rifled the contents. The box contained nothing but papers and these were strewn all over the floor. The police were promptly notified but so far have failed to find any clue.—Shelbyville Sentinel.

The large barn of Ran Holbrook, near Breck, burned one night last week. It contained a lot of tobacco he had purchased, besides a large crop he raised. What insurance he had was not sufficient to pay for the tobacco he had purchased. It is thought to be the work of an incendiary.—Owen Herald.

Dr. Talmage Sounds Praises of the World's Redeemer.

He Puts Before Us the Portraits of Some of His Great Disciples and Exponents—The Glories of Heaven.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

The most conspicuous character of history steps out upon the platform. The finger which, diamonded with light, pointed down to Him from the Bethlehem sky was only a ratification of the finger of prophecy, the finger of genealogy, the finger of chronology, the finger of events—all five fingers pointing in one direction. Christ is the overtopping figure of all time. He is the vox humana in all music, the gracefulest line in all sculpture, the most exquisite mingling of lights and shades in all painting, the acme of all climaxes, the dome of all cathedraled grandeur and the peroration of all splendid language.

The Greek alphabet is made up of 24 letters, and when Christ compared Himself to the first letter and the last letter, the alpha and the omega, He appropriated to Himself all the splendors that you can spell out with those two letters and all the letters between them. "I am the alpha and the omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last," or, if you prefer the words of the text, "above all."

It means, after you have piled up all Alpine and Himalayan altitudes, the glory of Christ would have to spread its wings and descend a thousand leagues to touch those summits. Pelion, a high mountain of Thessaly; Ossa, a high mountain, and Olympus, a high mountain, but mythology tells us when the giants warred against the gods they piled up these three mountains and from the top of them proposed to scale the heavens, but the height was not great enough, and there was a complete failure. And after all the giants—Isaiah and Paul, prophetic and apostolic giants; Raphael and Michael Angelo, artistic giants; cherubim and seraphim and archangel, celestial giants—have failed to climb to the top of Christ's glory they may all well unite in the words of the text and say: "He that cometh from above is above all."

First, Christ must be above all else in our preaching. There are so many books on homiletics scattered through the world that all laymen as well as all clergymen have made up their minds what sermons ought to be. That sermon is most effectual which most pointedly puts forth Christ as the pardon of all sin and the correction of all evil, individual, social, political, national. There is no reason why we should ring the endless changes on a few phrases. There are those who think that if an exhortation or a discourse have frequent mention of justification, sanctification, covenant of works and covenant of grace that therefore it must be profoundly evangelical, while they are suspicious of a discourse which presents the same truth, but under different phraseology. Now, I say there is nothing in all the opulent realm of Anglo-Saxonism or all the word treasures that we inherited from the Latin and the Greek and the Indo-European but we have a right to marshal it in religious discussion. Christ sets the example. His illustrations were from the grass, the flowers, the spittle, the salve, the barnyard fowl, the crystals of salt, as well as from the seas and the stars, and we do not propose in our Sunday school teaching and in our pulpit address to be put on the limits.

I know that there is a great deal said in our day against words, as though they were nothing. They may be misused, but they have an imperial power. They are the bridge between soul and soul, between Almighty God and the human race. What did God write upon the tables of stone? Words. What did Christ utter on Mount Olivet? Words. Out of what did Christ strike the spark for the illumination of the universe? Out of words. "Let there be light," and light was. Of course, thought is the cargo, and words are only the ship, but how fast would your cargo go on without the ship? What you need, my friends, in all your work, in your Sunday school class, in your reformatory institutions, and what we all need is to enlarge our vocabulary when we come to speak about God and Christ and Heaven. We ride a few old words to death when there is such an illimitable resource. Shakespeare employed 15,000 different words for dramatic purposes, Milton employed 8,000 different words for poetic purposes, Rufus Choate employed over 11,000 different words for legal purposes, but the most of us have less than 1,000 words that we can manage, less than 500, and that makes us so stupid.

When we come to set forth the love of Christ, we are going to take the tenderest phraseology wherever we find it, and if it has never been used in that direction before all the more shall we use it. When we come to speak of the glory of Christ, the conqueror, we are going to draw our similes from triumphal arch and oratorio and everything grand and stupendous. The French navy have 18 flags by which they give signal, but those 18 flags they can put into 66,000 different combinations. And I have to tell you that these standards of the cross may be lifted into combinations infinite and varieties everlasting. And let me say to young men who are ever awhile going to preach Jesus Christ, you will have the largest liberty and unlimited resource. You only have to present Christ in your own way.

Jonathan Edwards preached Christ in the severest argument ever penned, and John Bunyan preached Christ in the sublimest allegory ever composed. Edward Payson, sick and exhausted, leaned up against the side of the pulpit and wept out his discourse, while George Whitefield, with the manner and the voice and the start of an actor, overwhelmed his auditory. It would have been a different thing if Jonathan Edwards had tried to write and dream about the pilgrim's progress to the celestial city or John Bunyan had attempted an essay on the human will.

Brighter than the light, fresher than the fountains, deeper than the seas, are these Gospel themes. Song has no melody, flowers have no sweetness, sunset sky has no color, compared with these glorious themes. These harvests of grace spring up quicker than we can sickle them. Kindling pulpits with their fire and producing revolutions with their power, lighting up dying beds with their glory, they are the sweetest thought for the poet, and they are the most thrilling illustration for the orator, and they offer the most intense scene for the artist, and they are to the embassador of the sky all enthusiasm. Complete pardon for the direst guilt. Sweetest comfort for ghastliest agony. Brightest hope for grimmest death. Grandest resurrection for darkest sepulcher. Oh, what a Gospel to preach! Christ over all in it. His birth, His suffering, His miracles, His parables His sweat, His tears, His blood, His atonement, His intercession—what glorious themes! Do we exercise faith. Christ is its object. Do we have love? It fastens on Jesus. Have we a fondness for the church? It is because Christ died for it. Have we a hope of Heaven? It is because Jesus went ahead, the herald and the forerunner.

The royal robe of Demetrius was so costly, so beautiful, that after he had put it off no one ever dared put it on, but this robe of Christ, richer than that, the poorest and the wannest and the worst may wear.

"Oh, my sins, my sins," said Martin Luther to Staupitz, "my sins, my sins!" The fact is that the brawny German student had found a Latin Bible that had made him quake, and nothing else ever did make him quake, and when he found how through Christ he was pardoned and saved he wrote to a friend saying: "Come over and join us, great and awful sinners saved by the grace of God. You seem to be only a slender sinner, and you don't much avail of the mercy of God, but we who have been such very awful sinners praise His grace the more now that we have been redeemed." Can it be that you are so desperately egotistical that you feel yourself in first-rate spiritual trim and that from the root of the hair to the tip of the toe you are scarless and immaculate? What you need is a looking glass, and here it is in the Bible. Poor and wretched and miserable and blind and naked from the crown of the head to the sole of the foot, full of wounds and putrefying sores. No health in us. And then take the fact that Christ gathered up all the notes against us and paid them and then offered us the receipt.

And how much we need Him in our sorrows! We are independent of circumstances if we have His grace. Why, He made Paul sing in the dungeon, and under that grace St. John from desolate Patmos heard the blast of the apocalyptic trumpets. After all other candles have been snuffed out this is the light that gets brighter and brighter unto the perfect day, and after under the hard hoofs of calamity all the pools of worldly enjoyment have been trampled into deep mire at the foot of the eternal rock the Christian, from cups of granite, illy rimmed and vine covered, puts out the thirst of his soul.

A thousand feet underground, by light of torch toiling in a miner's shaft, a ledge of rock may fall upon us, and we may die a miner's death. Far out at sea, falling from the slippery ratlines and broken on the shipyards, we may die a sailor's death. On mission of mercy in hospital amid broken bones and reeking leprosies and raging fevers we may die a philanthropist's death. On the field of battle, serving our God and our country, slugs through the heart, the gun carriage may roll over us, and we may die a patriot's death. But after all there are only two styles of departure, the death of the righteous and of the wicked, and we all want to die the former.

God grant that when that hour comes you may be at home! You want the hand of your kindred in your hand. You want your children to surround you. You want the light on your pillow from eyes that have long reflected your love. You want the room still. You do not want any curious strangers standing around watching you. You want your kindred from afar to hear your last prayer. I think that is the wish of all of us. But is that all? Can earthly friends hold us when the billows of death come up to the girdle? Can human voice charm open Heaven's gate? Can human hands pilot us through the narrows of death into Heaven's harbor? Can an earthly friendship shield us from the arrows of death and in the hour when Satan shall practice upon us his infernal archery? No, no! Alas, poor soul, if that is all. Better die in the wilderness, far from tree shadow and far from fountain, alone, vultures circling through the air waiting for our body, unknown to men, and to have no burial, if only Christ would say through the solitudes: "I will never leave thee. I will never forsake thee." From that pillow of stone a ladder would soar heavenward, angels coming and going, and across the solitude and the barrenness would come the sweet notes of heavenly minstrelsy.

Gordon Hall, far from home, dying in the door of a heathen temple, said: "Glory to Thee, O God!" What did dying Wilberforce say to his wife? "Come and sit beside me and let us talk of Heaven. I never knew what happiness was until I found Christ." What did dying Hannah More say? "To go to Heaven, think what that is! To go to Christ, who died that I might live! Oh, glorious grave! Oh, what a glorious thing it is to die! Oh, the love of Christ, the love of Christ!" What did Mr. Toplady, the great hymnmaker, say in his last hour? "Who can measure the depth of the third Heaven? Oh, the sunshine that fills my soul! I shall soon be gone, for surely no one can live here after such glories as God has manifested to my soul."

What did the dying Janeway say? "I can as easily die as close my eyes or turn my head in sleep. Before a few hours have passed I shall stand on Mount Zion with the one hundred and forty-four thousand and with the just men made perfect, and we shall ascribe riches and honor and glory and majesty and dominion unto God and the Lamb." Dr. Taylor, condemned to burn at the stake, on his way thither broke away from the guardsmen and went bounding and leaping and jumping toward the fire, glad to go to Jesus and to die for Him. Sir Charles Hare in his last moment had such rapturous vision that he cried: "Upward, upward, upward!" And so great was the peace of one of Christ's disciples that he put his fingers upon the pulse in his wrist and counted it and observed its halting beats until his life had ended here to begin in Heaven. But grander than that was the testimony of the wornout misalonary, when in the Mamartine dungeon he cried: "I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand. I have fought the good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith. Henceforward there is laid up for me a crown of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous Judge, will give me in that day, and not to me only, but to all them that love His appearing!" Do you not see that Christ is above all in dying alleviations?

Toward the last hour of our earthly residence we are speeding. When I see the spring blossoms scattered, I say: "Another season gone forever." When I close the Bible on Sabbath night, I say: "Another Sabbath departed." When I bury a friend, I say: "Another earthly attraction gone forever." What nimble feet the years have! The roebucks and the lightnings run not so fast. From decade to decade, from sky to sky, they go at a bound. There is a place for us, whether marked or not, where you and I will sleep the last sleep, and the men are now living who will, with solemn tread, carry us to our resting place. Brighter than a banqueting hall through which the light feet of the dancers go up and down to the sound of trumpeters will be the sepulcher through whose rifts the holy light of Heaven streameth. God will watch you. He will send His angels to guard your slumbering ground until, at Christ's behest, they shall roll away the stone.

So also Christ is above all in Heaven. The Bible distinctly says that Christ is the chief theme of the Celestial description, all the thrones facing his throne, all the palms waved before His face, all the crowns down at his feet. Cherubim to cherubim, seraphim to seraphim, redeemed spirit to redeemed spirit shall recite the Saviour's earthly sacrifice.

Stand on some high hill of Heaven, and in all the radiant sweep the most glorious object will be Jesus. Myriads gazing first, afterward breaking forth into acclamation. The martyrs, all the purer for the flame through which they passed, will say: "This is Jesus, for whom we died." The apostles, all the happier for the ship wreck and the scourging through which they went, will say: "This is the Jesus whom we preached at Corinth and in Cappadocia and at Antioch and at Jerusalem." Little children clad in white will say: "This is the Jesus who took us in His arms and blessed us, and when the storms of the world were too cold and loud brought us into this beautiful place." The multitudes of the bereft will say: "This is the Jesus who comforted us when our heart broke." Many who had wandered clear off from God and plunged into vagabondism, but were saved by grace, will say: "This is Jesus who pardoned us. We were lost on the mountains, and he brought us home. We were guilty, and He made us white as snow. Mercy boundless, grace unparalleled." And then, after each one has recited his peculiar deliverances and peculiar mercies, recited them as by solo, all the voices will come together in a great chorus which shall make the arches reecho with the eternal reverberation of gladness and peace and triumph.

Edward I. was so anxious to go to the Holy Land that when he was about to expire he bequeathed $160,000 to have his heart after his decease taken and deposited in the Holy Land, and his request was complied with. But there are hundreds to-day whose hearts are already in the holy land of Heaven. Where your treasures are, there are your hearts also. John Bunyan, of whom I spoke at the opening of the discourse, caught a glimpse of that place, and in his quaint way he said: "And I heard in my dream, and, lo, the bells of the city rang again for joy, and as they opened the gates to let in the men I looked in after them, and, lo, the city shone like the sun, and there were streets of gold, and men walked on them, harps in their hands to sing praises with all, and after that they shut up the gates, which when I had seen I wished myself among them."

PROBLEMS FOR YOUTH.

Found by an Indignant Father in the Spelling Book of His Son Tommy.

"What's a dune?" asked the practical man.

"A dune," answered the practical man's wife, "a dune is—er—er, why, a dune, I believe I've forgotten just what a dune is. What do you want to know for, anyway?"

"What's a dure?"

"A dure! I don't think I ever heard of a dure."

"What's a pirn?" continued the practical man, relates the New York Herald.

"Now, see here," said the wife, firmly, "I'm not a dictionary, and I don't pretend to be one. But I'd like to ask you one question in return. What's that book you have in your hand and have been getting all those obsolete or impossible words from? Must be a copy of the ancients."

"Well, it isn't," answered the man, doggedly enough. "It's a copy of the spelling book that your young hopeful, aged nine, struggles with every day in his school life. Now, what do you think of that? You are always talking about the beauties of the present day system of instructing children. How do you like this system? Well, I'll bet there isn't one man in twenty, outside of the fellows who are themselves engaged in educational forms, who could tell offhand the meaning of a lot of these words that occur in this very primitive book. It's a good thing for the parents to look into these matters once in awhile."

"I'm sure I didn't know those words were in the book," said the woman, meekly. "Are you sure you haven't picked up a high school book?"

"High school nothing," retorted the man. "See for yourself. This is Tommy's spelling book. Let's go a little further into this thing. Look at this." The man turned the page and read: 'Civics, torque, fyke, tete, sice, tige, feoff, gyre, oppugn, rasure and obligor.' I'll tell you what I'll do, Maria. If you'll take a pencil and a piece of paper and write opposite each of those words its correct meaning, without consulting the dictionary, I'll write you a check for a new tailor-made gown at Mme. Swellun's. Now, here's a chance for you to score one for the merits of the present educational system and at the same time get a new gown."

"Why, really," said the wife of the practical man, "why, you know—"

"Yes," said the practical man, "I certainly do know. I know you wouldn't miss an opportunity to get a new dress. Here's another thing. If there is anything I do hate it is affectation, and this spelling book puts a direct premium on affectation. Every well regulated child calls its parents 'mama and papa,' respectively, accenting the first syllables. Here is this book insisting that the words shall be, as the English have them, 'mamma and papa,' with the last syllables accented.

"A little common sense is a wholesome thing. But it seems to have escaped the framers of the spelling books for our children."

KITCHEN WASTES.

Best Way to Dispose of Refuse That Cannot Be Cremated in the Stove.

In a village where there is no ashman the disposal of kitchen wastes as well as ashes is always a vexed question. Kitchen refuse which a pig will not consume cannot be burned or cremated by the quantity in the country as it is in the city, where refuse is carefully separated, and what is of no other use is burned. It is injurious to burn moist waste in the kitchen range or furnace. It requires an extravagant use of coal to do so, and it produces a very disagreeable odor. The odor of burning garbage is so intolerable that it is strictly prohibited in villages where the houses are near together, says the New York Tribune.

In the country, where there is room, the best way of disposing of any waste, like bones, old woolens or anything that shows by its odor when burning that it contains nitrogen, is to bury it in a deep pit for fertilizer. Almost anything but metal can be treated in this way, and if each time a consignment of waste is buried it is covered with twice as much wood ashes as there is waste and garbage, and about five times as much earth, it gives no evidence of itself. It should be buried about a year, and when it is thoroughly rotted in this way it will make a good fertilizer. If there are not enough wood ashes about the premises, mix one part of quicklime and one part of common sal soda in every five parts of waste, and five times as much soil as there is waste. The amount of kitchen waste to be disposed of in a family is not large if dry "litter" about the grounds is burned. The wastes treated as we have said will make an excellent fertilizer for the flower garden, and yields wonders of bloom and fragrance for very little trouble. Soil must be very liberally mixed with this compost when it is dug up, for it is too rich for ordinary fertilization.

How to Make Egg Soup.

Stir a teaspoonful of beef extract into one quart of boiling water; add a grated onion, an eighth of a teaspoonful of celery seed or a little celery chopped, half a teaspoonful of salt and a saltspoonful of pepper; stir constantly until it reaches the boiling point; strain through a fine sieve, and pour it while hot into the well beaten yolks of two eggs. Add four tablespoonfuls of carefully boiled rice, and serve very hot.—Ladies' Home Journal.

New England Women

Have an Abiding Faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

After years of struggle to attain and merit public confidence, with a firm and steadfast belief that some day others would recognize in us the truth, good faith, and honesty of purpose which we know we possess, what a genuine satisfaction it is to succeed, and to realize the uplifting influence of the merited confidence of a vast army of our fellow beings.

Thus stands the Pinkham name in New England, and all over America, and nowhere is the faith in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound greater than in New England, its home. Merit, and merit alone, can gain this.

ORGANIC INFLAMMATION.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I was troubled very badly with inflammation of the bladder, was sick in bed with it. I had two doctors, but they did me no good. A friend gave me Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it helped me. I have now taken three bottles of it, and I am entirely cured. It is a God-send to any woman, and I would recommend it to any one suffering as I was. I think, if most of the women would take more of your medicine instead of going to the doctors, they would be better off. The Compound has also cured my husband of kidney trouble."—MRS. MABEL GOOKIN, Box 160, Mechanic Falls, Maine.

NERVOUS PROSTRATION.

"For two years I suffered from nervous prostration, the result of female weakness. I had leucorrhœa very badly, and at time of menstruation would be obliged to go to bed. Also suffered with headaches, pain across back, and in lower part of abdomen. I was so discouraged. I had read of Lydia E. Pinkham's Compound, and concluded to give it a trial. I wrote to Mrs. Pinkham, and received a very nice letter in return. I began at once the use of her Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier, and am now feeling splendid. I have no more pain at monthly periods, can do my own work, and have gained ten pounds. I would not be without your Vegetable Compound. It is a splendid medicine. I am very thankful for what it has done for me."—MRS. J. W. J., 76 Carolina Ave., Jamaica Plain, Mass.

PAINFUL PERIODS.

"I cannot help but feel that it is my duty to do something in regard to recommending your wonderful medicine. I must say it is the grandest medicine on earth, and have advised a great many suffering with female troubles to take it. I tell people I wish I could go on the platform and lecture on it.

"My trouble was painful menstruation. The suffering I endured pen cannot describe. I was treated by one of our most prominent physicians here for five months, and found myself getting worse instead of better. At the end of the fifth month he told me he had done all he could for me, and that I had better go to the hospital.

"My sister advised me to try your Vegetable Compound, as it cured her of backache. I did so, and took it faithfully, and am now cured of my trouble, and in perfect health, many thanks to your medicine. I cannot praise it enough, and would recommend it to all who suffer from any female weakness."—MRS. H. S. BALL, 461 Orchard St., New Haven, Conn.

If Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will cure these women — why not you — you cannot tell until you try it. If you are ill, and really want to get well, commence its use at once, and do not let any drug clerk persuade you that he has something of his own which is better, for that is absurd. Let him to produce the evidence we do.

THE RULE OF BOSS PLATT.

Sudden Ending of the New York Republican King's Reign Has Come to Pass.

For so long a time had Thomas Collier Platt ruled without influential opposition in the counsels of the republican party in New York city and state that for many years past he has been accepted by all save a few thousand independents, with republican affiliations or leanings or longings, as the autocratic ruler of the party during the remainder of his natural life. The independents have once or twice started a revolt against his dominance, but without other results than to draw upon themselves still larger measures of his scorn and hatred. They have been constant in bitter censure of him and have held him up to ridicule as one of small intellect and narrow intelligence, performing political antics before the country and high heaven. But all this censure and this ridicule has been uniformly—until now—drowned in the louder chorus of adulation by the faithful.

The truth is that Thomas Collier Platt's intellect is not small and his intelligence is not narrow. The most detractive thing that can be said of him in his presumptuous role of statesman is that he has a mercantile mind, with a fondness for and grasp of details, together with an ignorance of or contempt for great principles of state. Ill health defrauded him of the higher education and while still a youth he took up with a mercantile life. He succeeded, and had soon money enough to enter the banking business. At the same time he conducted lumber interests of his own in Michigan, but not to the neglect of his political interests.

As a budding politician it was in his favor that his home was in Oswego—in that part of New York state where Roscoe Conkling needed a trusty friend and ally. He was elected in 1872 and reelected in 1874 to congress. Mr. Conkling was then serving his first term in the senate. In Washington the two men formed an alliance, offensive and defensive, according to the secret terms of which they were to endeavor to control the federal patronage for New York, and also the state patronage. All things went smoothly with them till about 1879, when their enemies made an attempt to take control of the republican state convention and set up a new order of proceeding. Mr. Platt was a delegate in that convention, in which it was for a day undecided on which side the majority was, but so skillful was his management that he brought the majority over to him and was himself made the chairman of the convention. Conkling was indorsed, the organization perpetuated in his and Platt's hands, and the next winter the legislature reelected Conkling to the senate. In 1881 Platt's election to the senate was dictated by his friend and partner in politics. But then arose the quarrel between them and President Garfield over the patronage, and, being worsted in that quarrel, they both resigned from the senate.

The partnership between the two men ended when they failed in their endeavors at Albany to be returned to the seats they had haughtily vacated.

Mr. Conkling thenceforward eschewed politics, but Mr. Platt continued to play the game. His talent for details enabled him soon to get control of the organization of his party, and, exercising that control, he managed to bring to his support many of the great corporations of the state and all the corrupt influences of his own party and many of the corrupt influences of the opposing party in New York city. Then he became the acknowledged "boss" of the New York republicans and one of less than half a dozen bosses of the republican party of the entire country. In 1897 he had himself elected to the United States senate. Since that time he has been a terror and a burden to Mr. McKinley and his administration.

And now the supposed impossible has suddenly come to pass. Mr. Platt is defied at both Washington and Albany, and the whole country resounds with the announcement that the rule of "Boss" Platt is ended. But—"the boss is dead; long live the boss"—some other politician of nearly the same stamp will arise to fill the place from which he has been so suddenly hurled. One cannot conceive of the republican party without its boss in the Empire state!—Chicago Chronicle.

Lawyer for the Trusts.

In the appointment of Philander C. Knox, of Pittsburgh, as attorney general, Mr. McKinley secures a lawyer of marked ability, according to the testimony of all who knew him. It must always be accounted something of a drawback, however, when the president picks out as his law adviser a man who has no public reputation, in preference to one whom the people have come to know and respect. It seems also rather unfortunate that, when there are laws on the statute books against trusts, the attorney generalship should be given to a lawyer who has been the adviser of great promoters of trusts. This is not to say that Mr. Knox may not prove impartial as well as able; only that, human nature being what it is, a man with his record has to overcome a measure of distrust and suspicion. From this point of view the appointment of the Pittsburgher does not maintain Mr. McKinley's well-earned reputation for political shrewdness.—N. Y. Post.

——It touches Mark Hanna in a tender spot to be told that he spent $100,000 to defeat a candidate who was not defeated.—N. Y. World.

TAXING OURSELVES.

A most philanthropic policy is this of ours—this taxing ourselves for the benefit of the foreigner. A time was once when the philanthropic character of this policy could not be demonstrated, but that time is long since past. Example after example can now be marshaled to prove our unselfish interest in the poor foreigner who will consent to use our goods. To illustrate this, we will take the iron industry. We take this only because there is a movement on foot among the more liberal republicans to open it up to foreign competition because it is in a trust. A well-known contractor of New York, Charles Thullen by name, obtained a contract from the Russian government to furnish steel rails for a portion of the great Trans-Siberian railroad. He sought prices from the Federal Steel company, which gave him $35 per ton, with freight charges to be added. This price, so far as Mr. Thullen was concerned, was prohibitive. He went to the Carnegie Steel company, but could not get the price shaved. In despair he went to England and sublet his contract to an English firm. That firm sent to the United States for prices and obtained the phenomenal figures of $24 per ton delivered in Russia. The deal was closed and the rails sold by the English firm to Mr. Thullen at $35 per ton delivered in Russia. Mr. Thullen was thus enabled to go on with his contract after being compelled to pay a British firm a bonus of $11 per ton because he was so unfortunate as to be an American citizen.

The question suggests itself to many ordinary minds, how can these steel companies sell to a foreigner steel rails $11 cheaper than to an American and deliver them in Russia to boot? There must be something "rotten in the state of Denmark," when the home market is taxed to such an extent in order that the foreigner may buy at his own price. Or, is it philanthropy? We are, however, not alone in this work of relieving the foreigner. Germany, which has adopted the American idea of tariff, is engaged to a great extent in the same charitable business.

Herr Krupp and Baron von Stumm have, under the German tariff laws, a monopoly of the armor plate industry. They hold up that government for $580 per ton, which is $100 more than the steel companies of the United States are able to get out of Uncle Samuel. And to make the hold-up more apparent it appears that Herr Krupp and Mr. Harvy receive a royalty of $35.50 per ton on the American manufactured plate. This juicy monopoly allows the German armor plate trust to "compete in the markets of the world." Not Jones, in this case, but the German nation pays the freight. On account of this extortion the German reichstag proposes either to remove the tariff or construct government works, as the difference would amount to the enormous sum of $15,000,000 in the construction of the proposed new navy of the empire.

In the face of many such demonstrations of the workings of a tariff law that is out of date, the great majority of the republican "statesmen" are dead against the Babcock bill to remove the tariff from iron and steel products. Wonderful, indeed, are the workings of the human mind. —St. Paul Globe.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

——Pierpont Morgan's great railway trust will doubtless do its best to clear the track for republican victory in 1904.—St. Louis Republic.

——Benjamin Harrison died fearing the abandonment of American principles by Americans. It is ominous that an American president's last days should be thus darkened.—St. Louis Republic.

——Senator Hanna says the Ohio elections were nothing but local affairs. Very true, and it is unfortunate indeed that Mr. Hanna's party was so uniformly on the side that did not suit the people who did the voting.—Minneapolis Times.

——An unreconstructed editor wants to know if President McKinley did not once say that forcible annexation would be criminal aggression. Guess he did, but our contemporary takes too serious a view of the matter. That was intended to "go" only as a piece of phrase-making. Notice the rhetorical swing, and rhetoric is two-thirds of the battle with the present administration.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——It is quite in keeping with the policy of the noble and imperial major that plans should now be in contemplation for the corruption of Aguinaldo. It is, of course, impossible for a true McKinleyite to realize that there is such a thing as honor and patriotism except for bargain counter use. Mr. McKinley himself has not hesitated to change his mind, to abandon plain duty, to forget sacred obligations and to undertake lines of procedure which he himself had described as criminal. —Johnstown Democrat.

——What a transformation scene three short years have brought about! Three years ago how we did execrate the cruel Spaniards for their tyranny and oppression, and especially with what consuming wrath did we denounce the reconcentrado policy of "Butcher Weyler" for the subjugation of the Cubans—the policy of which President McKinley said: "It is not civilized warfare; it is extermination." And now, O irony of ironies! what do we see? Why, we see this same reconcentrado system applied in one of the Philippine islands by the government which denounced it.—Portland (Me.) Argus.

Demand for More Battleships.

When the Secretary of the Navy recently demanded more battleships, Congress considered his recommendations favorably, and authorized the construction of several powerful warships. Protection is what our seaports require, and fortifications will not adequately supply this. Defense against all disorders of the digestive organs, such as dyspepsia, constipation, biliousness, rheumatism and nervousness, is adequately afforded by that efficient remedy, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Try it.

An Error of Judgment.

A colored citizen gave a justice of the peace a big fat possum as a wedding fee. Meeting the groom a year after, the justice said:

"Well, Jim, how do you like married life?"

"Well, sah," was the reply, "all I kin say is—I wish I'd eat that possum."—Atlanta Constitution.

After Many Years.

So many are willing to put off doing today work that seems to them unimportant, that the habit extends itself to everything connected with their daily life and they neglect the necessary precaution to preserve their natural faculties. When Mr. C. H. Gleason was living at West Gloucester, Rhode Island, he wrote: "Your Lotion has cured me of Inflamed Eyelids after many years of suffering from which I had not been able to get relief." This is one of the many testimonials of the value of Palmer's Lotion, which, during the half century that it has been before the public, has never failed to give quick relief when-ever applied. If your druggist hasn't it, send to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl Street, New York, for samples of Palmer's Lotion and Lotion Soap.

"A woman," said Mr. Plattitood, "can't keep a secret." "Huh!" said little Johnny. "Teacher kep' me workin' an hour on a ole example, when she might have told me the answer any time."—Indianapolis Press.

STRANGE PLACE FOR BAPTISM

An extraordinary ceremony was performed in Cape Town a few weeks ago. A lion tamer had been giving an exhibition for several days, and one evening he informed the audience that he had just become a father and he intended to baptize the infant on the following day in the lions' cage. Those who heard him thought he was joking, but when they reached the exhibition hall the next evening they found that he was in dead earnest.

In the cage he stood, surrounded by his assistants, and near him were seated three women—his wife, one of her friends and the godmother of the infant. To the left of them stood the clergyman, holding the baby in his arms, and behind him was a gigantic African named Leo, who was to act as godfather on the occasion. Facing this fearless group were two huge lions, whose every action showed that they were immeasurably surprised at the intrusion of so many strangers into their domicile. Moreover, their surprise was the greater since, in honor of the event, their cage was wreathed with flowers and splendidly illuminated with electric lights.

The ceremony was duly performed, and while it lasted the lions behaved with "perfect propriety," much to the satisfaction and surprise of the immense crowd which thronged the hall.

Remember the Date—July 6 to 10.

The above is the time of the annual meeting of the United Society of Christian Endeavor, at Cincinnati, Ohio. The Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern Railway has issued a handsome souvenir map and guide to Cincinnati which will be of much interest and value to all who contemplate a visit to the Queen City on the occasion mentioned. The map shows the principal churches, suburbs, resorts, railroads, street car lines, etc. This souvenir may be obtained from agents of the B. & O. S.-W. Ry., or direct from O. P. McCarty, G. P. BISHOP HANDY SAYS

"I Cheerfully Recommend Peruna to All Who Want a Good Tonic and a Safe Cure For Catarrh."

Prominent members of the clergy are giving Peruna their unqualified endorsement. These men find Peruna especially adapted to preserve them from catarrh of the vocal organs which has always been the bane of public speakers, and general catarrhal debility incident to the sedentary life of the clergyman. Among the recent utterances of noted clergymen on the curative virtues of Peruna is the following one from Bishop James A. Handy, D. D., of Baltimore:

"I take great pleasure in acknowledging the curative effects of Peruna. At the solicitation of a friend I used your remedy and cheerfully recommend your Peruna to all who want a good tonic and a safe cure for catarrh."—James A. Handy.

OTHER NOTABLE CURES.

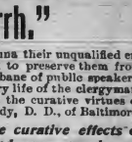
Most Cases of Incipient Consumption are Catarrh.



Edward Stevens.

Mrs. Edward Stevens, of Carthage, N. Y., writes as follows:

"I now take pleasure in notifying you that my husband has entirely recovered from catarrh. He is a well man to-day. Thanks to you and Peruna. He took six bottles of your medicine as directed, and it proved to be just the thing for him. His appetite is good and every thing he eats seems to agree with him. His cough has left him and he is gaining in flesh, and seems to be well every way. I hope others will try your medicine and receive the benefits that we have."—Mrs. Edward Stevens.

When the catarrh reaches the throat it is called tonsilitis, or laryngitis. Catarrh of the bronchial tubes is called bronchitis; catarrh of the lungs, consumption. Any internal remedy that will cure catarrh in one location will cure it in any other location. This is why Peruna has become so justly famous in the cure of catarrhal diseases. It cures catarrh wherever located. Its cures remain. Peruna does not palliate; it cures.

Mrs. Fred. Williams.

Mrs. Frederick Williams, President of the South Side Ladies' Aid Society of Chicago, Ill., writes the following words of praise for Peruna from 972 Cuyler ave-nue, Chicago, Ill.:

"My home is never without Peruna, for I have found during the past six years that there is no remedy that will at once alleviate suffering and actually cure, as Peruna does. Four bottles completely cured me of catarrh of the head of several years' standing, and if my husband feels badly, or either of us catch cold, we at once take Peruna, and in a day or two it has thrown the sickness out of the system."—Mrs. Frederick Williams.

Mrs. W. A. Allison.

Mrs. W. A. Allison, of 759 Sheffield avenue, Chicago, Ill., is the Assistant Matron of the People's Hospital. She has the following to say about Peruna:

"I have had frequent opportunities to observe the wonderful curative effects of Peruna especially on persons suffering with a congested condition of the head, lungs, and stomach, generally called catarrh. It alleviates pain and soreness, increases the appetite and so tones up the entire system that the patient quickly regains strength and health."—Mrs. W. A. Allison.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

WALTON.—Dr. Bagby is pushing his improvements as fast as the weather will permit, and will have a very handsome property before the summer solstice comes upon us.

The Odd-Fellows at their meeting, last Saturday night, determined on the erection of a three story brick building on the lot recently purchased from the late Mrs. Rosa King. The ground floor will make the most commodious store room in the town; the second floor will be fitted up as offices and the third story will be used for a lodge room. There is evidently a building tide setting in among our people aided greatly by the known intention of our board of town trustees to have the streets lighted at night, to have several cisterns of a requisite capacity built to afford a sufficient supply of water for any dry old time.

The awarding of the contract to Edward Stamler, of the Walton Planing Mill, for the building of the Graded School house has given the greatest satisfaction. Ed is very popular and a thoroguing business man. When times were dull he would get hold of a lot and go to work putting up a nice building which was in the market before completion. To him the town is indebted for many of its handsomest residences, and its inhabitants are very grateful. Ed has already announced that all work which can be done by Walton hands will be given to them.

Postmaster W. H. Metcalfe, having been notified by the T. A. Snyder Co. that he was expected to devote all his time to the company, he will not be an applicant for the office after the expiration of the present term, which expires in November next. There are now two known applicants for the office, S. L. Edwards, a former P. M., and Mrs. DeJarnette, a sister of J. G. Tomlin, Esq. As petitions are being circulated it may be well that signers should express their preference as to where the office will be located, and the drawers of the petitions may as well state whether the office will be in the central part or in the outskirts of town.

Much excitement was manifested all over town during the past week on account of the owners of all dogs being summoned to appear in the Police Court, and show cause why they should not be mulcted for not obeying the license law in relation to dogs. Consequently the court room was crowded as it was known full well that judge Botts would always maintain the diguity of his court, as only a few years ago a man was summoned who immediately gave his dog away and obeyed not the summons. The Judge sent for him and his Honor asked why he had not come to court. He said he had given the dog away and thought it was not worth while. "Well," said the Judge, "you can go to jail in contempt for not obeying the court's summons." The defendants were fined the marshal's cost for serving the writ, 50 cts each and promised to take out license on their dogs.

Found—A good grip or satchel, in the road near Walter Ryle's on Gunpowder. The owner can have same by calling at Robert Sullivans' and proving property.

John Greene, M. E. Hance, J. H. Mason and R. L. Huey each has telephone in his home and they can talk to Beaver and Big Bone and on all other lines that are connected in the county. It is quite convenient to those that can afford it.

Delmore Ryle, while out on the farm one day last week with the team and wagon, happened to quite an accident. The team started to run, when he pulled it shortly around, the wagon tongue breaking and the wagon following closely after the team until reaching the bottom of the hill, when the runaways were stopped. Neither horse was injured.

BEAVER.—John Cleek, who has been poorly for sometime with grip, is able to be out.

An infant of Everett Baker and wife was buried in the Beaver Baptist cemetery, last Saturday.

Robt. Littrell, who runs the huckster and grocery wagon about here, is confined to his bed with measles.

J. C. Hughes has been receiving a considerable amount of very fine grades of leaf tobacco at his warehouse the past week.

Miss "Pop" Green, of Patriot, Ind., who has been visiting relatives about here the past two weeks, has returned to her home.

M. C. Carroll seems to be growing weaker, but possessing as he does an unusual constitution, there is yet hope of his recovery.

The past week has been very unfavorable to farming interests, and many fear the past cold snap has greatly damaged the fruit prospect.

Robt. Jump and wife entertained the young folks of these parts, one night last week, with a nice dance; all who were present report a good time.

T. J. Hughes, our local telephone magnate, is still extending his system, having just completed 2 lines through the Big Bone church neighborhood, which is greatly appreciated by that section.

J. T. Dempsey sent to the city, last week, by Jerry Carroll, three of the largest hogs (averaging 600 lbs.) that have gone out of this neighborhood since the memorable days of "Uncle" John Griffith.

John Hartman, one of our progressive farmers, has the best 2-yr-old Mambrino colt in this part of the country, and with skillful training he bids fair to make the fastest trotting time ever recorded on the Midway training track.

James Carroll met with very bad luck one day last week. While hauling with team on farm one of his horses, a very valuable one, dropped dead. This is two he has lost in the past year, which is not only a great inconvenience but a great loss.

GEO. B. GIBSON'S SONS, RISING SUN, INDIANA.

It is as hard to account, sometimes, for what a man don't do as it is to account for what he does. Now, there is our rural friend, James E. Smith, a man who is supposed to maintain his mental equilibrium at all times and at all places—even he does things, occasionally, that puts the laugh ou him. The other day he sent a couple of sacks of corn in to mill to be ground, and came in late that afternoon especially for them, returning home about supper time. The evening's meal being over Mrs. Smith went out to look after and feed her poultry, and you can imagine her surprise when she discovered that the supply of chicken feed was entirely exhausted, despite the fact that not an hour before Mr. Smith had gone to town to return with two sacks of the feed. She at once sought an interview with her husband, when he reluctantly acknowledge that he came to town that afternoon and forgot for what he came. The chickens had gone to roost some time before Mr. Smith got home that night from his second trip to Burlington for that chicken feed. The cause of this case of forgetfulness remains unsolved.

We are in receipt of a package from Texarkana, Texas, in which is a card that reads: "J. D. Gaines, assessor aud collector, Texarkana, Tex." This card read, originally, "J. D. Gaines, candidate for assessor and collector, Texarkana, Tex., April election. Platform, rotation in office." Having wou out friend Gaines changed his card so as it states the facts, and here's hoping Dudley's shadow will never grow shorter. From other advertising matter in the package it appears that the Elks are going to have a six days big doings in Texarkana beginning on the 29th.

The remains of Richard Ryle, who died at his home, Walnut Hills, Ohio, last Friday, after an illness of ten days of pneumonia, were brought here Sunday and placed in the vault in the I. O. O. F., cemetery. The deceased was a son of the late Sandy Ryle, who resided for many years near Rabbit Hash. His wife was Miss Annabel Green and to them here born three children, two of whom are living, the son being about grown and the other, a daughter, four or five years old. The widow and children have numerous friends who sympathize with them in their grief.

Some are born great, some achieve greatness and some have greatness thrust upon them. Judge Eugene Salin comes under the latter if not all the above. He was the decided choice of the Owenton attorneys to fill the high office of Special Circuit Judge, likewise in Gallatin county, and on last Monday week was elected to the same office in Boone county.—Owen News.

The News certainly did not obtain from Judge Salin its information pertaining to Boone county.

BIG STRIKE AVERTED.

Difficulties Between the Steel Trust and Workmen Settled.

Organization of Locals of the Association by Employes Will Be Continued, But the Company Will Not Deal With It.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 19.—There will be no strike in the plants of the American Sheet Steel Co. The trouble that broke out in the DeWees Wood plant in McKeesport last week and which for a time threatened to cause a general strike of all union iron and steel workers in the country, has been settled in an amicable manner. The members of the general executive board of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers held a long session Thursday. It started out with a general feeling that a strike would come, as the workers would not concede the only point in dispute (reinstatement of the men discharged, claimed for joining the union), and so far as could be learned the officials of the American Sheet Steel Co. were equally determined.

During the morning session of the executive board John Jarrett, acting for the American Sheet Steel Co., appeared with a proposition for the members to consider regarding a settlement of the difficulty. In general, this proposition was that all men discharged from the Wood plant should be reinstated, including Holloway, and that all but Holloway should return to work at once, Holloway to be returned within ten days.

The board insisted that Holloway should be treated in the same manner as the others, and finally Mr. Jarrett changed his proposition to include Holloway after three days' suspension, and the following agreement was drawn up and signed at 7 o'clock Thursday evening.

It was 7 o'clock Thursday evening when President T. J. Shaffer announced that the following agreement had just been signed as the result of the conference which had been on since an hour before noon between John Jarrett and the advisory board of the Amalgamated association:

"We have discovered, after a careful examination of the points at issue, that as usual mistakes and misunderstandings underlie the trouble at McKeesport, and we report the conclusion that it will be to the advantage of all parties concerned to start the Woods mill with the old employes on next Monday, April 22, 1901.

"And it is further agreed that the contract with reference to working conditions in the mill and scale matters shall be observed until July 1, 1901, and in the meantime Mr. Smith and Mr. Holloway shall have a meeting to adjust any difficulty which may exist between them.

(Signed) "T. J. SHAFFER, Pres.
"A. A. I., S. and T. W.
"JOHN WILLIAMS, Secy.-Treas.
"A. A. I., S. and T. W.
"JOHN JARRETT,
"American Sheet Steel Co."

An Explanation.

In explanation of this agreement it was stated that the matter will remain in exactly the same position as before the trouble broke out. The organization of the locals of the Amalgamated association among the employes of the mill will be continued, though the company will not recognize it in any way in dealing with the men. The Amalgamated association stated that they did not wish the company to recognize their organization at present, and simply asked the company to allow the men to do as they pleased and act with freedom when outside of the mill. The company officials, on the other hand, say that so long as the local among their men does not try to force recognition and the men work under the personal agreement with them they would not allow any feeling against the men. Both sides are satisfied, and the strike that has existed for a week has in reality, according to the officers on both sides, been due to a misunderstanding between the two sides in the dispute.

PAN-AMERICAN EXPOSITION.

All the Bureaus of the Departments Will Be Represented in Some Manner—Full Length Portraits of Prominent Men.

Washington, April 20.—The arrangements for the exhibits of the state, war and navy departments at the Buffalo exposition are now practically complete, and these departments have but little more preparation to make before the opening of the big fair on May 1.

The navy department's exhibit promises well on account of a number of new features connected with it. Probably the most interesting will be the presence at Buffalo during the exposition of Naval Constructor Richmond Penrson Hobson, whose daring feat of sinking the Merrimac during the Spanish-American war, as well as his work of raising the disabled Spanish vessels in Manila harbor, has aroused great interest in him throughout the country. Lieut. Hobson recently was ordered to the bureau of construction and repair for "special duty."

It has been the desire of those in charge of the exposition to have this young hero of our war with Spain connected with the naval exhibit during the summer, but Adm. Bowles, chief constructor, was loath to depiete his already small bureau force to allow Mr. Hobson to go to Buffalo. However, he has now yielded to the popular desire, and Mr. Hobson will be connected with the navy department's representation there. Secretary Long has authorized the use of one company of marines, fully equipped, who will set up a camp at the south end of the big government building. Secretary Root also has agreed to send a company of coast artillery—about 60 men—who will set up a camp near the marines and give daily exhibition drills. These two organizations will aim to present in the most realistic style the daily round of work of their respective branches of the service.

The exhibit of the state department has been shipped and is now on the ground. Col. Michael, chief clerk of the state department, who is at the head of the government commission at the fair, will leave Washington Monday for Buffalo. All the bureaus of the department will be represented in some manner, and there will be several prominent features. Full length portraits of the president and vice president and the great seal of the United States in oils will also occupy conspicuous places. There also will be portraits of each of the secretaries of state and various valuable presents that have been bestowed upon the United States by foreign nations likewise will be on exhibition.

HOUSES WERE DEMOLISHED.

The Hamlet of Biscayne, Near Miami, Fla., Struck by a Tornado—Two Persons Injured.

Miami, Fla., April 20.—The hamlet of Biscayne, seven miles from here, was struck by a tornado. Several houses were demolished, John Peters was fatally injured and William Cook seriously hurt. Peters is a prosperous vegetables farmer. His house was completely demolished. The main part of the building, a new and substantial structure, was carried about a hundred yards and dashed to pieces. Of the back part of the residence nothing but the floor remains. Mr. Peters' head is badly crushed and his body was pierced by several pieces of wood. Mr. Cook was thrown 50 feet but only slightly injured. The tornado is thought to be local. Every forest tree in its path was torn up by the roots.

DOWNPOUR OF RAIN.

The Heaviest Fall at Pittsburgh in Ten Years—Lower Points May Suffer From a Flood.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 20.—The rainfall of the past 24 hours in Pittsburgh was the heaviest recorded for a similar period during the past ten years. The official report of the weather bureau showed a fall of 1.32 inches from 9 o'clock Thursday night till the same time Friday night. Saturday morning the downpour continued with no indication of abatement. Reports from up river points say the rain is general. The river mark here Friday midnight was 11 feet and rising at about the rate of one foot an hour. No danger of flood in this district, but lower points may suffer.

HIS MANIFESTO ISSUED

Inhabitants Should Repose Their Trust in the Glorious Banner of the United States—Let Us Have Peace.

Manila, April 20.—The following is Aguinaldo's address to the Filipino people made public:

"I believe I am not in error in presuming that the unhappy fate to which my adverse fortune has led me, is not a surprise to those who have been familiar with the progress of the war. The lessons taught with a full meaning, and which have recently come to my knowledge, suggest with irresistible force that a complete termination of hostilities and lasting pence are not only desirable, but absolutely essential to the welfare of the Philippine islands.

"The Filipinos have never been dismayed at their weakness, nor have they faltered in following the path pointed out by their fortitude and courage. The time has come, however, in which they find their advance along this path to be impeded by an irresistible force, which, while it restrains them, yet enlightens their minds and opens to them another course, presenting them the cause of peace.

This cause has been joyfully embraced by the majority of my fellow countrymen, who have already united around the glorious sovereign banner of the United States. In this banner they repose their trust and belief that under its protection the Filipino people will attain all those promised liberties which they are beginning to enjoy. The country has declared unmistakably in favor of peace. So be it. There has been enough blood, enough tears and enough desolation. This wish can not be ignored by the men still in arms if they are animated by a desire to serve our noble people which has thus clearly manifested its will. So do I respect this will, now that it is known to me.

"After mature deliberation I resolutely proclaim to the world that I can not refuse to heed the voice of a people longing for peace, nor the lamentations of thousands of families yearning to see their dear ones enjoying the liberty and the promised generosity of the great American nation.

"By acknowledging and accepting the sovereignty of the United States throughout the Philippine archipelago, as I now do and without any reservation whatsoever, I believe that I am serving thee, my beloved country. May happiness be thine."

To signalize this important step in the pacification of the country, Gen. MacArthur orders the release, on swearing allegiance to the United States, of 1,000 insurgent prisoners.

THE PHILIPPINE ARMY.

No Material Change Will Be Made Until the War Department Hears From Gen. Chaffee.

Washington, April 20.—Adjt. Gen. Corbin authorizes the statement that no material changes will be made in the army in the Philippines until after the department has heard from Gen. Chaffee on the subject. Chaffee will relieve Gen. MacArthur of the command of the military forces in the Philippines on June 30, and the present expectation is that a civil government will be established in the archipelago about that time.

Gen. Corbin says that recent developments in the Philippines have caused no change in the general plans of the department for the dispatch of regular troops from the United States to replace the volunteers ordered home for discharge before July 1 next. Gen. Corbin gives an emphatic denial to the published reports that Gen. MacArthur has been instructed to reduce the army immediately to 40,000 men.

With a view to relieving all the regular troops who have had a long period of service in the Philippines the secretary of war has decided to replace them as rapidly as circumstances will permit with the new regiments now in course of organization.

Efforts are still being made to get President Diaz to meet President McKinley here and, as he has not yet declined the invitation, it is thought that he will come.

Flood of Bogus Coin.

Niles, Mich., April 20.—This section of the state is being flooded with bogus $5 gold pieces. The coins which are excellent counterfeits are turning up so often that business men fear to accept any gold.

FUTURE WORLD CENTER.

This Authority Says That Puget Sound Is the Hub of the Pacific Coast Trade.

Great as is the local development in all parts of the state of Washington, it sinks into insignificance compared with the prospective transcontinental and oceanic business already heading for Pugent Sound, says W. D. Lyman, in Atlantic. Consult again the map, and note the position that this body of water occupies with respect to the world. It sounds extravagant now, but sober and cool-headed business men, familiar with the facts, believe that Washington holds the key to the future commerce of the world. She stands at the crossroads of the nations, at the confluence of the commodities of the four quarters of the globe. She is the successor of Phoenicia, Carthage, Italy and England, as the natural exchange point of all lands. Europe and the United States are at her back, Alaska and British Columbia at her right hand, the tropics at her left, and the orient, with half the population of the world, in front. Formerly California was supposed to be the natural center of our western frontage. We cannot discredit the magnificent location and resources of that state, but it is true that Washington is gaining on California by leaps and bounds. This is due to three causes: First, Washington has five transcontinental railways in reach, California is under the despotism of one; second, the vast developments of Alaska and British Columbia have made Puget Sound the hub of Pacific coast trade; third, and most important, the route to the orient is materially shorter by Puget Sound than by the Golden Gate.

SELLS RABBITS' FEET.

Old New York Woman Who Is Making Much Money in the Odd Business.

Over In Hell's Kitchen lives old Martha Washington, who claims to be the only dealer in genuine rabbits' feet in New York. Martha doesn't know just how old she is, but she is very, very old, and has been in the business for 25 years, not in Hell's Kitchen, mind you, for she regards her present surroundings of mixed black and white as a step backward in the social scale; but she has to be where the dictates of commerce call her. She is reputed to be quite rich, says the Herald.

Few of her customers even know that she bears a distinguished name. To the public in general she is "Old Mammy Cottontail," but leap sports and gamblers constitute her game, and they go to the old colored woman with all the reverence and awe due to her position as high priestess of chance.

The left hind foot of a rabbit killed in a graveyard at midnight is notorious as possessing supernatural powers as a charm against ill luck and evil spirits, and "Mammy Cottontail" always has a supply on hand.

Where she gets her stock is a mystery which none of her superstitious patrons would think of even attempting to solve. When the white-neighbors miss their pet cats they sometimes cast threatening looks at "Mammy Cottontail."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases of of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

STORMS AND FLOODS.

Much Damage Wrought to Pittsburgh Property.

Many Houses at Wheeling, Bridgeport and Benwood Are Flooded —Duplicate of the Flood in 1898 Expected at Pomeroy.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 22.—Pittsburgh and Allegheny are slowly emerging from the murky flood. At 8 p. m. the rivers were receding nearly a foot an hour. The highest point reached at Davis Island dam was 25.8 feet at 3 a. m., which means 23 feet at the junction of the Allegheny and Monongahela rivers. The water remained stationary until about 3 p. m., when it began to fall. Conservative estimates of the total damage in this district is between $2,000,000 and $3,000,000. Fifty thousand workers are suffering from enforced idleness as a result of the flood.

While there has been greater floods at this point, there never was one that caused so much financial loss and discomfort.

At Carnegieboro, six miles from Pittsburgh, the loss is estimated at $40,000. The Westinghouse Electric Co. had two carloads of finished material for Toronto, Can., on the tracks near Turtle creek. They were caught in the flood and water got onto the cars. The loss may reach $8,000.

The Pittsburgh baseball park is in bad condition. At noon Sunday the first three tiers of chairs in the grand stand were under water and the bleachers were floating all over the diamond. It will take a week to put the grounds in shape.

Wheeling, W. Va., April 22.—At 9 p. m. the river was 41 feet 4 inches and rising two inches an hour. The top notch is expected in an hour or two with less than 42. This stage shuts Wheeling entirely out of outside communication by rail, and only the big Cincinnati liners are able to run now, and irate residents along the river banks are firing frequently at the boats because the swell from them is washing the foundations away from their houses. Sunday night a Wheeling island man fired at the packet Keystone and at a passing towboat without effect.

In Wheeling, Bellaire, Bridgeport, Benwood and Martin's Ferry about 500 houses have been entered by the water, most of the families moving to upper floors. Nearly every manufacturing establishment in the Wheeling district is shut down and can not resume until Tuesday.

Taking the loss of business, railroad landslides and industrial losses the aggregate cost of the flood in this district is at least $100,000, probably more.

Huntington, W. Va., April 22.—At 6 o'clock Sunday evening the rain and snow which has been falling for 78 hours ceased. The Ohio has passed the danger line, 50 feet, and is still rising 3.9 inches an hour, with Guyandotte, Big Sandy, Tug and Twelve Pole rising rapidly at all points.

Charleston, W. Va., April 22.—At 7 o'clock the Kanawha here was 36 feet four-tenths and stationary. Falling at all points above. It rained snowed or sleeted all day. Rain fell 49 hundredths. Snow in the mountains presented a higher stage in lowlands in angle between Kanawha and Elk flood and several dozen families were driven out.

Gallipolis, O., April 22.—The river gauge registered 52 feet 5 inches at 6 o'clock Sunday evening, and the water still rising at the rate of five inches per hour. The Kanawha and Michigan and Ohio River railroads have annulled their trains. The Hocking Valley tracks are still above water, and trains are running on that line. No serious damage is feared in the city, as it is on higher ground.

Pomeroy, O., April 22.—River 51 feet and rising 3 inches an hour. Water a food deep in buildings on river front. Snowing hard all day. Residents generally moved to high ground. Business men generally prepared for ten feet more. Considerable loss will be sustained by salt and lumber men. Business suspended. Railroad connections broken. No mails. No loss of life as yet. A duplicate of flood of three years ago expected. If no worse, Pomeroy will come out of her triennial bath smiling.

Portsmouth, O., April 22.—River reached a stage of 48 feet here at 7 o'clock. Rose steadily 2½ inches an hour till 4 o'clock, when it jumped to 4½ inches, which it maintained to the present. Rained and snowed alternately all day, and raining now. Scioto running out heavy. Expect 53 feet here, and the city is protected to that stage by dikes. Above that over half the town, including many business houses, will be under water. So far little damage was done, aside from the inconvenience in moving. Hundreds in the low parts of town were forced out Sunday and Saturday nights. Great uneasiness is felt, many fearing a repetition of the disastrous 1884 flood.

Zanesville, O., April 22.—Snow which has been falling three days turned to rain Sunday night, making the situation worse instead of better. Only one wire out of town working, and local wire service of all kinds paralyzed. Many buildings were crushed or damaged by weight of snow, which would be over three feet deep if much had not been melted. Muskingum rose six feet Sunday, and word from headwaters indicates a disastrous flood as the snow goes out. The Baltimore and Ohio passenger trains due here at noon Saturday went through Sunday night.

REMARKABLE OPERATION.

Three Stitches Taken in the Heart of Philip Gunn, St. Louis, and He May Recover.

St. Louis, April 22.—Dr. H. L. Nietert, superintendent of the city hospital, has just performed one of the most remarkable operations ever recorded in the annals of surgery. It consisted of taking three stitches in the heart of Philip Gunn, who had been stabbed in a saloon brawl. The point of the knife blade had entered the right ventricle and had pierced to the cavity of the heart. Luckily the knife had entered the heart obliquely, and the result was that the opening between the cavity and the pericardium of the heart was lip-shaped on both sides. The wound acted as a valve, and at each pulsation of the blood through the heart but a small quantity escaped through the artificial opening. The task of stitching this unusual wound was a very difficult one. Dr. Nietart first removed a section of the breast bone, exposing the periearilium. The motion of the heart can not be repressed and Dr. Nietart was forced to make the stitches while the organ was shifting about. It required three sutures to effectually close the gap. This delicate operation finished, the periearidium was sewed together. The portion of the breast bone removed could not be replaced, and the operation was concluded by stitching together the skin and the outer tissues which cover the chest.

Gunn is still alive, and as he has a strong constitution, the physicians predict his recovery.

RIPLEY NOT GUILTY.

The Jury Acquitted Him of Charge of Conspiring to Assassinate Senator William Goebel.

Frankfort, Ky., April 22.—After two hours' consideration of the case the jurors having in their hands the fate of Capt. Garnett Ripley, returned into court a verdict of "Not guilty as charged in the indictment." The verdict came at 11:35 o'clock and was not a surprise to the defendant or his counsel. The defendant was the first to reach the jury box when the verdict had been read. He grasped the hand of Juror McEwan and exclaimed, "Your verdict was a true one. I thank you." The defendant was immediately surrounded by friends and congratulated.

Lexington, Ky., April 22.—Capt Garnett D. Ripley, acquitted at Frankfort Saturday of the charge of complicity in the killing of William Goebel, announced Sunday night that he will leave Thursday for a visit of six weeks to Spanish Honduras. He spent the night here with friends.

THRILLING INCIDENT.

A Boy Saved a Passenger Train From Going Full Speed Into a Landslide.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 22.—One of the thrilling incidents connected with the floods prevailing in this state was the hair-breadth escape from destruction of a Pennsylvania railroad limited train west-bound near Tyrone Sunday. A boy riding frantically at the side of the track wildly waving his cap, gave a warning to the engineer and saved the train from going full speed into a landslide. Even after the warning the train ran into a large rock knocking off the cow-catcher on the engine and a Pullman was so badly damaged that it had to be taken out of the train. None of the passengers were hurt.

LONG DISTANCE TELEPHONE.

An Atlanta Man Has Perfected a System Extending 1,000 Miles Beyond Present Limits.

Atlanta, Ga., April 22.—D. M. Therrell, of this city, claims to have succeeded in perfecting a system by which telephonic long distance limits are extended 1,000 miles beyond present conversational limits, that is, from 1,350 to 2,300 miles. During recent tests of this apparatus conversations were satisfactorily carried on over one circuit between Atlanta and Troy, N. Y., made up in a round-about way, and with 13 miles of cable in the circuit.

The Big Gun Saved.

Dover, Eng., April 22.—The naval authorities here have succeeded in saving the 26-ton gun which, while being landed Saturday from a government vessel for the new Dover fort, crashed, muzzle down, through the deck and bottom of the ship, owing to the snapping of the derrick chain.

Bulgaria Pope Murdered.

Constantinople, April 23.—Consular dispatches from Monastir, Macedonia, report the murder, April 2, of the Bulgarian Pope Partherius at the Popliteha convent, near Domirnissar, supposedly by members of the Macedonian committee who had suspected him of espionage in behalf of Turkish authorities.

GERMAN EXPEDITION.

It is Believed That it Will Not Lead to a Battle.

A Command Under Gens. Von Lessel and Ketteler Marched to the Rual Lu Passes to Attack the Chinese General.

Berlin, April 20.—It was asserted by a high German official that the German government does not expect the expedition against Gen. Liu to lead to an engagement, inasmuch as he will hardly stand his ground. The expedition is more in the nature of a threat.

A military contributor to the Berliner Tageblatt expresses the same opinion, pointing out that in this instance, as in the case of the Pao Ting Fu expedition months ago, premature publications by the British and American press will enable the Chinese general, who profits by the excellent news-purveying system of the Chinese, fed by every Chinese diplomat abroad," to retire beyond the reach of the allied expedition before its arrival. This writer asserts that "such premature publications have done immense damage to the cause of allies in China on various occasions.

Peking, April 20.—Gen. Chaffee called upon Field Marshal Von Waldersee and expressed his deep sympathy with the latter in the death of Gen. Schwartzkopf and the destruction of the German headquarters by fire. Gen. Chaffee offered to aid Field Marshal Von Waldersee in any way possible. The field marshal is in good health.

The remains of Gen. Schwartzkopf have been recovered and his funeral was held Saturday. Gen. Chaffee, with officers of his staff and a troop of American cavalry, attended the funeral in behalf of the United States. Other foreign powers here also rendered similar honors.

Peking, April 22.—A. J. F. Reid, commanding the 3d brigade of the Indian Imperial service troops in China, who is now at Shan Hai Kwan, sent a company of Punjab infantry to disperse a band of robbers in the neighborhood of Fu Ning.

A force of Boxers and robbers, more than a thousand strong, attacked the Indian troops, killing Maj. Browning and one Sepoy and wounding others. The company retreated to Fu Ning. Reinforcements have been sent from Shan Hai Kwan.

Pao Ting Fu, Saturday, April 20.—This city has been for the last four days a big military camp of French and German soldiers on the way to the front. It is now estimated that 8,000 French troops and 6,000 Germans will form the entire force when all the reinforcements have arrived. There is no truth in current reports regarding severe fighting between the outposts and the Chinese.

Three men left yesterday under escort to convey Emperor Kwang Su's first order to Gen. Liu to retire immediately into the province of Shan Si. Prince Ching and other Chinese officials say the Chinese general has already retired; but their confirmations or denials are considered very unreliable.

The French and German troops seem to be co-operating fairly well, although until Friday there was some doubt as to who would command the expedition. This question has been settled by an arrangement until which the French and Germans are to work independently and yet at the same time to co-operate.

If the Chinese retire over the Shan Si boundary, then, according to international agreement, the foreign troops should not go beyond it. The ministers of the powers in Peking earnestly hope that this may be the case. They point out that the Chinese force has not been aggressive and only came a few miles over the border, arguing that it might just as well have been allowed to remain where it was.

Shanghai, April 22.—The Tartar general at Feng Tien, Manchuria, has borrowed of the Russians, on the security of the land and poll taxes, the sum of 400,000 taels to be applied in forming a force of military police.

Chester, Mass., Flooded.

Chester, Mass., April 22—The Flood Hollow dam in Middlefield gave way about 6 o'clock Sunday night letting loose the water in the big reservoir, which rushed with terrific force into the west branch of the Westfield river, sweeping everything before it and submerging the greater part of this town. No lives were lost, but great damage has been done, the extent of which it is impossible now to estimate.

THROUGH SIX FLOORS.

A Huge Iron Water Tank Fell From Its Fastenings on the Roof, Injuring Five Persons.

Chicago, April 22.—A high wind, struck Chicago Sunday, loosened a huge iron water tank from its fastenings on the roof of the Galbraith building, Madison and Franklin streets, causing it to crash through the six floors to the ground, injuring five persons and resulting in a damage to the building estimated at $50,000.

With two exceptions the injured were pedestrians on the street, who had not time to make their escape. Had the accident happened on any other day but Suaday many lives would have undoubtedly have been lost, as the building was occupied by several firms employing a large number of people.

The tank was 25 feet long and six feet in diameter, and contained 40,000 gallons of water. In falling it made a hole about 40 feet square through the building.

STORM AT ERIE PA.

The Worst Known There in 60 Years —Foot of Snow on the Level— Fruit Trees Damaged.

Erie, Pa., April 22.—The snowstorm of Friday night and Saturday and the sleet storm of Saturday night was the worst known here in 60 years and surpassed the famous blizzard of March, 1888. There is 12 inches of snow on the level, and during Saturday nearly every trolley line in the city was knocked out. Sunday traffic was resumed irregularly Wires were down and crossed and telephone companies blocked. Reports from outside the city, west, east and south, show snow three feet deep and great damage to fruit trees from the wet snow. Suburban stage mail and trolley lines were abandoned. There are numerous mishaps to freight trains on the Lake Shore railroad at Girard Junction, Swanville, Harbor Creek and Westfield, N. Y.

A FRIENDLY ALLIANCE.

Attorney Generals of Ohio, Indiana and Illinois Will Attempt to Eradicate Fake Insurance.

Indianapolis, Ind., April 20.—Ohio Indiana and Illinois, through their attorney generals, have formed a friendly alliance to eradicate fake insurance companies. Attorney General Sheets, of Ohio, called on Attorney General Taylor, of Indiana, at the state house Friday and the two talked over schemes to rid the people of these blood sucking enterprises.

The co-operation of the three states, it is believed, will more effectually quash the evil, as under the lack of combined supervision companies driven out of one state immediately took root in an adjoining state and kept in business with comparatively little trouble. The three men will keep each other posted as to details of all discoveries in their respective states.

STATE ODDS AND ENDS.

BOUND OVER TO COURT.

James Gleason, Alias Chas. Gillman, Waived Examination on Charge of Robbing a Post Office.

Covington, Ky., April 19.—James Gleason, alias Charles Gillman, waived examination before United States Commissioner Leonard, in Covington, Thursday evening, on a charge of robbing the post office at Louisa, Ky., and was bound over to the federal court, which convenes in Covington on the first Monday in May. His bail was fixed at $1,000, in default of which he was remanded to jail.

The robbery of the Louisa post office occurred in December, 1900, and was carried out by three desperate looking men, who were seen by several persons in the vicinity of the post office at the time. Descriptions of the robbers were published in the papers at the time, but no trace of them could be found.

Two weeks ago Thursday a man of powerful build was arrested at Ludlow on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct, and was sentenced to the Covington jail for 15 days under the name of Charles Gillman. Turnkey Maurer, when given charge of the prisoner, remembered the description of the post office robbers, and came to the conclusion that Gilman was one of them. He communicated with the post office authorities, who sent a secret service officer to Covington to investigate. Gillman was recognized as James Gleason, who was wanted for the robbery at Louisa. Several witnesses from Louisa Thursday testified to seeing him at that place on the day of the robbery. The evidence against him was so strong that Commissioner Leonard bound him over.

MOONSHINERS RAIDED.

A Still and Its Full Equipment Destroyed in Hardin County— The Owners Escaped.

Louisville, Ky., April 20.—Internal Revenue Agent Yates returned Friday from a raid in Hardin county in which he succeeded in destroying a stil and its full equipment. The owners of the still were not found.

For months the people along Rough creek, on which the raid was made, have been terrorized by the makers of illicit whisky. In several instances the houses of those who were thought to have given information to the revenue officers were blown up with dynamite, their haystacks were burned and their stock run off and their property destroyed.

INVESTMENT COMPANIES.

Representatives Meet at Lexington to Form a State Association— Adjourned Until May 7.

Lexington, Ky., April 20.—Representatives of the investment companies of the state met here Friday to organize a state association. The perfecting of the organization was postponed and a second meeting called, to meet at Louisville on May 7.

A majority of the local companies refused to attend the meeting, claiming that they had no need of protection from adverse state and nation legislation, which was one of the principal objects of the organization.

J. T. Fitzgerald, of the Bond Investment Co., of Cincinnati, is one of the promoters of the movement.

Powell's Valley Flood.

Middlesboro, Ky., April 20.—Two days' heavy rain brought on a freshet in Powell's valley and perhaps 20 families were homeless in that section Friday night. There is two inches of snow in Yellow creek valley, and it is half a foot deep on the mountains.

TROOPS WILL NOT BE SENT.

Gov. Beckham Declines to Interfere in the Letcher County Trouble— Lanterns Hung Out at Night.

Frankfort, Ky., April 18.—County Judge Blair, of Letcher county, was here Wednesday to make a personal request of Gov. Beckham that troops be sent to this county to capture the band of desperadoes who are charged with the murder of Jemima Hall and her nephew last fall. The governor declined to send the troops to do the duty of a sheriff's posse, realizing that it would be fruitless to try to move such a body secretly to capture the fugitives.

Whitesburg, Ky., April 18.—The Reynolds faction are now well fortified in a brick house, the home of a relative near the scene of the big battle of last week. They have windows on each side of the house, and for hundreds of yards lanterns are strung around to give light at night. They have over 150 guns, they say.

MAY CALL OUT TROOPS.

The Strike Situation at Madisonville Has Become Alarming—Several Assaults Committed.

Madisonville, Ky., April 18.—The strike situation here has become alarming, and it is feared it may be necessary to call out the troops. A strong force of non-union men are taking an aggressive stand against those in the union. Todd shot his man and then turned to run, and though a crowd of Garrett's friends fired on him, he escaped.

James D. Wood, president of District No. 23 of the American Mine Workers' union, was struck by a non-union man named Jim Blanks, but not seriously hurt.

Then the best doctors urged amputation, "but," he writes, "I used one bottle of Electric Bitters and 1½ boxes of Bucklen's Arnica Salve and my leg was as sound and well as ever." For Eruptions, Eczema, Tetter, Salt Rheum, and blood disorders Electric Bitters has no rival. Try them. W. F. McKim, Burlington; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; H. L. Last week an agent for the Standard Oil Company leased several thousand acres of land immediately north of Crittenden for the purpose of drilling wells for oil or natural gas. The land leased extends along the pike from about a mile north of Crittenden to the village of Key West. The company thinks there is a prospect for either oil or gas, and propose to sink a number of wells. Should either be found in paying quantities the land owners will receive 10 per cent and the Standard Oil Company the remainder of the output. Oil or gas has been found in small quantities at various places along the old Lexington pike from Covington to Williamstown, and who knows but this may be the means of opening up a new field of wealth to the people of this part of the country? —Williamstown Courier.

"There's a farmer in Montgomery County from whom I receive regular consignments." said a wholesale dealer in butter and eggs. "who every once in a while crops up with a new and original idea peculiarly adapted to his business, and many a good suggestion from this tiller of the soil have I found it profitable to adopt. Some little time ago I received a consignment of eggs from this farmer, and on opening one of the crates was surprised to find that all the eggs had been dated with a rubber stamp and purple ink, which, along with his name and address, made an excellent advertisement for this enterprising individual. The idea took, too, for many a grocer has since told me that their customers, after once purchasing these eggs, would ask for them again, some positively refusing to take any others. I suppose, though, that the farmers who have eggs to sell that they're not afraid to date will be purchasing rubber stamps as soon as they hear of the scheme.—Philadelphia Record.

"It is not what you have that makes you happy," says Gov. Bob Taylor in one of his lectures. "The happiest man I ever saw lived down in Tennessee and he wasn't rich, but how he could eat. Before him bacon and beans and buckwheat cakes melted like the baseless fabric of a dream at waking time. He was invited to a banquet and fasted for three days to get ready. When he took his place at the banquet board and the first course was served he was very much disappointed at seeing nothing but soup. But he was determined to make the best of the situation and he ordered soup until he was full to the neck. Presently the waiters began bringing in the quail and toast and other things until the table fairly groaned. The fellow looked up and exclaimed: "What a big fool am I. Here I sit full of soup and the feast has just begun."

BRADFORD BROS.,

FLORENCE, - - KENTUCKY.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, E grade, with celebrated Gotlet steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rims good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters bufled, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes if you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childrees' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 1, 1901. NO. 28.

In another column appears the law in regard to small-pox in this State. It may be well enough to read it.

Mr. Bryan says that he is not planning for another nomination for the Presidency, if he were he would not be editing a paper.

It is generally believed that ex-Governor Bradley side-tracked his appointment to a Federal Judgeship when he testified in the Ripley case.

Lawrenceburg people have had their confidence in their protection against floods strengthened by the recent severe test of their levee.

The Cuban delegation from the convention that is endeavoring, with the aid and consent of this country, to frame a constitution for Cuba; called on President McKinley last Friday. The business which brought the delegation was with Secretary Root.

Don't you Moguls at Washington, who make and unmake officers be too swift. Don't display the winning card in any race until all the entries have at least been lined up for the start. This request has reference to the Internal Revenue Collectorship in this district.

The State Board of Valuation and Assessment has completed the work of assessing for franchise tax the nine leading railroad corporations of the State. The assessment is based upon 80 per cent of the capital stock The total valuation is $15,306,943, as against $11,094,426 last year, an increase of $4,312,517.

The name and good will of the defunct Louisville Dispatch was sold at auction on the 16th ult., and was purchased by Allen Carter for the exorbitant sum of $6. Mr. Urey Woodson bought the presses and type for his new Paducah daily. Mr. George Fetters purchased the linotypes for $11,000, while the Courier-Journal gobbled up the news service.

Pendleton county policy holders in the Enterprise Insurance Company of Lexington, a fire insurance company organized a few years ago and operated on the assessment plan, have at last come to grief, and many of them are now ready and willing to surrender their policies on whatever terms may be dictated by the company managers.—Pendletonian.

The growth of the missionary work during the past century has been marvelous. In 1800 there were only seven Protestant foreign missionary societies in existence, with 70,000 converts and a total annual income of $125,000. To-day there are 150 societies, with 6,000 missionaries, 68,500 native preachers, teachers and helpers and over 4,000,000 converts.

The effort to locate oil or natural gas in the territory along the Southern Railroad between Walton, this county, and Crittenden, Grant county, has prepared that section for a genuine boom, should oil or gas either be discovered. Being immediately on the railroad makes it a desirable field to operate and it is truly hoped that one or both of the desired products will be found in abundance.

The friends of ex-Governor Bradley at Washington are very much disappointed over his turndown in the matter of the Federal Judgship for the eastern district of this State as they believed he was practically sure of appointment. They do not hesitate to blame Senator Deboe for the result, and claim that had he made a sincere fight for Bradley at the last conference at the White House the President would have yielded. It is even claimed that Senator Deboe surrendered at the first fire by telling the President that he "would not go to the Philippines over the matter whoever was appointed." The salary of the Judge, District Attorney and Marshal is fixed by law at $5,000 a year each. The Judge has the appointment of several clerks and commissioners in his district. No salaries are attached to these positions, the compensation being fees.

LAW ON SMALL-POX.

Penalty for Persons Having Small-pox Going In Public Places.

Every person superintending a hospital or other place where a patient having the small-pox is confined, shall prohibit all intercourse therewith of persons not having had the disease, and shall, before discharging a patient, or suffering him to be removed, take due care that his person is thoroughly cleansed, and his clothes, such as have not been infected with the disease, under the penalty of ten dollars.

If any person who has never had the small-pox shall go into a house where the disease is, or associate with a person who is afflicted therewith, any justice of the peace, on due proof of the fact, may cause such person to be conveyed to some house or place in the county where the disease will not spread, there to remain until he shall have gone through the disease, or until a physician shall certify that he will not take the same. If such person be not able to pay the expense of his nursing, the county shall pay the same.

If any person shall wilfully endeavor to spread or propagate the small-pox, he shall be subject to be indicted and fined the sum of five hundred dollars, or to be imprisoned for six months.

Any person who, having reason at the time to believe himself afflicted with the disease of small-pox, shall voluntarily go upon any public highway or street, or to any place at which people are accustomed to collect or assemble, or who shall enter or go on board any steamboat, railroad car or other public conveyance, and all persons who shall knowingly aid or assist any one thus to offend, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, upon conviction, shall be fined not less than one hundred nor more than one thousand dollar.

The Small-pox Scare.

For the last two weeks the Bullittsville and Francesville neighborhoods have been very much agitated by the appearance of the small-pox. What was at first supposed to be chicken-pox appeared in Robert Day's family, where there were five cases—so pronounced by the attending physician. A negro man, who worked for Mr. Day, was stricken with the disease and another physician was called to see him, and pronounced his ailment small-pox. Here was a difference of opinion on the part of the attending doctors, and other noted physicians among them Dr. Ranshaw, a Covington Health Officer, were called to see the patients, and all agreed that the cases at Day's were well defined cases of small-pox. This intensified the excitement, and Dr. J. F. Smith, of Burlington, Chairman of the County Board of Health called a meeting of that board for last Friday, at which the organization was perfected. The infected persons in the above neighborhoods, were ordered isolated, which, fortunately, is easily done as Mr. Day and family as well as the colored man, live at considerable distance from any public highway, and have no neighbors so near as to endanger them. The County Board of Health will endeavor to prevent the spread of the disease, and do not apprehend any danger if the people will not unnecessarily expose themselves.

It seems that a great many people do not believe the disease is small-pox because it is in such a light form, but physicians say small-pox is not necessarily virulent—that it, as well as anyother disease can be of a mild type, and not kill everyone who is so unfortunate as to contract it—that many communities may be visited by it and not a death result from it.

No new cases of the disease have appeared, and a very large per cent. of the citizens of the two neighborhoods do not yet believe it is small pox.

Ollie James, of Crittenden county, who made a rousing Democratic speech here during the last Gubernatorial campaign, has a clear track for Congress in his district. James will be heard from when he reaches Congress, and dont you forget it.

Never plant your garden truck until fishing worms are good and fat—so says Col. Lillard, our champion gardner.

Several horse buyers were on hand, Monday, but on account of rain many who have horses for sale remained at home.

Some cattle, mostly feeders, were on the market, court day. They were disposed of to different parties at private sale.

P. D. Lerch, the well-known tobacco man of Monterey, and one of the largest buyers in the business, has purchased nearly 600,000 pounds of tobacco this season, and has paid some of the highest prices for the weed this year. He is still buying.

[Owen News.]

Massie Bros. are receiving tobacco in such quantities that they are unable to handle it conveniently. Some sellers have to remain three or four days before they can have their wagons unloaded.

Our neighbor, Jeff Davis, brought to our office, last week, a pistol, the like of which there is none perhaps in this section. It is a 'six shooter' of the French Army, and was taken from Paul Lefever at the battle of Seda. Jeff prizes this implement of warfare very highly and has been offered marvelous sums for it, but can not be induced to surrender peaceable possession of same.

The following method of destroying briars won a $15 prize offered by an agricultural paper in the North. Every Boone county farmer who may read this ought to cut it out and paste it in his hat:

"The time to cut briars is in May, from the first to the twentieth, as the flow of sap is very strong and the stub or stalk that is left will decay even with the ground. In August when the cutting is repeated, the old stubs are not in the way of the scythe or machine and by cutting at the time mentioned all plant food from the roots will be prevented and they will decay. Repeat the same operation the next year and the roots are all killed and the briars destroyed. I have given this a test of several years experience and find it to do just as stated. It does not matter whether the pastures are grazed or not. A great many farmers will go to the expense of cutting them annually for years and the result is a failure, when half the time expended in cutting at the times stated will give a more satisfatcory result."

A pathetic scene was enacted in the Circuit Court at Bloomington, Ind., when Mrs. Mollie Fisher, aged 80, appeared as a witness and asked a divorce from her husband, William Fisher, aged 81. Both were so feeble that they went to the witness stand with difficulty. The husband said he had been kept from his home for over fifty years because a son had treated him cruelly and abused him and the mother took the son's part. The old father went to the home of a daughter. The wife asked for $3,000 alimony. The Judge refused to take action, and said that the trouble would soon forever be settled by the Great Master, as both were on the verge of eternity.

Thomas Poteet, a merchant at Penn's Chapel, Ky., has had a most varied matrimonial experience, and, according to his own statement, has seven wives living and is not guilty of bigamy. He lived in the West for several years and four of his former wives are out there. Two live in Edmonson county, this State, and one is now living with him. He was divorced from his six former wives on different grounds. He does not know how many children he has, but the number is between 18 and 22. Mr. Poteet is 54 years old.

A movement to endow Kentucky University for $1,000,000 has just been inaugurated. Wealthy members of the Christian Church are to be asked to insure their lives in favor of the University.

The indications are the Democratic primary election will be quite interesting so far as the nomination for the office of sheriff is concerned in Kenton county. That is a good office and several of the boys are out after it.

The widow of the late Vice President John C. Breckinridge, of Kentucky, has been granted a pension by the Commissioner of Pensions because of her husband's services as Major of the Third Kentucky Volunteers during the Mexican War. Mrs. Breckinridge is now seventy-six years of age. She lives with her daughters, Mrs. Steele, of Midway, and Mrs. Matley, of New York, being at present with the latter. Colonel Breckinridge was the Democratic candidate for President in 1860. As Vice-President under Buchanan, it was his duty to preside over the joint meeting of the two Houses of Congress, at which the electoral vote was counted, and formally announced the election of his opponent, President Lincoln. Mrs. Breckinridge draws $8 per month since she was 62 years old which gives her back pay of near $1,400.

It is estimated that ten per cent of the peach crop of Kentucky has been damaged by cold. The peaches have suffered the most. Some of the early varieties were nipped.—Marion Press.

CROP REPORT.

The United States Weather Bureau's crop report for the week says:

"The past week has been too cool for crops of all kinds. Nothing was injured by the cool weather, but the growth of all vegetation was checked. Wheat continues to improve and the outlook is much more satisfactory; in some localities it is reported to be fully up to the average for the time of the year.

"Tobacco plants are in good condition but growing very slowly, on account of the cool weather.

"Corn land has generally been broken and considerable planted in southern and western portions of the State, but the cool weather and rains have delayed this work.

"A largs acreage of potatoes is being planted, and some garden truck is being planted.

"The outlook for fruit is very encouraging. Peaches are in bloom in nearly all sections, and plums, cherries and apples are beginning to bloom in the southern and western portions of the State.

"Grass in meadows and pastures and oats and rye are looking healthy, but advancing slowly. Old clover was badly winter killed, but new clover is doing well.

"Farm work is progressing fairly well. Light frosts were reported in some localities, but no damage resulted. Warm weather is needed."

The above report was made before the cold snap of last Friday and Saturday.

The bringing back to life of Mrs. Sallie Allen at an Evansville hospital a few days since by the injection into a vein of a normal salt solution is attracting the attention of physicians throughout the country. The solutionwas nothing more than a teaspoonful of common salt dissolved in a pint of water. "Mrs. Allen went on the table in the best of spirits and we were all surprised when she unexpectedly collapsed" said Dr. Richstein today in speaking of the case. "Everything known to medical science was done to revive her, and we had entirely given up hopes of bringing her back to life when it was decided to inject normal salt solution into her veins. The injection was made after she had been apparently dead for at least three minutes and we were rewarded almost immediately by seeing her open her eyes. The first thing she did after coming back to life was to ask for something to eat, and she is now resting well, with every indication pointing to a speedy recovery. I am satisfied the woman's heart did not pulsate for at least three minutes, and every movement of the respiratory system stopped before the injection of the normal salt solution was made.

"Salt is a wonderful product and its value is now realized more by the medical fraternity than ever before. Salt promises to revolutionize medical science, and I would not be surprised to see it some day become the agent by which the slender thread of life will be prolonged to a remarkable extent."

Mrs. Allen is 40 yrs- old and the mother of 12 children. She had long suffered with abnormal trouble, but is now getting along all right with chances favorable to her recovery.

Kentucky, with an area of 40,000 sq. miles of land surface, stands third in the column of Southern wheat producing States, Texas, with seven times Kentucky's area, standing first, and Maryland, with three times her area, standing second. Kentucky stands second among the southern States in corn and oats products, Texas being first. The value of the Tennessee wheat crop, 11,696,088 bushels, is greater in value by $654,346 than the Kentucky crop.

The Governor has called for the resignation of Dr. E. B. McCormick, Superintendent of the Western Kentucky Asylum for the insane, at Hopkinsville. An employe preferred charges of immorality against the Superintendent, which he denounces as false, and demands a thorough investigation.

The Poultry Yard.

A gloomy hen house does not invite laying.

Never use late hatched turkeys for breeding.

Boil the milk before giving it to little chicks.

Dampness is invariably the open door to roup.

A purplish red comb indicates something disordered.

It is very essential in saving the poultry droppings that they be kept dry.

In the selection of the breeding turkeys do not let size be the only qualification.

There is a comfortable living in breeding poultry if conducted in a business like manner.

Turkeys are marketable throuout the entire year and no class of poultry is steadier in price.

Poultry in the orchards destroy in-sects, bugs and worms and keeps the trees in a good condition.

To keep down lice give fresh dust baths, clean nests and dust insect powder in the feathers of the fowls.

If chickens or turkeys are allowed to go on the roosts too early their breasts often get crooked, spoiling their appearance.

Much of the disease with which poultry are afflicted may be traced to a neglect in not ventilating the poultry house.

To feed bone meal and oyster shells dry is the best plan ; put a supply in boxes and let the fowls help themselves.

A comparison of the treatment given large and small flocks shows that as a rule the smaller the flock the greater the variety of food furnished the individual.

Be sure that the ground floor in the poultry house is enough higher than the surrounding ground to insure it keeping perfectly dry. This is an important item from now until settled weather.

Soft eggs, appoplexy, egg bound and nearly all such diseases are the result of the hens being too fat. Reduce the ration, especially of fattening foods, and compel in some way the fowls to take more exercise. Oats is a good grain to feed when the hens are too fat.

One reason why many like the Langshan as a table fowl is that its flesh is more closely related to that of the turkey, being of fine white quality, and the only objection is that it is a black chicken and in dressing shows the pin feathers rather more than a white or light feathered fowl.

At this time and on until settled weather care should be taken to see that the quarters are kept dry. In many cases a good supply of litter, cut straw or the chaff from the feeding floor scattered liberally over the floor will help materially in this and at the time add to the comfort of the fowls. Damp quarters at this time often mean colds and these in many cases develop into roup that proves fatal. By keeping the quarters dry much of this may be avoided.

Nothing is more conducive to good health in poultry than affording them plenty of pure, fresh air, without subjecting them to draughts in any way. There are but few days in winter when it will be advisable to open the door for a time at least every day and especially if the door opens south. Ordinarily if there is an opening near the roof there will be a sufficient amount of cold air come in at the bottom to purify the air without drafts upon the fowls. If the quarters are close and there is no opportunity for the rapidly accumulating foul air to escape chickens or adult birds cannot thrive. The breathing over and over of this impure air almost inevitably generates disease. Roup, sniffles, swelled head and a number of so-called fowl diseases are attributable to this cause, the best treatment for which is prevention.

The Presidential party is now well on its way to the far West in its swing around the circle. May good luck and pleasure attend it.

THE BOERS HARASSED.

Reported to Be Greatly Worn Out and Yearns For a Settlement of the War.

London, April 27.—Henry W. Massingham, writing in the Daily News, says:

"The Boers are greatly worn and harassed, and they yearn for a settlement; but they will not trust any settlement on Chamberlain-Milner terms. They would, however, surrender the whole Johannesburg and Rand gold fields district to Great Britain on condition that independence was restored to the Orange Free State, and that the Transvaalers was allowed to found a republic in the wild, uncultivated north, subject to British control of foreign affairs."

The war office has received the following dispatch from Lord Kitchener:

"Pretoria, April 26.—Since yesterday the columns report the Boer losses to be 12 killed, 20 wounded, 47 captured and 42 surrendered.

"Gen. Kitchener reports from Paade Platz four Boers killed, 180 taken prisoners, and, 3,000 cattle, 6,000 sheep and many wagons captured."

Wilson Chase, with a detachment of the 21st infantry, on April 26 surprised the camp of the insurgent general, Cailles, at Dugout-Dugot, situated nine miles northeast of Cavinti, in the province of Laguna. Cailles was at his camp at the time of the American attack, but managed to escape. Capt. Chase's force captured his adjutant general, five other of his staff officers, 14 men, 20 rifles, a large amount of ammunition and stores, and all the papers and personal effects of the Filipino general. The insurgent major, Velo, was killed during the engagement, as were Corporal Metcill and Private Tipps, both belonging to Company A of the 21st. Several columns of the American troops continue vigorously to pursue Gen. Cailles.

Gen. Cailles recently offered a reward of $10,000 for the head of Capt. Edward N. Jones, jr., of the 8th infantry.

For more than a year past Cailles has commanded the insurgent forces operating to the east of Bay lake, not far from Manila. He is said to be a French half caste.

He has a reputation for vindictiveness and cruelty, and is one of the two or three of the Filipino leaders in the field who have clearly ignored the observances of honorable warfare.

The society of Mando-Ducats, whose practice it was to assassinate and bury alive those of their countrymen who accepted American sovereignty whenever the latter fell into their hands, operated with the cognizance, if not the support, of Gen. Cailles. If Cailles were captured it is doubtful if he could claim immunity for past actions under the terms of the amnesty. In January, of this year, Cailles offered a reward of $10 a piece for the heads of all Americans brought to him.

Ledebure being the right wing, then those commanded by Col. Hoffmeister, Col. Wallmerich and Maj. Huehlonfels. Ledebure reached the wall April 24 after a slight engagement near Hai Shan Kwan.

"Hoffmeister drove back the enemy April 23. On the same day Huehlenfels encountered a strong party of the enemy occupying a position on the heights commanding the pass. The enemy fought stubbornly, in a particularly strong position, which was only taken after eleven hours' fighting.

"Huehlenfels and Lieut. Reichert were slightly wounded and Lieut. Drewells was severely wounded. A standard bearer and another were killed and six men severely and ten slightly wounded.

"Wallmerich attacked and dispersed, April 23, a far superior force of the enemy in a strong position east of the breach of Hae Ho, and effected a junction on the battlefield with the battalion under Maj. Wallmerich followed them thither.

BUFFALO EXPOSITION.

The Attendance Sunday Was a Record Breaker For a Pre-Exposition Crowd.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 29.—Sunday's attendance at the Pan-American exposition was a record breaker for a pre-exposition crowd. Fully 30,000 persons passed through the gates, about 75 per cent. of them paying for admission. Although the exposition is still far from completion, every one seemed satisfied with what there was to see. The managers of the exposition had been working for a unique distinction—that of having all things in readiness for the opening day, and had it not been for the storm their hopes would have no doubt been fulfilled. As it is, the "sand-paper" finish the management has striven for can not be accomplished by May 1, but there will be enough of it to repay any one who visits the grounds on opening day.

An event on the opening day next Wednesday will be a flight of 5,000 carrier pigeons carrying the news of the opening of the exposition.

He and His Party Are Traveling in One of the Finest Trains in America.

Washington, April 29.—The train which will carry the president and his party for the next seven weeks on their trip through the United States reached here Sunday morning. It is one of the finest trains ever run over any American railway system. The start was made at 10:30 o'clock Monday morning, with Frank Lurwood as engineer and W. W. Albright as conductor. Both are trusted employes of the Southern railway. The Southern Railway Co. will have charge of the train from Washington to New Orleans, and at this point the party and train will come under the supervision of the Southern Pacific railroad.

The train, which is practically new, is made up of seven cars. The president's own car, the Olympia, is in the rear of the train. Next to the engine is the combination baggage and smoking car, followed by the new dining car, with a capacity for 40 people. The next two are compartment cars, with seven state rooms and two dining rooms each.

The fifth and sixth cars are handsome 12-section drawing room cars. The president will retain the Olympia as far as San Francisco, and there will be transferred to the Lucania, one of the finest private cars in existence, in which to make the return trip to the east. The Olympia is 70 feet long, and has five private rooms and one sofa section, and will accommodate nine persons. The Lucania has accommodations for 13 people. The president and Mrs. McKinley will have their meals served in their own car.

This action came as a great surprise to the town, and great excitement prevails among small depositors. Many of the securities are western investments which are understood to have decreased in value year by year.

THE TEXAS OIL FIELD.

Two More Big Gushers Brought In at Beaumont Sunday—The Circuit Widened.

Beaumont, Tex., April 29.—Two more oil gushers were brought in here Sunday. The first is on what is known as the Gladys City property, which is owned by the J. M. Guffy Co. It is close to the other gushers. It was permitted to spout only a few minutes, when, after proving itself the equal of any of the others, the valve which had been previously arranged was closed and the flow stopped. The other well, which reached the oil vein, is of importance chiefly because it widens the oil circuit, being farthest from the original Lucas gusher.

Remains of Abraham Lincoln and Family Placed in the Crypt.

It Was Decided Not to Open the Casket Containing the Body of the Dead President—A Splendid Tomb.

Springfield, Ill., April 25.—The remains of Abraham Lincoln and members of his family, which have rested in a temporary stone vault near the National Lincoln monument since March 10, 1900, when the work of rebuilding the monument was commenced, were Wednesday afternoon replaced in the crypt in the monument. It was decided not to reopen the casket containing the body of Lincoln, which had been done when the body was moved 14 years ago. The remains now reposing in the splendid tomb which the state of Illinois has spent $100,000 in rebuilding are Abraham Lincoln, his wife, and their three sons, Willie, Thomas and Eddie, and Abraham, son of Robert T. THROUGH THE HEART.

Parkersburg, W. Va., April 25.—There is an unwritten law in West Virginia that any steamboat plying the Ohio river during the time of a flood lays itself liable to destruction, or at least some of the members of the crew to being murdered. At 7:30 Wednesday morning Sig. Cole, of this city, was sitting on his second story porch at his home on Front street here and saw the steamer Keystone State coming toward the city. He went into the house and got his Winchester rifle and came out and waited for the boat. When the Keystone State got within range he fired at her and the bullet struck Capt. W. T. Terry, of Wheeling, in the heart, killing him instantly. Capt. Terry was 67 years old and has a wife and six children. He has been on the river all his life and on this trip was acting as the carpenter and was repairing the pilot house. Cole was arrested and taken before Squire Thomas and stated that the waves from the boat would overturn several houses and endanger the lives of many people and he was protecting his family when the fatal shot was fired.

Pittsburgh, Pa., April 25.—Steamboatmen leaving Thursday for the south will go heavily armed, and if their boats are fired on from the shore, the crews will return the fire. The killing of W. T. Terry, a carpenter on the Pittsburgh and Cincinnati packet Keystone State at Parkersburg Wednesday, has incensed the river men to a high degree of anger. Every Ohio river packet and towboat arriving at Pittsburgh this week reports having been fired on by people along the bank, who claim that the waves from the boats endanger their houses during the high water.

The matter has been placed in the hands of the government authorities for action.

DISASTROUS EXPLOSION.

About 200 Killed or Wounded in a Chemical Works Near Gleisheim, Germany.

Frankfort, April 26.—One of the most disastrous explosions on record occurred Thursday morning at the electro-chemical works near Gleisheim, where smokeless powder is manufactured. Most of the boilers exploded. The noise was so tremendous that it was heard at great distances, including Frankfort and Mayence.

The factory immediately became a mass of flames, and a northeast wind carried the sparks to neighboring villages, where several houses were also set on fire.

Eighteen cylinders, each containing about 100 weight of smokeless powder, were in the room where the explosion occurred.

Troops were immediately ordered to Greisheim to prevent fire spreading to the large benzine reservoirs nearby. Fire brigades from every place in the neighborhood hurried to the scene, but owing to the dangerous nature of the disaster and the fear of a renewal of the explosions the greatest difficulty was experienced in stopping the progress of the flames. Only after five hours of strenuous effort was the conflagration to some extent controlled and the danger passed so as to make it possible to begin the work of extricating the bodies. It is feared that nearly 200 persons have been killed or injured.

The last explosion occurred at 7:50 p. m., and when it was ascertained that no further danger was anticipated the inhabitants were allowed to return to their homes. The work of recovering the bodies is being carried on as rapidly as possible.

Sancio, one of his staff officers, and Senor De La Rosa, a wealthy native who had refused to contribute to the insurgent fund. Sancio escaped. The others were tortured and then butchered. Cailles, who is now lurking in the mountains of Tayabas province, Luzon, proclaims himself dictator and the successor of Aguinaldo and announces his intention to continue a war of extermination.

It is said that Cailles was born in Pondicherry, India, his father being a Frenchman and his mother a Hindoo. It is also asserted that he formerly registered as a French subject in Manila. He is a typical guerilla leader, cruel, able, reckless and unrelenting.

Aguinaldo denounces him, disclaiming responsibility for his previous atrocities, and declares that he never issued orders contrary to the rules of war.

THE INDEMINITIES.

Russia Will Advance the Sum That China Will Be Required to Pay to the Powers.

Paris, April 26.—The Courriere du Soir, which is officially well informed on ministerial intentions, says that the settlement of the Chinese situation is a question of finance. The newspaper says that Russia, repeating that operation which has had the great success, will advance China the sum required to pay the indemnities and that French savings will provide the Russian government with the requisite funds. The European troops, except the legation garrisons, will then leave Peking and a fresh period will begin during which Chinese patience will strive to tire out the British and German governments in their claims regarding the opening of the ports and the customs. Russia, however, will retain Manchuria as a pledge for the loan. This appears to be the general scheme of the project that the French foreign minister, M. Delcasse, is discussing in St. Petersburg with Count Lamsdorff and M. Witte, respectively Russian ministers of foreign affairs and finance.

Clayton, N. M., April 27.—Thos. E. Ketchum, alias "Black Jack," the notorious outlaw who had terrorized the people of the southwest for the past 15 years, was hanged here for train robbery, and his head was severed from his body by the rope as if by a guillotine. The headless trunk pitched forward toward the spectators and blood spattered upon those nearest the scaffold.

The execution took place inside a stockade built for the occasion. The enclosure was filled, 150 citizens having been admitted. When Ketchum mounted the scaffold at 1:17 p. m. his face was pale, but he showed no fear. A priest stood at his side as the rope was being put around his neck. The condemned man had consented to this at the last moment. Ketchum declined to make a speech. He muttered: "Good-by," then said: "Please dig my grave very deep," and as the cap was drawn over his face, shouted: "Let her go."

"We find," continued Mr. Chamberlain, "that the Maine lies perfectly level, and it is just 37 feet and 6 inches to solid bottom from both bow to stern. In order to float the vessel we shall first build a dam all around it and pump out the water. When the water has all been removed from the wreck, the hole in her bow will be repaired. STATE NEWS HAPPENINGS.

ONLY A TRESPASS.

A Straight Story, Told By a Convict, Will Likely Get Him Out of the Kentucky Penitentiary.

Louisville, Ky., April 26.—John Lucas, a convict in the state penitentiary, will probably soon be free, and he owes his freedom to the testimony he gave against his partner. Last summer Lucas and a young man named Cox wanted some whisky, so they caught Shell Johnson's mule, hitched it to a wagon and drove to Harrodsburg. On their return they let the mule loose on the road. Johnson was then arrested for mule stealing, and Lucas, thinking he was in a bad fix, pleaded guilty and was given two years. Wednesday Cox was put on trial and Lucas was put on the stand to testify against him. He told such a straight tale that he awakened the sympathy of every one in the court room. The case against Cox was dismissed, as it was only a trespass. Judge Scuffy had a talk with Lucas, and as a result will write to the governor and will ask a pardon. The court officials will concur and it will doubtless be granted.

Neighborhood News.

WALTON.—Dr. James L. Adams of Walton, will take a vacation from the 9th to 24th inst.

The Standard Oil Co., has leased several thousand acres of land between Crittenden and Bracht, so the papers state. There is no doubt that an extensive oil field can be developed in or near this vicinity, but there is very great doubt whether the Standard will do anything to aid the undertaking. It is rumored that the Company has secured the options to keep competitors from getting hold of it, and may hold them up, and never sink a well at all.

It has long been known that indications of oil were manifested in the near vicinity of this place. The writer was informed of it by his grandfather, who came to this part of the country by what was then called the "Buffalo Trace" almost identical with the "Old State Road" to Lexington. He came here during a drought and springs were found along the route which their cattle perishing for water, refused to drink, and whose owners named all such springs as "poisoned springs." They were filled up in the course of time and very few persons can remember where they were located. Two were remembered as being near Walton.

Experts, who have examined the country around here are unanimous in the opinion that a fine quality of oil would be reached at a depth of 1400 ft.

The dining room was artistically arranged, and lavishly decorated with Smylax and roses. In the center of the table stood a pyramid of tropical fruits, decorated with bridal roses and ferns. The elegant dinner was served in five courses, consisting of all the delicacies of the season. Forty guests partook of the feast, and yet there was enough for forty more. While at Constance, one day last week, Andy Smith was telling us of a remarkable escape from drowning that Sim Tanner had experienced the day before. He and Sim were trying to land a section of some up the river railroad that had washed out by the flood. Andy was using the oars and Sim had fastened onto a tie with his pike pole. Somehow his pole slipped, precipitating him head foremost overboard into forty foot water. The momentum he received when he fell out of the skiff, sent him to the bottom. Being a man of great presence of mind, he concluded he would change ends and come up as he went down. He had not much more than turned to come up when he espied a monstrous fish of some species, with three glaring eyes with its mouth open, making towards him. Being an expert swimmer and having retained his pike pole, he fought it off until he reached the surface, when he called to Andy to look out. Andy pulled to his assistance, and luckily he did, as Sim was nearly exhausted and the fish had him at his mercy. Andy took in the situation at a glance and seeing the monster, struck it with his oar, disabling it so that Sim, with the assistance rendered, got in the skiff. Andy thinks the blow he gave it caused its death, as the bloody trail left on the water was visible for a mile below, when it dis appeared. He regrets very much that he failed to secure it as he is satisfied that it is a new species not seen in these waters before the 20th century.

Pete Fox has, at the risk of his own life, saved no less than 25 persons from drowning. He deserves a gold medal.

V. Weir's son got a bug in his ear, from which he suffered very much until the intruder was removed by Dr. Murat.

Will Riddell, of Lexington, passed through here, last Saturday, enroute to his parents, who reside a couple of miles out in the highlands.

IDLEWILD.—Atty. Roswell Walton, of Chicago, is now visiting his old home, and enjoying the society of his kindred.

John Jones has moved to the B. R. Gaines farm, vacated by C. A. Gaines.

Last Monday Hon. N. S. Walton and wife spent the day with F. P. Walton and wife in Norwood, Ohio.

Bullittsville and vicinity have been under great excitement because of two reported cases of small-pox.

We are sorry to say Bufford Terrill leaves this week for Illinois to seek his fortune. We wish him success.

POINT PLEASANT.—Again is this community bowed in sorrow over the death of another loved one, Mrs. Orie Russell Riggs, who died April 28, at 8 p. m., loved by old and young alike. She will be sadly missed, not only by the members of her immediate family, but by all who knew her. She had long been an active member of the church, the C. W. M. and the C. E. Societies, in each of which she was ever ready to bear her part of the work. Bright, cheerful and pleasant, she was the life of every social gathering of which she was a member. But as some flowers show their bloom and fragrance only for a day, so her fair young life came quickly to a close, and she passed into that Great Uuknown to join the "The Choir Invisible." Funeral services at the Point Pleasant church by Rev. Jones, Thursday, April 30th at 2 p. m.

Geo Ossman of Beaver is done planting corn.

Fought for His Life.

"My father and sister both died of Consumption," writes J. T. Weatherwax, of Wyandotte, Mich., "and I was saved from the same frightful fate only by Dr. King's New Discovery. An attack of Pneumonia left an obstinate cough and very severe lung trouble, which an excellent doctor could not help, but a few months' use of this wonderful medicine made me as well as ever and I gained much in weight." Infallible for Coughs, Colds and all Throat and Lung trouble. Trial bottles free. Guaranteed bottles 50c and $1 at W. F. McKim's; Union Drug Store of Union; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; H. L. Eskew's, Walton; O. N. Grant, Graut.

What does free turnp'kes mean? Weigh it well with your judgment. It means to patronize the trust companies. It means to bond the county and for some moneyed politician to place his surplus in county bonds where his money will be safe with interest. It means from about 80 cents to $1 on the $100 to keep them up. It means a heavy tax against the poor as well as the rich, because the farmers' tax would be much higher than now, and he would have to add a little more to the rent of his land. The landlord's taxes are raised, compelling him to increase the rent on his house, and the poor man who works for his daily bred, must pay more rent to help keep pikes for those who have nothing else to do but ride around. It means an imposition on the principle of Democracy, and would not and could not be equal to all alike. The toll gate equalizes man's rights, because he can pay as much or as little as he chooses, which can be the only fair and just way for pikes. J. E. HALL.

Shudders At His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by W. F. McKim; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner, Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. Grant, Grant.

A good congregation was present at Sunday morning's services at both the Baptist and Methodist churches. There were no services at the Baptist church at night, all attending the Methodist church, and hearing an excellent sermon by Elder Pollitt. The singing, led by Rev. Cook was enjoyed by every person in the large congregation.

Special Telephone from Limaburg.

This neighborhood was shocked Monday about 11 a. m., by the announcement that Ephraim J. Utz, one of our wealthiest citizens, had dropped dead while standing in his barn door conversing with a couple of neighbors. Mr. Utz remarked, "I am going to fall," which he did and expired immediately. His wife had just gone to the kitchen door to call him to dinner. He had not been ill, and his death is attributed to heart disease, to which he had for some time believed he was subject, although a perfect picture of health. The deceased was 61 years old and was a son of the late John E. Utz. His wife was a sister of John P. Utz, of this place. To them were born no children. Mr. Utz was one of the directors of the Boone County Deposit Bank, and had been since January 1, 1895. The funeral services will be conducted at the Hopeful church today at 2 p. m. He will be missed greatly in this neighborhood, being a good neighbor and of a most genial disposition.

A CARD.—To those who were so kind and expressed their friendship in so many ways during the last sickness and death of our loved one, Richard S. Ryle, we wish to express our heartfelt gratitude. May the Master raise up for you such friends as you have been to us if ever so dark an hour shall cast its shadow over you.

THE ANT'S WISDOM.

Useful Lessons We May Learn from the Little Insect.

Dr. Talmage Draws an Interesting Sermon from a Realm Seldom Utilized for Moral or Religious Purposes.

(Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.)

Washington, April 28.—In this discourse Dr. Talmage draws his illustrations from a realm seldom utilized for moral and religious purposes; text, Proverbs, vi., 6-8, "Go to the ant, thou sluggard, consider her ways and be wise, which, having no guide, overseer or ruler, provideth her meat in the summer and gathereth her food in the harvest."

The most of Solomon's writings have perished. They have gone out of existence as thoroughly as the 20 books of Pliny and most of the books of Aeschylus and Euripides and Varro and Quintilian. Solomon's Song and Ecclesiastes and Proverbs, preserved by inspiration, are a small part of his voluminous productions. He was a great scientist. One verse in the Bible suggests that he was a botanist, a zoologist, an ornithologist, an ichthyologist and knew all about reptilia. I. Kings iv., 33, "He spake of trees, from the cedar tree that is in Lebanon even unto the hyssop that springeth out of the wall; he spake also of beasts and of fowl and of creeping things and of fishes." Besides all these scientific works, he composed 3,000 proverbs and 1,005 songs.

Although Solomon lived long before the microscope was constructed, he was also an insectologist and watched and describes the spider build its suspension bridge of silk from tree to tree, calling it the spider's web, and he notices its skillful foothold in climbing the smooth wall of the throneroom in Jerusalem, saying: "The spider taketh hold with her hands and is in king's palaces." But he is especially interested in the ant and recommends its habits as worthy of study and imitation, saying: "Go to the ant, thou sluggard, consider her ways and be wise, which, having no guide, overseer or ruler, provideth her meat in the summer and gathereth her food in the harvest."

But it was not until about 300 years ago, when Jan Swammerdam, the son of an apothecary at Amsterdam, Holland, began the study of the ant under powerful lens that the full force of Solomon's injunction was understood. The great Dutch scientist, in his examination of the insect in my text, discovered as great a display of the wisdom of God in its anatomy as astronomers discover in the heavens, and was so absorbed and wrought upon by the wonders he discovered in the ant and other insects that body and mind gave way, and he expired at 43 years of age, a martyr of the great science of insectology.

No one but God could have fashioned the insect spoken of in the text or given it such genius of instinct, its wisdom for harvesting at the right time, its wonders of antennae, by which it gathers food, and of mandibles, which, instead of the motion of the human jaw up and down in mastication, move from side to side; its nervous system, its enlarging doors in hot weather for more sweep of breeze, its mode of attack and defense, closing the gate at night against bandit invaders; its purification of the earth for human residence, its social life, its republican government, with its consent of the governed; its maternal fidelities, the habit of these creatures of gathering now and then under the dome of the ant hillock, seemingly in consultation, and then departing to execute their different missions.

But Solomon would not commend all the habits of the ant, for some of them are as bad as some of the habits of the human race. Some of these small creatures are desperadoes and murderers. Now and then they marshal themselves into hosts and march in straight line and come upon an encampment of their own race and destroy its occupants, except the young, whom they carry into captivity, and if the army come back without any such captives they are not permitted to enter, but are sent forth to make more successful conquest. Solomon gives no commendation to such sanguinary behavior among insects any more than he would have commended sanguinary behavior among men. These little creatures have sometimes wrought fearful damage, and they have undermined a town in New Granada, which in time may drop into the abyss they have dug for it.

But what are the habits which Solomon would enjoin when he says: "Consider her ways and be wise?" First of all, providence, forethought, anticipation of coming necessities. I am sorry to say these qualities are not characteristic of all ants. These creatures of God are divided into carnivorous and carnivorous. The latter are not frugal, but the former are frugal. While the air is warm and moving about is not hindered by ice or snowbank, they import their cargoes of food. They bring in their caravan of provisions; they haul in their long train of wheat or corn or oats. The farmers are not more busy in July and August in reaping their harvest than are the ants busy in July and August reaping their harvest. They stack them away; they pile them up. They question when they have enough. They aggregate a sufficient amount to last them until the next warm season. When winter opens, they are ready. Blow, ye wintry blasts! Hang your icicles from the tree branches! Imbed all the highways under snowdrifts! Enough for all the denizens of the hills. Hunger shut out, and plenty sits within. God, who feedeth every living thing, has blessed the ant hill.

In contrast with that insectile behavior, what do you think of that large number of prosperous men and women who live up to every dollar that they make, raising their families in luxurious habits and at death expecting some kind friend to give their daughters employment as music teachers or typewriters or government employes? Such parents have no right to children. Every neighborhood has specimens of such improvidence. The two words that most strike me in the text are "summer" and "winter." Some people have no summer in their lives. From the rocking cradle to the still grave it is relentless January. Invalid infancy followed by some crippling accident or dimness of eyesight or dullness of hearing or privation or disaster or unfortunate environment make life a perpetual winter. But in most lives there is a period of summer, although it may be a short summer, and that is the time to provide for the future.

One of the best ways of insuring the future is to put aside all you can for charitable provision. You put a crumbling stone in the foundation of your fortune if you do not in your plans regard the sufferings that you may alleviate. You will have the pledge of the high heavens for your temporal welfare when you help the helpless, for the promise is: "Blessed is he that considereth the poor. The Lord will deliver him in time of trouble." Then there is another way of providing for the future. If you have $1,000 a year income, save $100; or $2,000 a year, save $500; or $3,000, save $1,000. Do you say such economy is meanness? I say it is a vaster meanness for you to make no provision for the future and compel your friends or the world to take care of you or yours in case of bereavement or calamity.

Going out of this world without leaving a dollar for those who remain behind, if you have done your best you have a right to put your head in calm confidence on the pillow which Jeremiah shook up in the forty-ninth chapter of his prophecy: "Leave thy fatherless children, I will preserve them alive, and let thy widows trust in me." But if having the means through mortgages or houses or life insurance for providing for helpless widowhood and orphanage you make no provision for post mortem need, how dare you go and take a palace in Heaven and let your wife and children go to the poorhouse or into a struggle for bread that makes life a horror and sometimes ends in suicide?

But my subject reaches higher than temporalities — foresight for the soul, provision for eternal experiences, preparation for the far beyond. Ant hills, speak out and teach us a larger and mightier lesson of preparing food for the more important part of us! Do you realize that a man may be a millionaire or a multimillionaire for time and a bankrupt for eternity, a prince for a few years and a pauper forever? The ant would not be satisfied with gathering enough food for half a winter or quarter of a winter. But how many of us seem content, though not having prepared for the ten-millionth part of what will be our existence? Put yourself in right relations to the Christ of the ages, through Him seek pardon for all you have ever done wrong and strength for all you will be called to endure, and there will be no force in life or death or eternity to discomfit you. I declare it! There is enough of transforming and strengthening power in Christ for both hemispheres.

Furthermore, go to the ant and consider that it does not decline work because it is insignificant. The fragment of seed it hauls into its habitation may be so small that the unaided eye cannot see it, but the insectile work goes on, the carpenter ant at work above ground, the mason ant at work underground. Some of these creatures mix the leaves of the fir and the catkins of the pine for the roof or wall of their tiny abode, and others go out as hunters looking for food, while others in domestic duties stay at home. Twenty specks of the food they are moving toward their granary put on a balance would hardly make the scales quiver. All of it work on a small scale. There is no use in our refusing a mission because it is insignificant. Anything that God in His providence puts before us to do is important. The needle has its office as certainly as the telescope and the spade as a parliamentarian scroll.

There is no need of our wasting time and energy in longing for some other sphere. There are plenty of people to do the big and resounding work of the church and the world. No lack of brigadier generals or master builders or engineers for bridging Niagaras or tunneling Rocky mountains. For every big enterprise of the world a dozen candidates. What we want is private soldiers in the common ranks, masons not ashamed to wield a trowel, candidates for ordinary work to be done in ordinary ways in ordinary places. Right where we are there is something that God would have us do. Let us do it, though it may seem to be as unimportant as the rolling of a grain or corn into an ant hill.

Furthermore, go to the ant and consider its indefatigableness. If by the accidental stroke of your foot or the removal of a timber the cities of the insectile world are destroyed, instantly they go to rebuilding. They do not sit around moping. At it again in a second. Their fright immediately gives way to their industry. And if our schemes of usefulness and our plans of work fail, why sit down in discouragement? As large ant hills as have ever been constructed will be constructed again. Put your trust in God and do your duty, and your best days are yet to come. You have never heard such songs as you will yet hear, nor have you ever lived in such grand abode as you will yet occupy, and all the worldly treasures you have lost are nothing compared with the opulence that you will yet own. If you love and trust the Lord, Paul looks you in the face and then waves his hand toward a Heaven full of palaces and thrones, saying: "All are yours!" So that what you fail to get in this present life you will get in the coming life. Go to work right away and rebuild as well as you can, knowing that what the trowels of earthly industry fail to rear the scepters of heavenly reward will more than make up. Persistence is the lesson of every ant hill. Waste not a moment in useless regrets or unhealthy repining. Men fret themselves down, but no man ever yet fretted himself up. Make the obstacles in your way your coadjutors, as all those have who have accomplished anything worth accomplishment.

Furthermore, go to the ant and learn the lesson of God-appointed order. The being who taught the insect how to build was geometer as well as architect. The paths inside that little home radiate from the door with as complete arrangement as ever the boulevards of a city radiated from a triumphal arch or a flowered circle. And when they march they keep perfect order, moving in straight lines, turning out for nothing. If a timber lie in the way, they climb over it. If there be house or barn in the way, they march through it. Order in architectural structure, order in government, order of movement, order of expedition. So let us all observe this God-appointed rule and take satisfaction in the fact that things are not at loose ends in this world. If there is a Divine regulation in a colony or republic of insects, is there not a Divine regulation in the lives of immortal men and women? If God cares for the least of His creatures and shows them how to provide their meat in the summer and gather their food in the harvest, will He not be interested in matters of human livelihood and in the guidance of human affairs? I preach the doctrine of a particular Providence. "Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing, and yet not one of them is forgotten before God? Are ye not of more value than many sparrows?" Let there be order in our individual lives, order in the family, order in the church, order in the state. In all the world there is no room for anarchy.

But we live in times when there are so many clashings. There seems almost universal unrest. Large fortunes swallow up small fortunes. Civilized nations trying to gobble up barbaric nations. Upheaval of creeds and people who once believed everything now believing nothing. The old book that Moses began and St. John ended bombarded from scientific observatories and college classrooms. Amid all this disturbance and uncertainty that which many good people need is not a stimulus, but a sedative, and in my text I find it—Divine observation and guidance of minutest affairs. And nothing is to God large or small—planet or ant hill—the God who easily made the worlds employing His infinity in the wondrous construction of a spider's foot.

But before we leave this subject let us thank God for those who are willing to endure the fatigues and self-sacrifices necessary to make revelation of the natural world, so reenforcing the Scriptures. If the microscope could speak, what a story it could tell of hardship and poverty and suffering and perseverance on the part of those who employed it for important discovery! It would tell of the divided eyes of M. Strauss, of the Hubers and of scores of those who, after inspecting the minute objects of God's creation, staggered out from their cabinets with vision destroyed. This hour in many a professor's study the work of putting eyesight on the altar of science is going on. And what greater loss can one suffer than the loss of eyesight unless it be loss of reason? While the telescope is revealing farther worlds, both are exclaiming: "There is a God, and He is infinitely wise and infinitely good! Worship Him and worship Him forever!"

And now I bethink myself of the fact that we are close to a season of the year which will allow us to be more out of doors and to confront the lessons of the natural world, and there are voices that seem to say: "Go to the ant; go to the bird; go to the flowers; go to the fields; go to the waters." Listen to the cantatas that drop from the gallery of the tree tops. Notice in the path where you walk the lessons of industry and Divine guidance. Make natural religion a commentary on revealed religion. Put the glow of sunrise and sunset into your spiritual experiences. Let every star speak of the morning star of the Redeemer, and every aromatic bloom make you think of Him who is the Rose of Sharon and the Lily of the Valley, and every overhanging cliff remind you of the Rock of Ages, and every morning suggest the "daysspring from on high, which giveth light to those who are in darkness," and even the little hillock built by the roadside or in the fields reminds you of the wisdom of imitating in temporal and spiritual things the insectile forethought, "which having no guide, overseer or ruler, provideth her meat in the summer and gathereth her food in the harvest."

How Could He, Indeed.

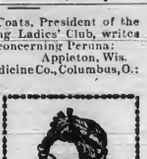
He—Well, how am I going to know you if I don't speak to you?—Town Topics.

SPRING CATARRH MAKES PEOPLE WEAK AND NERVOUS.

MISS ANNA BRYAN, OF WASHINGTON, D. C.

Miss Anna Bryan, a favorite cousin of William Jennings Bryan, is well known socially in Washington, D. C., where she has a host of friends. Miss Bryan recently studied music at Fairmount Seminary, of Washington, D. C. In a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Co., of Columbus, Ohio, she says:

1459 Florida Avenue, N. W., Washington, D. C.



The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—"At the solicitation of a friend I began some weeks ago to take your Peruna and I now feel like a new person. I take pleasure in recommending it to all who want a good tonic and a permanent cure for catarrh."—Anna Bryan.

MRS. BERTHA KOCKLER, 177 Guinett street, Brooklyn, N. Y., writes:

"Peruna and Manalin have done me very great service, and I recommend them with pleasure to all who suffer with nervous catarrh of the stomach as I did. Should such a disease ever attack me again I shall immediately take Peruna. I now feel very well and have a good appetite all the time. I have gained in weight. I recommended Peruna to an acquaintance of ours and he is making remarkable progress. I looked so badly for a time before I began your medicine, that now when I meet some of my friends they say: 'I was very much worried about you, but now you are looking so well.' I shall always keep Peruna and Manalin in the house as family medicines."—Mrs. Bertha Kockler.

Thousands of Fair Women Are Never Without Pe-ru-na The National Catarrh Remedy.

Miss Marie Coats.

Appleton, Wis.

The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen—

"I find Peruna an excellent spring and summer medicine and am glad to call the attention of my friends to it. When that languid, tired feeling comes over you, and your food no longer tastes good, and small annoyances irritate you, Peruna will make you feel like another person inside of a week. I have now used it for three seasons and find it very reliable and efficacious."—Marie Coats.

Mrs. Al. Wetzel, 21 South 17th street, Terre Haute, Ind., writes:

"Peruna is the greatest medicine on earth. I feel well and that tired feeling is all gone. When I began to take your medicine I could not smell nor hear a church bell ring. Now I can smell and hear. When I began your treatment my head was terrible, all sorts of buzzing, chirping and loud noises. Three months ago I dragged around like a snail; now I can walk as briskly as ever. I am going to go and see the doctor that said I was not long for this world, and tell him that Peruna cured me."—Mrs. Al. Wetzel.

If all the tired women and all the nervous women, and all the women that needed a tonic would read and heed the words of these three fair ladies who have spoken right to the point, how many invalids would be prevented and how many wretched lives be made happy.

Peruna restores health in a normal way.

Peruna puts right all the mucous membranes of the body, and in this way restores the functions of every organ.

If it is the stomach that is out of order, and the digestion impaired, Peruna quickly makes things right by restoring the mucous membrane of the stomach.

If the nerves tingle, if the brain is tired, if the strength is flagging and the circulation of blood weakened by flabby mucous membranes of the digestive organs, Peruna reaches the spot at once by giving to these membranes the vitality and activity which belongs to them.

The pelvic organs are also lined with mucous membrane which in the female sex is especially liable to derangements. Peruna is an absolute specific in these cases. The women everywhere are praising it. No other remedy has ever received such unqualified praise from such a multitude of women.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, O.

SECRETARY FOR COLONIES.

Promoters and Syndicates "Fixing" to Get Things Under Their Control.

The reports which are proceeding from Washington regarding the future of government in the Philippines plainly carry with them the earmarks of their administration origin. Read between the lines they reveal possible changes of far-reaching significance in the prevailing notions as to the division of powers among the several departments of the federal government.

From time to time we have heard suggestions offered of new departments to be added to those existing, and represented in the cabinet councils of the president. But the only addition made to the established divisions since the foundation of the government has been that of secretary of agriculture. The elaboration of the statements of the administration officials involved in so-called press dispatches as to the needs of the government of the Philippines leave little doubt that there is in process of incubation a scheme to spring a new federal secretary on the country and establish a new department of federal government.

The war department has now sole control of the details of administration at Manila. There is the Taft commission, of course, but—up to within a few days nobody paid the slightest attention to that administration tender. Since Gen. Funston brought the Philippine insurrection to a virtual close the Taft commission looms up into prominence, and with it the question of the enduring basis on which the conduct of the Philippine affairs shall be handled from Washington. If there is no war there can be no use for the war department in connection with the affairs of the Tagalogs and the other of our political brethren in the east.

What then can be more rational than the creation of a colonial secretary? They have one in England, you know, and he is by no means a small administrative potato. If we have to indulge ourselves in the possession of colonies, we will necessarily need a colonial secretary in our business. This is evidently the covert reasoning of our rulers. They are plainly not yet in a position to show their hands; and so, the enormity of having the business of such a vast aggregation of new lands as the Philippines managed from the war department after peace has been declared is forcing itself on the official mind with terrible pressure.

While the plans are being laid for this new evolution in American constitutional government it might be worth the while of our great men at Washington to reflect that the little operations carried on some time in the direction of "fixing" the supreme court by the appointment of those in whom the members of that court have a natural interest, may not prove as successful as some are disposed to anticipate. It is still among the possibilities that in spite of the promoters and their syndicates the Philippines and Porto Rico may be found to be in precisely the same constitutional classification as the Hawaiian islands, and entitled to have their governors appointed otherwise than under the exercise of the dictatorial powers conferred on the president in connection with the government of those places.—St. Paul Globe.

A DESPOTIC SYSTEM.

Acts of United States Military Officers That Are Worse Than Imperialistic.

The World does not believe that this country is in any danger of imperialism—that is, if the word is used in its strict sense, meaning a system or state of imperial government. It is impossible to conceive of the United States as anything but a republic in the fullest sense of the word.

But it must be admitted that acts of purely despotic power committed by military officers of the United States are becoming too common—and, what is worse, receive neither rebuke nor punishment from the president, who is sworn to uphold the constitution, with all its guarantees of personal liberty and of freedom of speech and of the press.

It is a fact that Gen. MacArthur deported from the Philippines a citizen of the United States and suppressed his newspaper for printing a criticism of the administration of the customs service at Manila which the present exposure of frauds there more than justifies.

It is a fact that Gov. Gen. Wood, of the army in Cuba, shut up and sealed a newspaper office without trial, simply by his personal edict, because it printed a cartoon which was personally offensive to him.

It is a fact that Gov. Gen. Wood, by another edict, imprisoned two editors because he thought they had published a libel.

We venture to say that with all the outrageous acts of the imperial government against the freedom of the press in Germany, and on account of lese majeste, Kaiser Wilhelm has never dared to disregard all phases of the law and justice and all respect for public opinion as flagrantly as Gen. Wood has done in these cases.

And yet it is often said that the emperor is crazy! And yet Cuba is held, by a sacred pledge of congress unanimously passed, to be "free and independent!"—N. Y. World.

——The men in the steel trust absolutely control, through that influence and others allied with it, the republican party, and so long as the republican party remains in charge of the government they will lose neither dividends nor sleep.—Atlanta Constitution.

IMPERIALISM AND SUGAR.

Protectionists Who Are Opposed to the Annexation of Cuba, and Why.

There seem to be some powerful influences at work against the threatened annexation of Cuba—and they are influences with which we are all familiar. The New York Press, which holds the record as the most passionate protectionist publication in this country, if not in the world, expresses the opinion that the annexation of Cuba would be fatal to our protected sugar interests. Commenting on a statement in a census bulletin that "beet sugar manufacture is a commercial success in the United States," the Press declares:

"This settles the larger part of our tropical and colonial questions. It prohibits the annexation of Cuba to the United States. It bans the abhorrent bargain which the Planters' society seeks to make of the exchange of political freedom for commercial monopoly. There will be no reduction of 50 per cent. or any per cent. of the United States tariff on the chief Cuban products."

We can think of nothing that would do more to check the expansion movement than a decision of the supreme court that the American tariff extended throughout the length and breadth of any territory subject to the jurisdiction of this government. The fight for a tariff on imports into this country from Porto Rico was made by men interested in sugar and tobacco, who feared not merely free trade with Porto Rico, but the probability of free trade with the Philippines. And if these gentlemen find that we cannot hold territory and at the same time maintain discriminating tariffs against the people occupying that territory, they will promptly join forces with the Boston anti-imperialists. It is, therefore, clear that the tariff question is going to give us a good deal of trouble in the work of carrying our civilizing influence around the world. We shall have to consider, not simply the welfare of the people to whom we propose to minister, and that of the people of the United States generally, but also that of those on whose benefit we so cheerfully tax ourselves. Thus the collision between our protected interests and the expansion sentiment may have very interesting consequences.

One other thought in this connection is important. Many people argue that it is not worth while to discriminate in favor of the beet sugar interest because it is so insignificant. They hold that it is not established and that it has small prospect of ever being established. Their theory is that protection should be granted only in cases where a new industry can be "created" within a reasonable time. On the other hand, we are now told that the manufacture of beet sugar is already "a commercial success in the United States." And from this the conclusion is drawn that we must protect it. Of course, we understand that the theory is that an industry may not be established strongly enough to resist foreign competition. But the time never comes when the men engaged in a protected industry will admit that it is established beyond the need of further protecting care. In the present case we have it argued that the beet sugar industry ought not to be protected because it is not established, and that it ought to be protected because it is established! We shall look forward with great pleasure to the impending struggle between the McKinley protectionists and the McKinley expansionists. Out of it may come a more rational tariff system in this country, and a wise withdrawal from the attempt to govern distant peoples who ought, as far as we are concerned, to be allowed to govern themselves.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

PRESS COMMENTS.

This spring's elections look as if the people are planning to give their faithful republican servants a little outing in the near future.—Albany Argus.

——After all, isn't it quite an American trait in Cuba to insist upon having her own opinion as to the best tonics for her own constitution?—N. Y. World.

——Mark Hanna is doing the talking for McKinley just as prominently in the new administration as the old. It may be a habit of which he cannot rid himself.—Concord Patriot.

——There is evident a break in the republican ranks on the tariff question, and it promises to become wider. Will the president be hoist with his own petard?—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——The deaths, the famine, the impoverishment that prevail among the Porto Ricans are unanswerable protests against the un-American, heartless, selfish policy of imperialism.—Kansas City Times.

——President McKinley should send a special commissioner to Aguinaldo to get him right on the tariff question and trusts before he gets sufficiently familiar with American affairs to want to talk.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

——The truth of the matter is, no one knows the truth about the situation in the Philippines save those interested in exploiting the islands and making the taxpayers of this country foot the bills. The people who pay the expenses are kept in ignorance by working on their partisan prejudices.—Omaha World-Herald.

——Some people criticise the president for putting a trust attorney into an office in which his chief duty will be to enforce the laws against trusts, but this is a superficial view of the subject. It would be absurd to have an anti-trust attorney general. In a trust administration and Mr. McKinley deserves credit for his consistency.—N. Y. Journal.

MRS. JOHN A. LOGAN EXPLAINS

Mrs. John A. Logan was shown the different criticisms which have been made regarding the figures on the pedestal of the monument which has just been dedicated. When the pedestal was first put up, the fact was pointed out that the senators represented in the group were not all in the senate at the same time, or at least were not there when Logan took the oath. These criticisms have been repeated since the dedication of the monument, and have caused considerable mortification to Mrs. Logan, because it was made to appear that she either willfully or ignorantly had attempted to falsify the history of the senate. In explanation she said:

"It was not intended to represent any particular session of the senate, but rather Gen. Logan's associates in the senate during his 16 years of service in that body. It affects the correctness of history in no way, as he was a senator while Vice President Arthur presided, and he served with each of the senators in the bas-relief. Senator Miller was a soldier and lost an eye at Ferryville, hence his selection. Each had won distinction in the United States senate, and all are worthy of the places given them.

"I cannot see that violence has been done anyone, or that the criticism is of any importance. I think the success of the sculptor in the execution of the design suggested to him by me, and the fact that there is one great statue at the capital of the nation that fittingly illustrates the unique character of Gen. Logan as soldier and statesman, should silence such petty criticism."

BIG GUN ON KEARSARGE.

Damaged Beyond Repair and Must Be Removed and New Gun Put in Its Place.

It has been found necessary to remove the 13-inch gun from the Kearsarge. This gun, which was emplaced in one of the turrets of this battleship, was seriously injured some weeks ago. At the time an effort was made to have the accident appear of little consequence. Since then, however, it has developed that the gun cannot be repaired. It is practically destroyed, and will have to be replaced.

Bids for the forgings for this gun have been invited by the navy department. It probably will be the last gun of the type built for the navy, as 13-inch guns are no longer to be a part of naval ordnance.

The loss is a heavy one, and while the new gun is being constructed the double turrets, the lower one of which contained the damaged one, will be practically useless.

NEW ENGINE INVENTED.

Mechanic at Des Moines, Ia., Claims to Have Discovered a Novel Principle.

An invention has been made by L. Kessler, a mechanic of Des Moines, Ia., which, if the claims of its author are realized, is destined to revolutionize the manufacture of steam engines. The principle has not been applied to an engine of any large power as yet, but the inventor holds that it will be successful, no matter to what style of an engine it is applied. The new engine works on the vacuum principle, and uses the same water over and over again. It has no steam chest, or, rather, both the steam chest and boiler are combined in one. There being no exhaust, the same water is used as many times as desired, being converted into steam and condensed, then reconverted into steam and recondensed, and so on ad infinitum.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease, and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials. Address F. J. The Prose and the Poetry.

The young bride who reads with a proud thrill "she swept up the aisle on her father's arm" never thinks of the after days when she will sweep up the kitchen and dining-room floors and not get even a mention in the society columns.—Kansas City Editor.

Wonderful.

Yes, and more than wonderful; one might say "most wonderful" when speaking of Palmer's Vegetable Cosmetic Lotion, which, for over fifty years, has been the standard preparation for the skin. Mr. Joseph Jukat, of Cincinnati, Ohio, wrote: "Your Lotion has cured me of a very annoying face eruption, with which I have been troubled for a long time. It is a wonderful medicine." This testimony is echoed by all who have used this great healer and beautifier and none fail to praise it and recommend its use. If your druggist hasn't it, send to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl Street, New York, for samples of Palmer's Lotion and Lotion Soap.

Are You Going Abroad?

If you are going abroad be sure to select the Lackawanna Railroad as your route East. The terminus of that line is within two blocks of the docks of the ocean liners operated by the Cunard, Hamburg-American, White Star, North German Lloyd, Netherlands American, American, Red Star and French Lines. To the traveler, often encumbered with luggage and accompanied by his family, the advantage of landing so near his point of embarkation is at once apparent. Not only is the Lackawanna Railroad the most convenient line to the piers of the great Transatlantic Steamers, but the comfort of its patrons is the special care of a Steamship Agent who will be found on the docks of all the principal lines. From Chicago fast through trains are run daily in connection with the Nickel Plate offering a service unsurpassed in luxury and convenience. From St. Louis there is also a thrice daily service in connection with the Wabash Railroad.

"Now Dont Get the Blues."

When a cheerful, brave and light-hearted woman is suddenly plunged into that perfection of misery, the blues, it is a sad picture.

It is usually this way:

She has been feeling out of sorts for some time, experiencing severe headache and backache; sleeps very poorly and is exceedingly nervous.

Sometimes she is nearly overcome by faintness, dizziness, and palpitation of the heart; then that bearing-down feeling is dreadfully wearing.

Her husband says, "Now, don't get the blues! You will be all right after you have taken the doctor's medicine."

But she does not get all right. She grows worse day by day, until all at once she realizes that a distressing female complaint is established.

Her doctor has made a mistake.

She loses faith; hope vanishes; then comes the morbid, melancholy, everlasting blues. She should have been told just what the trouble was, but probably she withheld some information from the doctor, who, therefore, is unable to accurately locate her particular illness.

Mrs. Pinkham has relieved thousands of women from just this kind of trouble, and now retains their grateful letters in her library as proof of the great assistance she has rendered them. This same assistance awaits every sick woman in the land.

Mrs. Winifred Allender's Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I feel it my duty to write and tell you of the benefit I have received from your wonderful remedies. Before taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I was a misery to myself and every one around me. I suffered terrible pain in my back, head, and right side, was very nervous, would cry for hours. Menses would appear sometimes in two weeks, then again not for three or four months. I was so tired and weak, could not sleep nights, sharp pains would dart through my heart that would almost cause me to fall.

"My mother coaxed me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I had no faith in it, but to please her I did so. The first bottle helped me so much that I continued its use. I am now well and weigh more than I ever did in my life."—MRS. WINIFRED ALLENDER, Farmington, Ill.

$5000 REWARD Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, Mass., $5,000, which will be paid to any person who can show that the above testimonial is not genuine or was published before obtaining the writer's special permission.—LYDIA E. Old Soldier's Experience.

M. M. Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." They always do. Try them. Only 25c at W. F. McKim; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner's, Florence; H. L. Eskew's, Walton; O. N. Grant's, Grant.

An exchange strikes its poetic harp in the following: Sing ho for the Kentucky cow, sing hi for the little brown hen, such a couple was never on earth below to feather the nest of men. With the product of good Queen Bess no udder can compare, while the snowy fruit of the cackling beaut brings a solace for every care. Men risk their lives for the golden ore laid deep in a frozen clime, when these faithful servants bring them more and peace at the self-same time. With pasture in plenty and bugs galore they'll never lack for feed; their stock is at par at the grocery store for the things the farmers need. Then three times three for the female fowl; at the farmers door they feed before no wolf has a chance to howl. No poet's dream ever hatched a theme more worthy of a poet's pen than the kindly queen of the pasture green and the busy cackling hen.

BRADFORD BROS.,
FLORENCE, - - KENTUCKY.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotler steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rises good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cotton wood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 8, 1901. NO. 29.

THE RECORDER will not curtail its local or neighborhood news on account of advertisements.

THE Tennessee Senate, after a lengthy trial, acquitted Senator Eldridge of the charge of accepting a bribe of $150 for his vote. Bribery ought to be made a capital offense on the part of public officials.

THE fight for Internal Revenue collector in this district has been transferred to Washington, at which place delegations of visiting statesmen from Kentucky frequently appear in behalf of some one of the applicants for the position.

IT is claimed that another gold field has been discovered in Kentucky. This most recent discovery of that metal is in Hardin county, and it is said it will assay $22 to the ton. Hardin county people are very much excited over the discovery.

A constable succeeded in serving on Gen. Cassius M. Clay a writ of attachment on his bank account $1,200 in favor of his daughter, Mary B. Clay, which amount is alleged to be the value of her household goods which the General refuses to surrender.

KENTUCKY got fourteen of the 588 appointments of First and Second Lieutenants in the regular army, made by the President just previous to his departure on his trip west. Kentucky certainly has no grounds for complaint against President McKinley in this matter.

President McKinley says "we have never gone to war for conquest, for exploitation or for territory, but always for liberty and humanity." At the same time the dispatches were bringing news of the surrender of Filipino officers and the completion of our subjugation of the islands.

THE contest for United States Senator on the part of the Democratic party will be no "one hoss" affair in this State There are now five candidates announced, Hon. I. H. Goodnight, of Franklin, being the latest announced. From this array of talent the party will make no mistake in a choice.

THE Republicans at Frankfort are raising a great howl because President McKinley has not removed the postmaster at that place. The Western Argus says: "President McKinley owes very little to the Republican party in this district. In other words, he is on to their tricks, and he is well informed of their changeable moves."

SENATOR DEBOE'S action in the District Judgeship incurred for him the displeasure of ex-Governor Bradley's close political friends, and now they are perfecting an organization to defeat Deboe in his aspirations for a reelection. But on that proposition they need give themselves no concern as the Democrats will attend to that little matter in due time.

THE trail of Capt. Reed, of the Commissary Department at Manila, for receiving bribes from contractors. has developed an ugly scandal. Reed obtained the tributes on the ground that it was to make good a shortage of Maj. Davis, who was formerly in charge. Lieunt, Townley, of the navy, admitted that he was the go-between in asking the contractors to contribute cash and commission.

Senator Beveridge says that the sacred tariff must be changed "along the lines of international reciprocity" to meet the new conditions of the world; Representative Babcock says that protected trust products must be placed on the free list; the New York Press says that the announcement that beet sugar manufacture is a commercial success in the United States "prohibits the annexation of Cuba" and "commits the Republican party to the exclusion of the Philippines as a part of the Union, even if a necessary consequence is their renunciation as a possession." Evidently the Republican party has plenty of work before it in finding a tariff modus vivendi for itself.—C.-J.

Farm, Stock and Crop.

The United States has 38,000,000 pigs, a number equal to the combined stocks of Russia, Germany, Austria and the British Isles.

Fine cattle are bringing big prices, a recent sale of 143 head of registered Polled Angus averaging $241 a head. This was an Iowa herd.

Farmers in North Middletown and Little Rock neighborhoods have suffered considerably from the recent snow and bad weather. Several have lost sheep that had been sheared, lambs have died, mares, colts, cows and calves died from exposure, and several animals drowned in the high water.—Paris Democrat.

Two mammoth steers attracted more attention than any cattle seen on the streets here in years. The two weighed 3,840 pounds—one 1,900 and the other 1,940. They were raised by B. Button, of the Lucas country, who sold them to Harry Lazarus at 5c a pound, or $192 for the pair.—Glasgow Times.

Horses are again coming back in the harness. A big concern in Chicago which invested heavily in all kinds of horseless vehicles to do their transportation have abandoned them and gone back to the horse. What with keeping them in repair and the charges for electricity, they found that the new method cost twice as much as the old method.

Selling grain and hay from the farm in bulk reduces the profit in two ways. It is expensive to handle and haul, and it takes away elements of fertility that should be saved and returned to the soil. Feed hogs, sheep and cattle and so market your product in the most condensed form and in the easiest way, on the hoof, and keep up the land while you are cropping it.

The mougri, or edible podded radish, is a new vegetable from Java which is now recommended by the American Consul in New Zealand, where it has been tried. It is as easily grown as the ordinary radish, producing enormous crops of long pods, which are crisp and tender, with a delicious flavor. Persons who cannot eat the common radish because of its indigestible qualities should hail this new variety with pleasure.

A strange disease has made its appearance among the cattle on the farm of Mr. E. D. Ijames, and already he has lost two fine cows, and others have been attacked with the malady, says the Henderson Journal. A veterinary surgeon visited the farm and pronounced the disease "mad itch." The disease attacks the hoof and causes such intense pain as to drive the animal wild. The cattle remain in this condition for several days when they are taken sick and die. It is said the disease is extremely contagious—Winchester Sun.

The latest and best definition that we have heard of a candidate is "the man who acts for a few months each campaign as every man should act all the time." The relations of a candidate toward the public are certainly ideal, to an extent. He does a kindness wherever and whenever he can, has a kind word and handshake for every man he meets, is good to children, is an optimist, is public spirited, prominent in charitable work, does not take offense at trifles and knows how to smile in the face of calumny and abuse. The lay citizen without political ambition might do well to pattern after the candidate if he has a desire to be a model human being. Just think of the effect on the community and the way the millenium would hustle upward if an ambition of that sort should strike an entire community, county or state.

A man can steal from a bank, a merchant or a corporation, but he can not steal from old mother earth on the farm. The soil may be robbed in a sense by being made to grow worthless products, but the man is never benefitted thereby. A man may beat his neighbors, but he can never beat his farm. It is always and ever true that whatsoever a man soweth that shall he also reap.—Field and Farm.

Mr. Bryan frankly admits that it does not look now like he will be a candidate in 1904.—Atlanta Journal.

We would gently suggest to Fellowcitizen Aguinaldo that he is shouting "amen" too loud.—Baltimore American.

People in the West along the line of the Presidential tour will enjoy the McKinley "ear to the ground."—New York World.

President McKinley's junket indicates that the spring fever can prove irresistible to a President as well as to a tramp.—St. Louis Republic.

Harvard thinks well of the idea of making Mr. McKinley a doctor of laws. The President earned the degree of doctor of tariff laws some time ago.—Chicago Tribune.

If the Courts should decide against Admiral Sampson in the prize money cases they will be sure to get a hard call down from the Bureau of Fabrication.—Washington Post.

One gratifying fact in connection with Mr. J. Pierpont Morgan's investment in the ocean steamship business is that the Government isn't helping him with a subsidy.—Chicago Record Herald.

McKinley has no right to the title doctor of laws. He failed to doctor the Porto Rican tariff law even after he had said it was his plain duty to do so. The laws now are doctored by the trusts.—St. Paul Globe.

An Emphatic Word About Shoes.

Don't wear a shoe that is tight anywhere.

Don't wear a shoe so large that it slips at the heel.

Don't shut up an array of shoes in an air-tight closet.

Don't wear shoes that will not permit the great toe to lie in a straight line.

Don't put away shoes in a dirty condition; wipe them, dress them and store them in an airy closet.

Don't wear one pair of shoes steadily. Two pairs worn alternately will do the work of pairs worn consecutively.

Don't wear a shoe with a sole narrower than the outline of the foot traced with a pencil drawn close under the rounding edge.

Don't wear the top of a boot tight, as it interferes with the action of the calfmuscles, makes one walk awkwardly and causes the ankle to swell.

Mat S. Cohen, of Richmond, shipped last week to the New York market sixteen high-class horses. These horses were bought in this State at prices ranging from $200 to $750.

W. J. Davis, of Muir, has brought on from Boyle county 20 jacks to use and sell next year. He stands some of them at $7. He also has a draft stallion of 1,700-lbs weight which he stands at $10.

More than 2,000,000 feet of lumber in logs came out of Eastern Kentucky during the high tides of this spring. The Kentucky river is a most important thoroughfare just at this time. Over this route thousands of dollars will find their way into the mountains.

W. H. Ford, the well-known horse buyer of Cleveland, O., bought the following fancy horses for good prices at Cynthiana; Pair of black geldings from C. S. Lydick, for $500; a saddle horse from William Adams, at $200; a saddle mare from James W. Renaker, $150; a bay mare from Al Phillips, at $150; brown horse from George England, at $150, and a bay horse from James Jackson, at $100.

There are over 100,000,000 people in China who are engaged in the tea industry, and some of them are very wealthy, though they know little beyond the cultivation, marketing and sale of teas. Many of these tea raisers and tea merchants are members of the secret societies in the empire.

MODERN OLD MAIDS.

Considered as a wife and mother, there is small proof of average superiority in the woman of this century over those of any other century, but looked at as spinters, as "old maids," women have developed within the last 50 years an entirely new and admirable type, owing to the recently acquired freedom and extension of female thought and action.

Formerly the "old maids" was expected to marry anyhow, irrespective of desire. What else was there for her to do? Marriage or superfluity, those were the alternatives placed before her in the cradle. And, true enough, she had small choice of occupations. In America particularly there is now a large body of single women who are delightful people; cultivated without being pedantic; cheerful, but not hysterical; helpful, not officious, and these are not necessarily professional women either. They chiefly belong to a class of cultivated people with comfortable means, inherited by these unmarried women, who, thus provided, can live independently and travel extensively, never once feeling in any one's way or allowing that the mere legal condition of matrimony could in the least dignify their lives—which it certainly could not devoid of marital sentiment. These women are never idle. Their industry competes with that of their professional sisters working for daily bread. They are prime movers socially and charitably.

The opprobrious title of "old maid" loses distinction every day and bids fair to eventually be buried amid the relics of barbarism. Higher education represented by the acquirement of facts has little to do with this improved condition. But the higher education, upon which has been erected a liberal, democratic point of view, may be held reverently responsible for this admirable type of unmated woman.—Anna Farquhar in National Magazine.

Notes for Beekeeperr.

Drones do not live so long as workers.

Bees can endure dry cold, but not dampness.

Good vinegar may be made from honey.

More bees are lost in wintering than by disease.

Lack of ventilation is the cause of dampness in many hives.

Combs cost the bees about ten pounds of honey for every pound of comb.

The life of the bee depends on the work it does. When it labors most its life is shortest.

It is a serious mistake to let a colony of bees become overstocked with drones.

To secure the best results in bee keeping good movable hives should be used.

Guides for the brood frames and boxes need not be more than an inch in witdth.

Bees should not be moved during the winter, nor should they be disturbed or molested in any way.

All empty frames of combs should be well taken care of during the winter when not in use.

The worst enemy to empty combs in winter is mice; 'if allowed access to them they will destroy them.

Successful wintering of bees depends to a great extent on the right kind of fall management.

If colonies are found short of provisions during the winter they may be supplied with food in the shape of candy.

The entrance to the hives should be contracted during the winter. Three inches long and three-eights wide is sufficient.

Bees seldom, if ever take a fly while there is much snow on the ground. If they are in a proper condition they will not fly at all. —St. Louis Republic.

Austin, a civil war veteran, of Winchester, Ind., writes: "My wife was sick a long time in spite of good doctor's treatment, but was wholly cured by Dr. King's New Life Pills, which worked wonders for her health." INFLUENCES FOR GOOD

Dr. Talmage Calls the Roll of Those Once Antagonistic.

Christianity Now Using to Defend Herself Weapons Once Used Against Her—Temptations of the Traveler.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage calls the roll of influences once antagonistic but now friendly to the Gospel and encourages Christian workers. Text, 1 Samuel, 21:9, "There is none like that; give it me."

David fled from his pursuers. The world runs very fast when it is chasing a good man. The country is trying to catch David and to slay him. David goes into the house of a priest and asks him for a sword or spear with which to defend himself. The priest, not being accustomed to use deadly weapons, tells David that he cannot supply him but suddenly the priest thinks of an old sword that had been carefully wrapped up and laid away—the very sword that Goliath formerly used—and he takes down that sword, and while he is undoing the sharp, glittering, memorable blade it flashes upon David's mind that this is the very sword that was used against himself when he was in the fight with Goliath, and David can hardly keep his hand off it until the priest has unwound it. David stretches out his hand toward that old sword and says: "There is none like that; give it me." In other words, "I want in my own hand the sword which has been used against me and against the cause of God." So it was given him. Well, my friends, that is not the first or the last sword once used by giant and Philistine iniquity which is to come into the possession of Jesus Christ and of His glorious church. I want, as well as God may help me, to show you that many a weapon which has been used against the armies of God is yet to be captured and used on our side, and I only imitate David when I stretch out my hand toward that blade of the Philistine and cry: "There is none like that; give it me!"

I remark first that this is true in regard to all scientific exploration. You know that the first discoveries in astronomy and geology and chronology were used to battle Christianity. Worldly philosophy came out of its laboratory and out of its observatory and said: "Now we will prove by the very structure of the earth and by the movement of the heavenly bodies that the Bible is a lie and that Christianity as we have it among men is a positive imposition." Good men trembled. The telescope, the Leyden jars, the electric batteries, all in the hands of the Philistines. But one day Christianity, looking about for some weapon with which to defend itself, happened to see the very old sword that these atheistic Philistines had been using against the truth, and cried out: "There is none like that; give it me!" And Copernicus and Galileo and Kepler and Isaac Newton and Herschel and O. M. Mitchell came forth and told the world that in their ransacking of the earth and heavens they had found overwhelming presence of the God whom we worship, and this old Bible began to shake itself from the Koran and Shaster and Zendavesta with which it had been covered up and lay on the desk of the scholar and in the laboratory of the chemist and in the lap of the Christian unharmed and unanswered, while the tower of the midnight heavens struck a silvery chime in its praise.

Worldly philosophy said: "Matter is eternal. The world always was. God did not make it." Christian philosophy plunges its crowbar into rocks and finds that the world was gradually made, and as gradually made there must have been some point at which the process started. Then who started it? And so that objection was overcome, and in the first three words of the Bible we find that Moses stated a magnificent truth when he said: "In the beginning."

Worldly philosophy said: "Your Bible is a most inaccurate book. All that story in the Old Testament, again and again told, about the army of the locusts—it is preposterous. There is nothing in the coming of the locusts like an army. An army walks; locusts fly. An army goes in order and procession, locusts without order." "Wait," said Christian philosophy, and in 1868 in the southwestern part of this country Christian men went out to examine the march of the locusts. There are men right before me who must have noticed in that very part of the country the coming up of the locusts like an army, and it was found that all the newspapers unwittingly spoke of them as an army. Why? They seem to have a commander. They march like a host. They halt like a host. No arrow ever went in straighter flight than the locusts come, not even turning aside for the wind. If the wind rises, the locusts drop and then rise again after it has gone down, taking the same line of march, not varying a foot. The old Bible is right every time when it speaks of locusts coming like an army; worldly philosophy wrong.

Worldly philosophy said: "All that story about the light turned as clay to the seal" is simply an absurdity." Old-time worldly philosophy said: "The light comes straight." Christian philosophy says: "Wait a little while," and it goes on and makes discoveries and finds that the atmosphere curves and bends the rays of light around the earth, literally "as the clay to the seal." The Bible right again; worldly philosophy wrong again. "Ah," says worldly philosophy, "all that allusion in Job about the foundations of the earth is simply an absurdity. 'Where wast thou,' says God, 'when I set the foundations of the earth?' The earth has no foundation." Christian philosophy comes and finds that the word as translated "foundations" may be better translated "sockets." So now see how it will read if it is translated right: "Where wast thou when I set the sockets of the earth?" Where is the socket? It is the hollow of God's hand—a socket large enough for any world to turn in.

Worldly philosophy said: "What an absurd story about Joshua making the sun and moon stand still! If the world had stopped an instant the whole universe would have been out of gear." "Stop," said Christian philosophy; "not quite so quick." The world has two motions—one on its own axis and the other around the sun. It was not necessary in making them stand still that both motions should be stopped—only the one turning the world on its own axis. There was no reason why the halting of the earth should have jarred and disarranged the whole universe. Joshua right and God right; infidelity wrong every time. I knew it would be wrong. I thank God that the time has come when Christians need not be scared at any scientific exploration. The fact is that religion and science have struck hands in eternal friendship, and the deeper down geology can dig and the higher up astronomy can soar all the better for us. The armies of the Lord Jesus Christ have stormed the observatories of the world's science and from the highest towers have flung out the banner of the cross, and Christianity now from the observatories at Albany and Washington stretches out its hand toward the opposing scientific weapon, crying: "There is none like that; give it me." I was reading of Herschel, who was looking at a meteor through a telescope, and when it came over the face of the telescope it was so powerful he had to avert his eyes. And it has been just so that many an astronomer has gone into an observatory and looked up into the midnight heavens, and the Lord God has through some swinging world flamed upon his vision, and the learned man cried out: "Who am I? Undone! Unclean! Have mercy, Lord God!"

Again, I remark that the traveling disposition of the world, which was adverse to morals and religion, is to be brought on our side. The man that went down to Jericho and fell amid thieves was a type of a great many travelers. There is many a man who is very honest at home who when he is abroad has his honor filched and his good habits stolen. There are but very few men who can stand the stress of an expedition. Six weeks at a watering place have ruined many a man. In the olden times God forbade the traveling of men for the purpose of trade because of the corrupting influences attending it. A good many men now cannot stand the transition from one place to another. Some men who seem to be very consistent here in the way of keeping the Sabbath when they get into Spain on the Lord's day always go out to see the bullfights. Plato said that no city ought to be built nearer to the sea than ten miles lest it be tempted to commerce. But this traveling disposition of the world which was adverse to that which is good is to be brought on our side. These mail trains, why, they take our Bibles; these steamships, they transport our missionaries; these sailors, rushing from city to city all around the world, are to be converted into Christian heralds and go out and preach Christ among the heathen nations. The Gospels are infinitely multiplied in beauty and power since Robinson and Thompson and Burkhardt have come back and talked to us about Siloam and Capernaum and Jerusalem, pointing out to us the lilies about which Jesus preached, the beach upon which Paul was shipwrecked, the fords at which Jordan was passed, the Red sea bank on which were tossed the carcasses of the drowned Egyptians. A man said: "I went to the Holy Land an infidel. I came back a Christian. I could not help it."

I am not shocked, as some have been, at the building of railroads in the Holy Land. I wish that all the world might go and see Golgotha and Bethlehem. How many who could not afford muleteers now easily buy tickets from Constantinople to Joppa! Then let Christians travel! God speed the rail trains and guide the steamships this night panting across the deep in the phosphorescent wake of the shining feet of Him who from wave cliff to wave cliff trod bestormed Tiberius. The Japanese come across the water and see our civilization and examine our Christianity and go back and tell the story and keep that empire rocking till Jesus shall reign

Where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run.

And the firearms with which the infidel traveler brought down the Arab horsemen and the jackals of the desert have been surrendered to the church, and we reach forth our hand, crying: "There is none like that; give it me!"

So it has also been with the learning and eloquence of the world. People say: "Religion is very good for aged women, it is very good for children, but not for men." But we have in the roll of Christ's host Mozart and Handel in music, Canova and Angelo in sculpture, Raphael and Reynolds in painting, Harvey and Boerhaave in medicine, Cowper and Scott in poetry, Grotius and Burke in statesmanship, Boyle and Leibnitz in philosophy, Thomas Chalmers and John Mason in theology. The most brilliant writings of a worldly nature are all aglow with Scriptural allusions. Through senatorial speech and through essayist's discourse Sinai thunders and Calvary speaks and Siloam sparkles.

Samuel L. Southard was mighty in the courtroom and in the senate chamber, but he reserved his strongest eloquence for that day when he stood before the literary societies at Princeton commencement and pleaded for the grandeur of our Bible. Daniel Webster won not his chief garlands while responding to Hayne nor when he opened the batteries of his eloquence on Bunker Hill, that rocking Sinai of the American revolution, but on that day when in the famous Girard will case he showed his affection for the Christian religion and eulogized the Bible. The eloquence and the learning that have been on the other side come over to our side. Captured for God! "There is none like that; give it me."

So also has it been with the picture making of the world. We are very anxious on this day to have the printing press and the platform on the side of Christianity, but we overlook the engraver's knife and the painter's pencil. The antiquarian goes and looks at pictured ruins or examines the chiseled pillars of Thebes and Nineveh and Pompeii and then comes back to tell us of the beastliness of ancient art, and it is a fact now that many of the finest specimens—merely artistically considered—of sculpture and painting that are to be found amid those ruins are not fit to be looked at, and they are locked up. How Paul must have felt when, standing amid those impurities that stared on him from the walls and pavements and bazaars of Corinth, he preached of the pure and holy Jesus. The art of the world on the side of obscenity and crime and death.

Much of the art of the world has been in the possession of the vicious. What to unclean Henry VIII. was a beautiful picture of the Madonna? What to Lord Jeffreys, the unjust judge, the picture of the "Last Judgment?" What to Nero, the unwashed, a picture of the baptism in the Jordan? The art of the world on the wrong side. But that is being changed now. The Christian artist goes over to Rome, looks at the picture and brings back to his American studio much of the power of these old masters. The Christian minister goes over to Venice, looks at the "Crucifixion of Christ" and comes back to the American pulpit to talk as never before of the sufferings of the Saviour. The private tourist goes to Rome and looks at Raphael's picture of the "Last Judgment." The tears start, and he goes back to his room in the hotel and prays God for preparation for that day when

Shriveling like a parched scroll,
The flaming heavens together roll.

Our Sunday school newspapers and walls are adorned with pictures of Joseph in the court, Daniel in the den, Shadrach in the fire, Paul in the shipwreck, Christ on the cross. Oh, that we might in our families think more of the power of Christian pictures! One little sketch of Samuel kneeling in prayer will mean more to your children than 20 sermons on devotion. One patient face of Christ by the hand of the artist will be more to your child than 50 sermons on forbearance. The art of the world is to be taken for Christ. What has become of Thorwaldsen's chisel and Ghirlandajo's crayon? Captured for the truth. "There is none like that; give it me."

So I remark it is with business men and net. When Christ was upon earth the people that followed Him for the most part had no social position. There was but one man naturally brilliant in all the apostleship, Joseph of Arimathea, the rich man, risked nothing when he offered a hole in the rock for the dead Christ. How many of the merchants in Asia Minor befriended Jesus? I think of only one—Lydia. How many of the castles on the beach at Galilee entertained Christ? Not one. When Peter came to Joppa he stopped with one Simon, a tanner. What power had Christ's name on the Roman exchange or in the bazars of Corinth? None. The prominent men of the day did not want to risk their reputation for sanity by pretending to be one of His followers. Now that is all changed. Among the mightiest men in our great cities to-day are the Christian merchants and the Christian bankers, and if to-morrow at the board of trade any man should get up and malign the name of Jesus he would be quickly silenced or put out. In the front rank of all our Christian workers to-day are the Christian merchants, and the enterprises of the world are coming on the right side. There was a farm willed away some years ago, all the proceeds of that farm to go for spreading infidel books. Somehow matters have changed, and now all the proceeds of that farm go toward the missionary cause.

Now, if what I have said be true, away with all downheartedness! If science is to be on the right side and the traveling disposition of the world on the right side and the picture making on the right side and the business acumen and tact of the world on the right side, thine, O Lord, is the kingdom! Oh, fall into line, all ye people! It is a grand thing to be in such an army and led by such a commander and on the way to such a victory. If what I have said is true, then Christ is going to gather up for Himself out of this world everything that is worth anything, and there will be nothing but the scum left. We have been rebels, but a proclamation of amnesty goes forth now from the throne of God, saying: "Whosoever will, let him come." However long you may have wandered, however great your crimes may have been, "whosoever will, let him come." Oh, that this hour I could marshal all the world on the side of Christ! He is the best friend a man ever had. He is so kind, He is so loving, so sympathetic! I cannot see how you can stay away from Him. Come now and accept His mercy. Behold Him as He stretches out the arms of His salvation, saying: "Look unto me, all ye ends of the earth, and be ye saved, for I am God." Make final choice now. You will either be willows planted by the water courses or the chaff which the wind driveth away.

A UNITED STATES MARSHAL

EX-UNITED STATES MARSHAL MATTHEWS, OF MISSISSIPPI.

Hon. S. S. Matthews, ex-United States Marshal of Mississippi, in a recent letter to The Peruna Medicine Company of Columbus, Ohio, written from Hazelhurst, Miss., says:

"I am happy to say that I am cured of catarrh and need no more attention from you. It is a great satisfaction that I am able to write you that Peruna has in my case done all that you claim, and that I will need no more medicine."

The great multitude take this remedy without any other advice than the directions to be found upon the bottle and in the pamphlets. There are those who prefer, however, to correspond with Dr. Hartman during their sickness. To all such he will make prompt and careful answer without charge.

Hon. J. F. Crooker, of Buffalo, N. Y., who was for years Superintendent of Schools at Buffalo, in a letter dated October 16 writes:

Hon. J. F. Crooker, Sup't Buffalo, N. Y., Public Schools.

"I have been a sufferer from catarrh six or seven years, and after trying many remedies was induced by a friend to take Peruna. The results have been highly satisfactory. I take pleasure in recommending Peruna to any one suffering with catarrh, as my cure is complete."

Hon. B. B. Doviner, Congressman from West Virginia, in a letter from Washington, D. C., to The Peruna Medicine Co., says the following of their catarrh remedy, Peruna:

"I join with my colleagues in the House of Representatives in recommending your excellent remedy, Peruna, as a good tonic and also an effective cure for catarrh."

Mrs. Mary C. Fentress writes from Paradise, Tex., the following: "I think I can say that your good advice and medicine has cured me of chronic catarrh. I have had no pains in my head since I have taken Peruna. I have been in bad health ever since '59, and have taken a good many medicines which were only of temporary relief. Peruna is the catarrh cure. The Peruna stopped my catarrh of the head so that it did not become chronic, and I am very thankful for Dr. Hartman's advice and medicine."

Peruna is a specific for all catarrhal diseases. It acts quickly and beneficially upon the inflamed mucous membrane thus removing the cause of catarrh.

Catarrh is catarrh wherever located, Catarrh is essentially the same everywhere. The remedy that will cure catarrh in one situation will cure it in all situations.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

One Certain Evidence of the Beneficent Effect of Protection Upon Monopoly.

Some very valuable information, if it be properly applied, is being given the industrial commission now taking testimony in Washington. Evidence from a thoroughly posted witness as to the practical working of the protective duty on wood pulp is particularly interesting. It affords one of the most comprehensive examples that could be given as to how money is literally showered upon a great combine through the ignorance or deliberate attempt of national statesmanship. The International Paper company produces more news print paper on this continent than all competitors combined, and is rapidly approaching a monopoly. Evidence of this, showing the large holdings of spruce in the states and Canada, for the combine operates in both, was given in detail to the commission.

Because a portion of its mills are in the dominion their products taxed at the custom houses so as to shut out foreign "competition." This presents the ridiculous spectacle of taxing the Canadian product of the corporation to protect its "infant industry" in this country. It is just as wise a proposition as to fatten, strengthen and rear a living infant by confining it to the nourishment to be had by sucking its own thumb. This disposes of the theory of statesmanship involved, but the consumers have to suffer because of the increased prices made possible. The combine makes its patrons pay the duty on its Canadian output, and at the same time makes a corresponding increase in the charges made for the home product. In the final result the people are forced to pay a direct and heavy tax which protects no one, but is outright extortion committed through an arbitrary exercise of power.

The government uses an enormous amount of this paper, and to that extent taxes itself, which only means the taxing of the people. They are also the ultimate losers in all the publications which they purchase, for the cost of paper is among the fixed charges and expenses upon which every newspaper, magazine, journal, periodical, book and printed production of whatever form or character must estimate its reasonable profits. It may endure a marginal loss because of fluctuations in the price of paper, or offset it through a decreased expense in some other department, but there is a fixed advance, as there has been through the indefensible tariff referred to, the necessity of making something or going out of business results in an advance in the printed product. Instead of perpetuating the farce of pretending to tax a trust to protect it against itself, reciprocity in the pulp paper trade should be brought about between the United States and Canada, as explained and advised by the expert witness before the industrial commission. —Detroit Free Press.

OUR DUTY IN PHILIPPINES.

Speedy Recognition of the Rights of the People Should Be Made by the Administration.

It may safely be believed that Aguinaldo's proclamation to the Filipino people, acknowledging and accepting the sovereignty of the United States, marks the beginning of a new and tranquil era in that long-troubled archipelago and promises to the American government the early and satisfactory solution of the Philippine problem.

The especially gratifying feature of the Aguinaldo proclamation is that this patriot leader seems to have recognized the truth that American domination means for the Filipinos something infinitely different from Spanish domination. This is indicated in the terms of his reference to this government as an irresistible force, which, while it restrains his people, yet enlightens their minds and opens to them another course, presenting them the cause of peace.

It is also to be noted that Aguinaldo clearly sees, and frankly confesses, that the Filipinos are already beginning to enjoy liberty under American rule, a circumstance upon which he bases his expressed belief that his people will yet come into the enjoyment of their full liberty. This is a significant confession, the sincerity of which there is no reason to doubt, and the manliness with which it is made cannot fail to impress the outside world with the belief that Aguinaldo is something better than the insurgent malcontent and self-seeker he has been pictured by prejudiced minds.

The proclamation in question should have a tremendous influence for peace in the Philippines. It should also stimulate the American government to extraordinary effort for the good of this conquered people and the entire fulfillment of the pledge of freedom which we have given them. They have now, through their foremost leader, accepted this pledge in good faith. Our consequent duty is plain.—St. Louis Republic.

——Unless a great change has suddenly come over the character of the American people, the present demoralization of the opposition party affords not the slightest indication of what its condition may be a year or two years from now, let alone four years. The quick revivification of a defunct opposition is a familiar phenomenon in American politics. The example afforded by the democratic party which rose immediately from the crushing defeat of 1872 to successive and sweeping victories in the elections of 1873, 1874 and 1876 has been frequently pointed out.—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

WANT THE TARIFF REDUCED.

Certain Lines of Trade and Industry That Are Touched by the Trusts.

There is a growing sentiment for reform of the tariff, based on the increasing belief that the reduction of it is needed for the best interests of business. If it may be said that the old effort for tariff reform was based on a principle, reform now is advocated more from considerations of expediency. This is not in any wise a revival of the old idea of a tariff for revenue only, nor is it based on hostility to the protective tariff as a principle. Indeed its supporters are those that in the days of antagonism of those two principles supported the protective tariff and prospered by it. Thus tariff reduction is now approached from a new point of view. Undoubtedly the growth of trusts has had something to do with it.

The consensus of opinion in the hardware trade is that, while a moderate tariff is necessary on some articles, the tariff has been abused in favor of industries that desire an inordinate increase in profits. This clear view, we take it, would not be easily obtainable unless trusts had clarified the situation, for more of this talk is that trusts are entirely selfish; that the men at the head of them are not men that have been brought up in the business, but men who are simply manipulating it.

It seems to us that these views, coming from men who are in lines of industry that are touched by the trusts are significant; that they indicate a movement for regulation of the tariff based on business reasons and not on sentiment. Of such a movement there is little hazard in predicting that once started it will not have done until it accomplishes something, for as these men see the steel trust, for example, watered four times and helped in many directions by enormous tariffs, the inevitable protest will take the shape of a demand for reduction of the tariff. In hardware, using the term as a general one, we are exporting over $700,000,000 worth of products a year, and, as one merchant put it, with our greatly improved machinery and increased facility for manufacture, we ought to be able to take care of ourselves. Moreover, certain lines of hardware not made in this country are subjected to excessive duties.

So it would not be surprising if in the coming years and at a time when the tariff has ceased to be a political issue it should come up as a business subject and result in reductions in many particulars.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

NOT ALL BAD BUT—

A republican reader reminds the editor that republicans are not all bad, and that democrats are not all good. It a wise and truthful, although not an original, remark. No one is so partisan as to believe that his own party is perfect, and that no other party contains any virtue.

The republican party was entrusted with power in 1896; it is now in control of the executive, the legislative and judicial branches of the government. The Commoner points out from time to time the evil tendency of republican policies. All republicans do not approve of what the republican party is doing, nor do all republicans fully realize the extent to which the moneyed interests have secured control of the republican organization. In criticising republican policies, the Commoner does not wish to leave the impression that the democratic party, or any other party would administer the government to perfection, but it does believe that the democratic party would apply safer principles, and support wiser policies than the republican party is now doing.

The democratic party is not under obligations to the corporations, and, therefore, would be free to give the people protection from corporate greed; the republican party is under obligation to the corporations, and cannot be expected to give the people relief from their exactions.

While not all of the democrats are opposed to imperialism, nearly all are, and the majority would control. Most of the republicans either favor imperialism, or, if they oppose it, have not the courage to overthrow the leadership which has fastened the policy on the government.—The Commoner.

OPINIONS AND POINTERS.

——Protective tariffs and a colonial policy will not pull in the same harness.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——Mr. McKinley is consistent in at least one thing. He never appoints an anti-trust man to a position where he can injure the trusts. He at least knows his "plain duty" to the trusts. —Omaha World-Herald.

——The Standard Oil company is preparing to declare a $20,000,000 dividend. This is one of the "infant industries" which was to have been assisted by Mr. Hanna's original ship subsidy bill.—Kansas City Times.

——"Why abuse Mr. Knox?" asks a republican paper. Is it abuse to speak the truth? The only charge against Mr. Knox is that he has been the attorney for the steel concerns, and now that the steel trust has been formed in direct violation of the Sherman act, the chances are that he will protect rather than prosecute the new concern. Where is the abuse in stating these things?—Memphis Appeal.

THE COCOPA INDIANS.

A Primitive Agricultural Folk of the Lower Colorado and Their Customs.

The Cocopa Indians of the lower Colorado (in both Baja California and Sonora) are of interest partly because they have practically escaped attention on the part of scientific investigators until within a few months, and partly because of the customs which distinguish them from most neighboring tribes. They are essentially an agricultural folk, though their agriculture is of the most primitive sort, affording, indeed, a better picture of prehistoric agricultural methods than those of any other known tribe, says the New York Tribune. Their customs well illustrate, too, the dependence of primitive industries, modes of life, and even habits of thought, on surroundings; for, like the fellaheen of the lower Nile, they are creatures of the river along which they live, driven from the bottom lands by the annual freshets, and brought back by ensuing droughts to plant anew in the soil fertilized by the annual silt deposit.

Perhaps of primary interest among their customs is their disposal of the dead. They not only distribute the property of the deceased among nonrelatives, but burn the body and the habitation together. A considerable part of the tribal lore is connected with the mortuary custom; and custom and lore together afford remarkable insight into the esoteric life of primitive peoples.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Mrs. Ora Russell Riggs.

Mrs. Ora Russell Riggs died Sunday evening, April 28th, 1901, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Russell, near Constance. Besides the grief stricken mother and father and sisters, she leaves a husband to mourn her death, and a little baby girl as yet too young to realize the loss of mother. In the section of Boone county where she lived no young woman was better or more generally known than Miss Ora Russell, who was born in September, 1875, and was married to Sherman Riggs in November, 1898. She was a prominent, active and sincere member of the Pt. Pleasant Christian church; she was a member of the C. U. B. M., and also a member of the Endeavor Society. In Sunday-school work she was especially interested and for three years was secretary of the Boone County Sunday School Association. During her long and severe illness her thoughts were often on the church where early in life she confessed her Savior and where she labored until she entered into rest. Her funeral service was conducted by the writer in the presence of a large assembly of relatives and friends at the Pt. Pleasant Church, Tuesday afternoon, April 30th, after which her body was tenderly hurled in the cemetery at Hebron. There it shall rest "until the day break and the shadows flee away." EDGAR D. JONES.

TO PENSION EMPLOYES.

About 40,000 Men of the Illinois Central Railroad Company, to Be Benefited.

Chicago, May 4.—President Stuyvesant Fish, of the Illinois Central Railroad Co., after a conference with A. J. Hanrahan, vice president and general manager, issued a circular announcing a pension plan for the 40,000 employes of the company. The plan, which is to take effect July 1, is more liberal in its provisions than has heretofore been adopted by any other road. The company starts with a gift of $250,000, and in addition will each year make an appropriation of an amount not to exceed $100,000. The pension allowances are on the following basis: For each year of service an allowance of one per cent. of the average regular monthly pay received for the ten years preceding retirement. Thus, if an employe has been in the service for 40 years and has received on an average for the last ten years $50 per month regular wages.

His pension allowance would be 40 per cent. of $50 or $20 per month.

CIVIL GOVERNMENT.

It Has Been Established in Manila By the United States Philippine Commission.

Manila, May 4.—Civil government in Manila was established Friday as a preliminary to the inauguration of a general civil government. The United States Philippine commission is unwilling at present to permit the experiment of elections here, although they have been authorized in all other municipalities. Judge Taft says a municipal government for Manila will shortly be created. The officers will probably be appointive. Lepanto and possibly all the other uncivilized provinces will be organized specially on a plan similar to that adopted in the case of Bagnet.

The board of health has completed the census of Manila. The population numbers 244,732.

The trial of Lieut. Boyer, charged with commissary irregularities, has been completed. The verdict has not been announced.

The trial of Capt. Barrows, also charged with commissary irregularities, begins Monday.

FIRE AT GRIDLEY ILL.

Two Entire Business Blocks Were Consumed. Entailing a Very Heavy Loss.

Gridley, Ill., May 4.—Two entire business blocks facing Center street were burned, causing a loss estimated at $80,000. Mrs. H. Cohn, wife of a clothing merchant, started to burn a pile of rubbish Friday afternoon. She lighted it and then left it. In a few minutes it had spread to a butcher shop owned by Wm. Setle. A brisk south wind carried it across the street to the new commercial hotel, and from there it jumped to the new Gridley state bank. By this time it was seen that the whole town was in danger, and a call for aid was sent to Peoria. An engine and a hose cart were sent, but before their arrival the fire has destroyed two blocks of buildings and had practically burned itself out. There were no casualties.

Mayor Huston says the work of rebuilding the town will be commenced immediately.

The Whitney-Ryan syndicate is understood to be the moving spirit in these operations. The consolidation of the Missouri properties will be followed by the erection of four great concentrating plants, which are to be conected by railroad with St. Louis.

IT IS SCALED DOWN.

The Chinese Indemnity Lowered to $273,000,000.

The Reports of Disaffected Elements in the Yang Tse Province Organizing a General Rising Receiving Some Confirmation.

Berlin, May 2.—A dispatch from Peking to the Kolnische Zeitung says that a bloody battle took place between the Russians and Chinese at Mukden. The Russians lost 60 killed and wounded, four Russian officers being among the killed. Among the wounded is Gen. Derplinski.

Washington, May 3.—The German and French ambassadors and Mr. Rogestvensky, for the Russian ambassador, were among Thursday's callers on Dr. Hill, acting secretary of state. The discussion was almost entirely on Chinese affairs, the press dispatches as to an agreement on $273,000,000 indemnity and on a change of customs duties providing considerable interest in official and diplomatic quarters. None of the callers was able to confirm the reports, but the opinion was general that an agreement on indemnity had been reached. The prevailing view was that $273,000,000 represented a compromise between the minimum amount urged by the United States and the maximum urged by the other powers. The original total of claims amounted to a half billion dollars, so that the present total represents a scaling down of about 40 per cent. At this rate the claim of the United States, which originally was about $25,000,000, would be cut to about $18,000,000.

London, May 3.—Dr. Morrison, wiring to the Times from Peking Wednesday, says:

"The indemnity committee favors a loan raised on the guarantee of all the powers. Its proposal to increase the maritime customs to five per cent. ad valorem applies to import duties only and not export. All the ministers of the powers except the British, American and Japanese favor an immediate increase to ten per cent. The report, which is based on somewhat imperfectly understood data, has been referred to the home governments."

"The reports of the secret combination of disaffected elements in the Yang Tse provinces for purpose of organizing general risings, are receiving some confirmation," says the Shanghai correspondent of the Morning Post.

"The British consul at Nanking telegraphs Mr. Brennan, the British consul in Shanghai, that the Nanking viceroy is very anxious about the Yang Tse movement, and he asks Mr. Brennan to assist the Taotai to preserve order by holding troops in readiness.

"It is announced from a German standpoint that the French have withdrawn their troops from Hwai Lu to Pao Ting Fu, thus leaving the Germans in sole possession of all the passes into Shan Si."

STARVING MILLIONS.

Minister Conger Asked to Co-Operate in Giving Relief to the Suffering People of North China.

Des Moines, Ia., May 3.—Minister Conger received messages from a New York paper asking his co-operation in giving relief to starving millions of northern China. His telegram in reply was:

The Christian Herald, New York: Your telegram received. The suffering of the famine-stricken people in Shan Si is indescribable. Your plan of relief is best. Put matter in hands of our consuls at Shanghai and Tien-Tsin and heads of missions there. Chinese government and people will be grateful and the demands of humanity will be answered and future good will result. I send by letter $100.

E. H. CONGER.

Minister Conger says that the condition of the unfortunate people referred to is beyond description. "Prince Ching told me only two days before I left Peking," said Minister Conger, "that these people were literally eating each other. They have eaten every blade of grass, every bit of bark—everything in fact that can be eaten in that province. Nothing has been raised there for two years and unless relief is given many, many thousands must perish."

Epidemic of Typhoid Fever.

Berlin, May 3.—An epidemic of typhoid fever has broken out in several of the forts and villages in the neighborhood of Metz. The 8th Bavarian regiment alone has lost 16 men from the disease and has 251 men sick.

Awaits Sailing Orders.

Seattle, Wash., May 3.—The battleship Iowa was launched Thursday from the Bremerton navy yards after undergoing repairs and a thorough overhauling and is now awaiting sailing orders.

Asks for $60,000.

Washington, May 2.—The Spanish commission has received a claim for $60,000 filed by Amelia Tejada de Govin for the death of her son Charley Govin, the correspondent, who was killed with a machete by order of the Spanish commander July 9, 1896.

May Buy Craig-y-Nos-Castle.

London, May 2.—It is asserted that King Edward contemplates the purchase of Craig-y-Nos-Castle, the residence of Mme. Adeling Patti (Baroness Rolf Cederstrom), in South Wales.

MINISTER CONGER.

At a Public Reception He Tells the Story of the Siege at Peking—The Boxers.

Des Moines, Ia., May 4.—Minister Conger was formally welcomed to Des Moines at a public meeting in the Auditorium. The reception was tendered by the two Grand Army posts of the city, citizens generally and the missionary societies represented in China. Three thousand attended.

In his speech he said: "There is a history connected with this affair, which I have not seen in print and about which I will tell you. The organization which is known as the Boxers had been in existence more than a hundred years, but had long ceased to be of importance. Two Buddhist priests in the province of Shan Tung some time in the year 1899 revived the organization or made an organization which took the name of the old one. Some have said it was a patriotic organization, but it was in fact at the outset a religious movement. The priest who was the head of the movement has since been captured, tried by a German court and executed. It has been learned since the suppression of the Boxers that the organization was entirely religious.

The priests professed to have supernatural powers. The society spread in Shan Tung province. There was never any danger from it until it was taken up by Gen. Yu Shen, the governor of the province, a bitter hater of all foreigners, and he saw that he could make of this society an organization to further his ends. He encouraged the society, gave the promoters funds, and assisted them in every way. The priests pretended they could call down from the skies millions of warriors fully armed and equipped, and that they would form an army to drive out of China everything that was foreign.

Mr. Conger declared that all of the time of the siege there was the flimsiest possible veil between the legationers and death. It could have been brushed aside with one charge, he said, and would have been if the Chinese had possessed courage. In some way they were filled with fear and never made the charge. Such a charge as was made by our men under Capt. Meyer would have ended the career of the legationers.

MISSOURI EXHIBIT.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 4.—The date for the first sports in the Stadium at the Pan-American exposition has been fixed for May 15. They will take the form of a celebration in honor of the completion of the great amphitheater and the entries will be confined to employes of the grounds. The programme will be made up of athletic events and exhibitions by midway concessionaires. Missouri's commissioners, E. S. Garver, James F. Beal, R. M. Yost and C. C. Bell, arrived in the city Friday. Saturday they selected a site for their state building. Besides the state building Missouri has an extensive exhibit in the horticultural building consisting of palms and flowers from the Missouri Botanical gardens.

ROUGH AND TUMBLE TACTICS.

Tom Sharkey Put Out "Big Fred" Russell in the Fourth Round at Denver, Col.

Denver, May 4.—"Sailor" Tom Sharkey put out "Big Fred" Russell, the California heavyweight, in the fourth round of what was scheduled to be a ten-round go before the Colorado Athletic association. The bout was characterized by rough and tumble tactics engaged in by both; science playing but little part. There was much clinching and rough work throughout, and it seemed that each had a chance to win by landing a wild swing at any time.

The Irish of It.

One of the city physicians tells an amusing story about a charity patient, an old Irishwoman who sent him a hurry-up call. He found her suffering from nothing more serious than a severe cold, and prescribed accordingly. Two days later when he dropped in to see how she was getting along the old lady was sitting up in an easy chair, her head wrapped in a camphor-saturated cloth.

"Well, how are you feeling to-day, mother?" he asked.

"Much better, praise th' saints," was the fervent reply. "Shure you're a foine doethor. If I'd a-sint fer ye befoorhand Oi'd niver been sick at all, at all."—Detroit Free Press.

"Dont Speak to me."

All manner of extravagant expressions are possible when a woman's nerves are overwrought.

The spasm at the top of the wind pipe or bronchial tubes, "ball rising in the throat," violent beating of the heart, laughing and crying by turns, muscular spasms (throwing the arms about), frightened by the most insignificant occurrences—are all symptoms of a hysterical condition and serious derangement of the female organs.

Any female complaint may produce hysterics, which must be regarded as a symptom only. The cause, however, yields quickly to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which acts at once upon the organ afflicted and the nerve centers, dispelling effectually all those distressing symptoms.

Mrs. Lewis Says: "I Feel Like a New Person, Physically and Mentally."

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to speak a good word for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. For years I had ovarian trouble and suffered everything from nervousness, severe headache, and pain in back and abdomen. I had consulted different physicians, but decided to try your medicine, and I soon found it was giving me much relief. I continued its use and now am feeling like a new person, physically and mentally, and am glad to add one more testimonial to the value of your remedy."—MRS. M. H. LEWIS, 2108 Valentine Ave., Tremont, New York, N. Y.

Writing to Mrs. Pinkham is the quickest and surest way to get the right advice about all female troubles. Her address is Lynn, Mass. She advises women free. Following is an instance:

Mrs. Haven's First Letter to Mrs. Pinkham.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I would like your advice in regard to my troubles. I suffer every month at time of menstruation, and flow so much and for so long that I become very weak, also get very dizzy. I am troubled with a discharge before and after menses, have pains in ovaries so bad sometimes that I can hardly get around, have sore feeling in lower part of bowels, pain in back, bearing-down feeling, a desire to pass urine frequently, with pains in passing it; have leucorrhœa, headache, fainting spells, and sometimes have hysteria. My blood is not in good condition. Hoping to hear from you, I am," MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (June 8, 1899.)

Mrs. Haven's Second Letter.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I wish to express my gratitude for what your medicine has done for me. I suffered for four years with womb trouble. Every month I flowed very badly. I got so bad that I could hardly do my work. Was obliged to sit or lie down the most of the time. I doctored for a long time, but obtained no relief. I began using your remedies—Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, Blood Purifier, Sanative Wash and Liver Pills—and now feel like a new woman."—MRS. EMMA HAVEN, 2508 South Ave., Council Bluffs, Iowa. (Feb. 1, 1900.)

$5000 REWARD Owing to the fact that some skeptical people have, from time to time questioned the genuineness of the testimonial letters we are constantly publishing, we have deposited with the National City Bank, of Lynn, Mass., $5,000, which will be paid to any person who will show that the above testimonials are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writers' special permission.—LYDIA E. A BIG CONFLAGRATION.

Millions of Dollars Worth of Property at Jacksonville Burned.

One Hundred and Thirty Blocks, Including Hotels, Public Buildings, Hospitals, Business Houses Etc., in Ashes.

Jacksonville, May 4, via Yulee, Fla.—Fifteen millilon dollars worth of property gone up in smoke and 10,000 people made homeless is the result of an innocent-looking wire accidentally getting into the shredding machine of the American Fiber Co. Friday, at the corner of Davis and Union streets. Fire started between the hours of 12 and 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and owing to this fact the loss of life will be comparatively small. The fiber factory was a wooden shell, full of inflammable material, and in a few moments was a mass of flames. The wind, which was already blowing strong from the southwest, seemed to be possessed with a sudden fury, and soon was carrying destructive embers all through the city, the fairest portion of which lay right in the course of the wind. Some delay was experienced in getting an alarm, and to add to the tragedy of the fateful accident the engine at the water works suffered a mishap and nothing more than an ordinary pressure could be obtained.

Right into the heart of the town the flames swept. The Windsor hotel, the St. James, both fine winter hotels, were consumed in an incredibably short time. The opera house followed, and then row upon row of elegant residences went up.

The flames swept down in the rear of the United States hotel, and that, with the Law exchange, was doomed. Meantime the county court house caught fire, and another splendid edifice was soon a total wreck.

From the United States hotel the flames again jumped across the street and the line of march was again taken up, only to be checked when the last building near McCoy and Hogan creek had been destroyed.

The hotels destroyed include the Windsor, St. James, Placide, United States, Gird, Glenada and Oxford.

The plans of the city, as prepared by the city surveyor, show that 150 blocks were burned and a part of another block. The estimates of residences to the block in the residential district is ten and in the business section the blocks were solid.

New York, May 6.—The Jacksonville emergency committee of the Merchants' association of this city organized to send relief to Jacksonville, Fla., Sunday received the following telegram:

"Tallahasse, Fla., May 5.—Food supplies needed as temporary relief. Jacksonville association will issue call which will be furnished you giving class of supplies needed. The people of Florida appreciate your noble work; in their name I thank you.

(Signed) "W. S. JENNINGS, Gov."

"Jacksonville, Fla., May 5.—One hundred and thirty-six blocks covering the best residential and business portion of this city burned; about 10,000 people homeless and thousands destitute. Our people responding liberally, but demands for help beyond our ability to meet.

(Signed) "J. E. T. BOYDEN, Mayor."

To Mayor Bowden a telegram was sent telling him that the citizens of New York would respond nobly to his appeal for food, clothing, cots, household utensils, drugs, etc., as soon as they knew just what was needed, and that the emergency committee would meet Monday with the old Galveston relief committee to take action upon receipt of any definite information.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 6.—The hunger of 10,000 homeless people was satisfied Sunday upon the arrival of relief trains and boats bringing provisions from neighboring towns.

Early Sunday morning a commissary was established in the center of the city where the people were fed during the day. The relief fund is growing hourly, and every mail brings offers of assistance. Sunday an order was promulgated under martial law, requiring all merchants whose stores were spared by the conflagration, to open their doors and sell to all who asked.

The streets have been crowded all day with shoppers who lost interest in the fire, and many stores remained open all night. It is estimated that 3,000 persons have left the city, and every outgoing train is crowded with refugees. Five carloads of tents were received Sunday, the property of the state, which are used by the homeless temporarily. Another shipment of tents from the government arrived Monday.

The Times Union and Citizen estimates the total property loss at $11,000,000.

IMMIGRANTS ARRIVING.

The Ocean Liners Landing at New York Average 1,000 Each—Smallpox Cases.

New York, May 6.—The ocean liners arriving of late are averaging 1,000 immigrants each, and the health officer of the port and the corps of marine hospital surgeons who examine the new arrivals a second time when they reach Ellis island, are kept busy from early in the day until long after sundown. Steerage passengers with sore eyes are rejected, and on Saturday among 1,122 German immigrants on a vessel from Hamburg a case of smallpox was discovered. The patient was sent to the pesthouse, and over 100 passengers were removed from the vessel to Hoffman island.

A steamer from Marseilles, which arrived Sunday, had three cases of smallpox among her 1,173 steerage passengers. They were also sent to the pesthouse and 210 immigrants who were in the infected compartment of the ship were sent to join the other suspects at the lower quarantine.

THE PHILIPPINE ARMY.

Administration Decided to Reduce It to 40,000 Men—May Be Reduced Still Further.

Washington, May 6.—After a careful consideration of the situation in the Philippines as it exists to-day the administration has decided to reduce the army in the Philippines to 40,000 men. The opinion prevails here that this number will be ample for the present needs of the service in the islands, and if conditions continue to improve in the satisfactory maner that has been shown in the past few months the force may be reduced still further. The expectation of the war department is that all the volunteers now in the Philippines will have left the islands by the end of June, leaving only the regulars on duty there. Following the departure of volunteers will come the regulars who were sent to Manila in 1898 just after the outbreak of hostilities, and their movement home will continue until the force is reduced to approximately 40,000 men.

FIRST TIME IN SIX YEARS.

Saloons in Kansas City Were Closed Tight Sunday—But One Arrest Was Made.

Kansas City, May 6.—Saloons in Kansas City were closed tight Sunday, the first time in six years. But one arrest for failure to respect Mayor Reed's order, was made and one of the quietest days for a long time was the result. Saloonkeepers spent an active day, however, circulating petitions to be presented to the mayor and police commissioners, giving their side of the question, and requesting a resumption of the old regime. A mass meeting under the auspices of the Law Enforcement league, attended by 500 men, was held and strong resolutions commending the mayor and police commissioners for their action were adopted. It was determined to keep up the agitation for Sunday closing and a committee was appointed to secure evidence against saloonkeepers who may fail to observe the law.

SUNDAY CLOSING IN OMAHA.

Two Saloonkeepers and Half a Dozen Bootblacks Were Placed Under Arrest.

Omaha, May 6.—The Sunday closing ordinance issued by Mayor Moores were for the most part observed Sunday. Two saloonkeepers in outlying portions of the city were arrested for failing to bolt their side doors and a party of half dozen bootblacks were also arrested in the act of breaking the Sabbath quiet. They were arrested, but were bailed out by "Mogie," the so-called king of the newsboys.

The Trocaderro theater remained open, but the Orpheum transferred its show to Council Bluffs.

THE TWO PRESIDENTS.

Diaz and McKinley Exchange Messages of Good Wishes.

The Honor of Launching the Battle Ship Ohio Has Fallen to the Lot of Mrs. William McKinley.

New Orleans, May 2.—The presidential party traveled across the cotton belt Wednesday from Memphis almost to the Gulf of Mexico. Down the low-lying, rich Yazoo valley, fertile as that of the Nile, it went to Vicksburg, teeming with its memories of 30 years ago, thence east to Jackson, the capital of Mississippi, and from there down into the land of the magnolia and the orange, to the old romantic city near the mouth of the Mississippi, with its traditions of French and Spanish rule. The outpourings of the people to see the presidential train along the route Wednesday were larger if anything than on the two previous days, and the demonstrations at Vicksburg and Jackson, the two principal stops, were very striking.

New Orleans, La., May 3.—The day spent in New Orleans will live long in the memory of the president and the members of his party. In no other city in the United States is the old and romantic preserved and placed in such sharp contrast with the modern as in the Crescent City, and Thursday, as the presidential party drove through the flower-embowered city from the new into the old French and Spanish quarter, it was like passing mysteriously from America into a foreign land, from this country into another that has gone.

Austin, Tex., May 4.—Out of Dixie the presidential party traveled into the heart of the great southwest. After leaving New Orleans, beautiful Bayou Teche, the home of the Acadians and the waving rice fields of western Louisiana were passed during the night, and the new oil fields of Texas whirled by just at the peep of day, too early to be seen by the president.

The president's reception in the Lone Star state was a continuation of the ovation he has received throughout the south. Every honor was shown him and his party, and there was much enthusiasm.

El Paso, Tex., May 6.—The presidential party reached El Paso, the gateway to Mexico, at 9 o'clock Sunday morning and they remained here until noon Monday. President Diaz, of Mexico, had hoped to meet the president here and shake hands with him across the border, but as the Mexican congress is in session, he could not leave the capital. He sent a personal message to the president, however, and also dispatched Gen. Juan Hernandez, the commander of the second military zone of the state of Chihuahua, to present personally his good wishes to the president of the United States.

Gov. Miguel Ahumadada, of Chihuahua, the most northerly state of Mexico, also traveled to El Paso to pay his respects, and these distinguished Mexican officials, accompanied by Gen. Hernandez's staff in full uniform, were received by the president in his car at the station. After exchanging felicitations, the president requested Gen Hernandez to convey to President Diaz his personal good wishes for his health and happiness and for a continuation of the cordial relations at present existing between the two countries.

It being Sunday, the president had requested the local committee here not to arrange any programme for the day. His wishes were respected, and the military parade and official exercises were postponed until Monday. The president and Mrs. McKinley and the members of the cabinet attended the Station Street Methodist church in the morning and in the afternoon some of the party went out for a drive.

San Francisco, May 6.—The much discussed question as to whom would fall the honor of launching the battleship Ohio has been settled by the announcement that the function will be performed by Mrs. Wm. McKinley. After the simple ceremonies preceding the event, consisting of short addresses by President McKinley, Gov. Nash and Irving Scott, Mrs. McKinley will press the button and the released ax will sever the rope just at the turn of the tide at 12:25 p. m. Just as Mrs. McKinley touches the button, Miss Helen Deshler, of Columbus, will break the bottle of California wine over the bow and give the new fighting machine the name of Ohio.

Stranded Steamer Floated.

Norfolk, Va., May 6.—The British steamer Blodwen, which struck on the shoals at Willoughby Spit Saturday, floated at highwater Sunday morning. Her cargo is worth more than $150,000. The vessel will not proceed to Hamburg until the extent of her injuries can be ascertained and repaired.

BURNED TO DEATH.

Seven Persons Lose Their Lives in a Fire in a Chicago Apartment Building.

Chicago, May 6.—Seven persons were burned to death, three fatally injured and several others slightly burned and otherwise injured in a fire that destroyed a three-story apartment building at 9316 Marquette avenue, South Chicago, Sunday.

While the occupants of the burning building were struggling with the smoke and flames in the hope of foreing their way to safety, the firemen, who were responding to the alarm, were vainly waiting for a freight train, which blocked the way of the fire engines, to move away from the crossing and give an open road to the fire.

Marshal Driscoll, in charge of the firemen, called to the conductor and brakeman to move the train, but they refused to comply with his request. The police were sent for and the crew was arrested. Then under orders of the fire marshal the train was backed from the crossing, but by the time the firemen reached the burning building the structure had been destroyed. Scattered among the embers were found the charred remains of the victims. The bodies were burned beyond recognition, and were identified in various ways.

Conductor Brown, who was arrested, claims one of the firemen uncoupled the airbrakes without turning the angle cock setting the brakes, and that the engineer was unable to move the train until the pipes were filled again and the brakes released. After an investigation by the police officials the train crew was released on bonds Sunday night.

EVACUATED PEKING.

United States Cavalry and Artillery Marched From Capital to Ton-Ku—Farewell Ceremonies.

Peking, May 6.—The United States cavalry and artillery left Peking Sunday morning to march to Ton-Ku. Imposing farewell ceremonies attended their departure. Sir Alfred Gaselee and the other British generals, with their staffs, were present and the British commander sent a detachment of Baluchi's who escorted the Americans outside the city wall.

Gen. Chaffee publicly thanked the cavalry and artillery for their services in the international relief expedition and for their behavior, since which has been, he said, a credit to themselves and their nation.

The infantry and headquarters staff will leave by rail as soon as the transports arrive at Taku.

FIGHTING IN MANCHURIA.

Of Three Bands Which Were Menacing the Peace Two Have Been Annihilated.

St. Petersburg, May 6.—The Russky Invalid publishes details of the recent operations in Manchuria. It appears that the North Manchurian division, under Gen. Zerpitski, fought over 20 engagements, losing altogether 24 men killed and seven officers and 61 wounded, two officers having died of their wounds. A quantity of guns and rifles were captured.

The total results of the operations is that of three bands which at the beginning of the year were menacing the peace of Manchuria, two have been annihilated according to the Russky Invalid, and the third, after sustaining a number of defeats, is now being pursued by the Russian division.

STATE NEWS PICK-UPS.

RACING AT LOUISVILLE.

Miss Charlie, With 25 to 1 Chalked Up Against Her, Won in the Second Event.

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—Wednesday's racing at Churchill Downs was again marked by splendid conditions of track and weather. About 3,000 people witnessed a fair day's sport. A majority of the events resulted in the victory of second choices. The feature of the card was the Turf Congress handicap at a mile and a sixteenth. The Unknown was the most fancied and looked like a winner, but after leading to the stretch he was beaten out a couple of lengths in a drive by Caviar, a five-to-one chance. Isobel ran third.

Louisville, Ky., May 3.—The weather was again very warm Thursday, but in spite of the heat a good crowd was in attendance at Churchill Downs.

There was no stake event on the card, but the racing was highly interesting. Favorites, two of them at odds-on, took four of the day's events. The prettiest finish of the day came in the fourth race. Princess Otillie got off in front and led to the half, where Beauty Book moved up alongside her. When they came into the stretch these two and Rodd were all three abreast. They raced down the stretch together, and Woods landed the Princess first in a hard drive by a length. Beauty Book got the place by a neck from Rodd.

Louisville, Ky., May 4.—The lovely weather which has characterized the meeting at Churchill Downs was again in evidence Friday and combined with one of the best cards so far offered drew a large crowd. The sport was of high order, and was marked by close and exciting finishes. Miss Charlie, in the second event, upset all calculations by winning with 25 to 1 chalked up against her. The withdrawal of Gen. Mart Mary from the third race left only three starters to face the flag, and the race seemed to be at the mercy of The Unknown, whom the books held at the prohibitive odds of 1 to 4. He did not disappoint, winning easily from Bangle, who ran second.

CONFEDERATE MONEY.

A One Hundred Dollar Bill Worked Off by a Follower of the Races at Louisville.

Louisville, Ky., May 2.—The merriest swindler working to-day is following the races. This individual Tuesday took a $100 confederate bill, of which a bushel basket were required to buy a ham even when the confederacy was at its best. With it he succeeded in securing $99 and a ticket to the track.

When the Jockey club counted up its money Tuesday night it found a bulky bill which on one side resembled a bona fide $1 bill of present currency. On the other was stamped $100 in queer-looking money. The whole bill was so bulky from the paste that it was as thick as three ordinary ones.

The ticket seller who turned it in said it had been shoved under his nose in the busiest part of the day and that he had handed over a race ticket and $99 in change.

President Schulte, of the Jockey club has issued a bulletin to the ticket sellers to the effect that the war is over.

Upward of 200 men quit work on various buildings throughout the city Thursday, and labor leaders declare that unless all the contractors agree to employ only union men a general strike in all the building trades will be ordered by Friday night. BRADFORD BROS.,
FLORENCE, - - KENTUCKY.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, something neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and rises good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes. If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a strain, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 60, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOL. XXVI. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, MAY 15, 1901. NO. 30.

THE recruiting station at Cincinnati has been notified that no more soldiers will be required for the Philippines.

THE work of rebuilding Jacksonville has begun. A more substantial city will be reared on the ashes of the old town.

THE trials of the various persons accused of the commissary scandals at Manila indicate the existence of a well-defined plot to rob the Government.

GOV. BECKHAM ought to make a clean sweep at the Western Kentucky Asylum. Out of his own mouth Dr. McCormick makes out a case that fully justifies his removal.

DR. W. W. RAY, of Springfield was appointed by Gov. Beckham as the successor af Dr. McCormick, removed. The Board of Commissioners still proclaim their faith in McCormick.

IT is said that ex-Governor Bradley has announced that he will not be a candidate for United States Senator. It may be that he does not want to give Senator Deboe an opportunity to take his scalp again.

WHO are the people who are losing the sums in Wall Street that the other fellows are making? Somebody must lose or nobody could win at the stock market game. Who are the losers? We never hear anything about them.

IT is claimed that ex-President Cleveland made $400,000 on Northern Pacific while the market was on the rampage, last Thursday. That beats being President of the United States for four years and proves that Grover's lucky star has not deserted him.

THE struggle for the control of the Northern Pacific Railroad caused a panic on Wall Street, last Thursday, which bankrupted thousands. The stock advanced from $160 to $1,000 per share, and the New York banks loaned, $16,600,000 that was used in an attempt to stem the current.

SINCE RICHARD KNOTT has identified himself with the Republican party, the Louisville Evening Post has begun an effort to disorganize that party, and is making a hard fight against the party leaders in Louisville. If Knott is denied the privilege of ruling he does his best to ruin, and the Republicans would be glad to get rid of him.

THE chief of the section of seed and plant introduction of the United States Department of Agriculture, has prepared a report of the influence of introduced plants on agricultural development, which may come as a shock to those who are of the opinion that everything good in the agricultural line originated in this country. With the exception of the pumpkin and a few grapes and small fruit, a few forage plants, grasses and native drug plants, he says, every crop required for the manifold needs of a diversified farming industry and grown on a commercial scale in the United States has been introduced from foreign countries.

THE following is from the Louisville Times: "John W. Yerkes will be the candidate of the Administration for Senator in the remote contingency that the next Kentucky Legislature is Republican. He is not expected to announce formally, but his campaign will be begun in due time; in fact, all arrangements have been made to that end. Former Governor Bradley has declared out. The recent visit of Collector Sapp to Washington, in response to a telegram from Mr. Yerkes, and their conference with Senator Mark Hanna, related to the Kentucky Senatorial race. As the result of this conference it can be stated on good authority that the Collector has had a decided change of heart, for reasons best known to himself. Not long since he was an ardent supporter of Senator Deboe, and publicly proclaimed that, if a Republican was elected to the Senate, Deboe would be the man."

JUDGE J. W. GREENE PASSES AWAY.

Judge John W. Greene died at his home in Owenton, Owen county, at 7:30 o'clock p. m., last Saturday, after an illness of Brights disease of a year's duration. The funeral took place Monday at 1 o'clock p. m., in the presence of an immense concourse of friends. John W. Greene was born in Grant county on August 8, 1842. His father, soon after his son's birth moved to Owen county, near Poplar Grove, and was prominently identified with the farming interests of the county.

John W. Greene attended the public schools of the county, but never had the advantages of college training. In September, 1862, at the age of twenty, he joined Company E, Fifth Confederate Infantry, and was a prominent figure in the Civil War. He was engaged in many battles during that conflict, the most important of which were Chickamauga, Missionary Ridge and Jonesboro. At the latter engagement, he was severely wounded, and it was found necessary to amputate his leg. Entering the army a private by his daring and gallantry, he rose to the position of First Lieutenant, which he held at the time he was wounded.

After his return home, poor and a cripple for life, he engaged in teaching school until he was elected Sheriff in 1866. He served in this capacity for two terms and was admitted to the Owen county bar in 1871.

In 1878 he was the standard bearer of the Democratic party for County Judge, and was elected by an overwhelming majority. At the expiration of his term of office, he returned to the practice of law. In 1892 he defeated the Hon. Warren Monfort for Judge of the Fifteenth judicial district and held that position at the time of his death.

Judge Greene was twice married. His first wife was Margaret M. Gaines, of Henry county, who died in 1882. She was the mother of Frank C. Greene, a prominent and successful young lawyer and editor of the Owen News. Judge Green's surviving wife was Mrs. Ada Williams, of Gallatin county.

Judge Green was a speaker of more than ordinary capacity. He was affable, and had a host of warm personal and political friends.

He was a consistent member of the Baptist church and a prominent member of the I. O. O. F., and an honest, conscientious and painstaking official, in whom all had the utmost confidence.

WHAT has become of Dr, Hunter, the Republican gum-shoe statesman? He appears to have dropped entirely out of sight and may be out of mind.

OFFICIAL reports to the State Department assert that more than a million Chinese have perished as a result of the operations of the allies there. Consider what this means. Neither Attila, nor Timour, or any of the other great killers of history ever slaughtered one tenth of that number in double the time.

THE impression is growing that the Supreme Court will decide against the constitutionality of the tax imposed on United States goods shipped to Porto Rico, and will dismiss all the other cases for various errors in bringing them. This would be a defeat and yet a splendid victory for the administration, as it would leave it free to shut out colonial products by a tariff.

THE death of Judge Greene creates a vacancy in the office of Circuit Judge in this district, which will be filled by the Governor, who will appoint some one to fill the vacancy until the next regular election, and it is believed in this county that J. M. Lassing will receive the appointment, in which event a vacancy will occur in the office of county attorney. The vacancy in the office of County Attorney will be filled by appointment of the County Judge until the first of January, 1902, when a newly elected County Attorney will take the office. A Circuit Judge will be elected next November.

Farm, Stock and Crop.

In Bracken, J. A. Fisher, aged 82, raised 1,730 pounds of tobacco on one acre, and sold at 7½ cents.

In Jessamine county dogs killed $500 worth of sheep belonging to J. H. Boggs. Nine of them were imported Southdowns.

Thomas Conlee sold to the Filson Lumber Co., last week about 100 barrels of corn, in crib, for $2,50 per barrel.—Stanton News.

Newton, Kan., has just shipped to California a train load of eggs. There were 12 huge refrigerator cars containing 144,000 dozen, or nearly 2,000,000 eggs.

Charlie and Allen Stevens cut a blackberry briar on their father's farm that measured 16 feet and 7 inches in length, and one inch in diameter.—Spout Spring Times.

The farmer who sows clover with oats is pretty sure to get a satisfactory stand. A failure is rare. Plow in with a double shovel, sow the clover seed and brush or harrow lightly.

Major John D. Harris, one of the largest cattle raisers of Madison county, lost twelve of his herd by death during the recent blizzard. Distillery slop, which he had been feeding them, combined with the unfavorable conditions of the weather, is supposed to have caused their death.

Thomas Moore, Diarendon Springs, Vermont, was in Richmond looking for a good jack. He selected one, a four-year-old individual of Col. I. S. Irvine, paying a handsome price for him. Mr. Moore says there is not a jack in the State of Vermont and no more than 25 mules. He says he will experiment in this line and hopes for good results.—Richmond Pantagraph.

The outlook for wheat in this county is not encouraging. Some crops look well, but these are the exception, by far the majority being spotted and thin on the ground. Careful injury among representative farmers in all sections of the county, establishes the fact conclusively that the tobacco crop this year will be at least one-fourth under the average. In some sections the falling off will run from a third to one-half.—Mt. Sterling Gazette.

There is a new industry in Owenton conducted by an old colored man and his wife. They collect all the old tin cans, gutters, etc., and burn them, securing a kind of block tin which they sell at 33c per pound. They make from 25 to 50 pounds per day.—George Lucus, of near Monterey, died last Sunday with what the physicians declared to be either small pox or Cuban itch. By reason of the dreaded and dangerous disease, it was difficult to find any one who would bury him. Reports have it that it was 3 hours after life left him before any one would touch his body to prepare it for burial. It is to be hoped that this disease will not scatter.—Owen News.

A Grant County school teacher and a prominent Boone county belle will be married before the summer solstice begins, so a little bird has whispered to the Courier. Can you guess who the school teacher is? We will give you the facts in a week or so, so don't get impatient.—Tuesday a number of officers, from various parts of the county, of the November election were in town delivering the keys of the ballot boxes as required by law. Several of them were complaining considerably about the task, it entailing a long ride into town with no compensation. The law requires that the election officers shall keep the keys of the ballot boxes for six months and at the end of that time shall deliver them to the County Clerk in person, when the ballots will be taken out and destroyed—Williamstown Courier.

It Saved His Leg.

For Ulcers, Wounds, Piles, it's the best salve in the world. Cure guaranteed Only 25c. Sold by W. F. McKim; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Oelsner; Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. Grant, Grant.

J. R. Clutterbuck has been very busy building a capacious cistern at his house. James Hogan, the popular cistern builder, is the contractor.

The local rooters for the Cincinnati Reds have been having their inning ever since the season began, and hope that a serious turn will not come.

R. P. Rice and Ben Snyder, of Florence, have been making an active canvass of the county in the interest of the machine company they represent.

The Odd Fellows at this place will have a musicale and strawberry festival on the night of June 8th. They will endeavor to make the occasion the feature of the season. Program will be published in due time.

There never were finer prospects for a very large crop of fruit. If half the blooms develope into fruit it will have to be shaken off of the trees to prevent them from being broken to pieces.

Col. Graddy went to Crittenden, Grant county, one morning last week, and purchased a handsome horse for a New York party, and returned home in time for dinner. That is what can properly be called hustling.

The county now has eight thoroughly organized and active granges, and more will soon be in operation. Grangerism has taken on new life in Boone county in the last few months, and an order, which, for some time, was dead, has been resuscitated—the lingering spark has been rekindled into a lively blaze.

Dr. Williamson, of Bellevue, discovered a breaking out on his forehead and hands, a few days since, and he straightway displayed a yellow flag and quarantined. He waited developments for several days, and the disease not developing as a genuine case of small pox should, he sent for Dr. Smith, chairman of the local board of health, to come down and see if he thought it safe to raise the quarantine. Dr. Clore, of Bullittsville, one of the members of the county board of health, went down to see him last Saturday, and found him with a well developed case of varioloid, and the quarantene was not raised.

It is thought that about one-half of the wheat on the lands that were overflowed will turn out all right. Many of our citizens say that after every big rise in the river the water in their cisterns becomes hard instead of remaining soft as it was previous to rise. John Weeks "gigeed" a buffalo fish weighing 51 pounds, and Jim Sterling one of 40 pounds, in the slough running from the floodgate to Tanner's creek Sunday.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Jasper Sullivan, supervisor of roads in one of the districts in the Bellevue precinct had 10 or 11 of the roadworkers in his bailiwick before County Judge Roberts, last Saturday, charged with failing and refusing to work on the public roads when warned to do so. The boys when brought before the court relented and agreed to make good the time they failed to work and to pay the costs of the proceedings. This was satisfactory to all parties and the prosecution was not pushed any further.

Notice to the Public.

Those reports that have been circulated that my daughter has the small pox are malicious and for the purpose of injuring my business. My family has been vaccinated and every precaution has been taken to avoid contracting the disease and I feel that prievous injustice has been done me by the persons who circulated the false report. There have been but two cases in Bellevue, and they were confined to one family, and it is not believed that anyone will take small pox by reason of contracting it from either of those persons, both of whom are now about well. JOE BIRKLE

W. C. Rouse, of Kidville, and Hubert Bachelor, were fishing down on Gunpowder, one night last week. About the time they reached the lonesomest locality on the creek, they heard a noise that sounded like the screams of a woman at a considerable distance. They paid no attention to it at first, but as it came closer and closer they began to grow nervous, and when it was within a few hundred yards of them and made the lofty hills on either side of the creek ring with its screams, the two fishermen were taken with a sudden and irresistible desire to go home, and up the creek they went at a Maud S. gait, reaching Onnie Rouse's almost exhausted. Lum says he has heard a great many different kinds of noises in his life, but never before did he hear one that gave him such excellent use of his lower limbs. He does not know what made the unearthly noise, nor will he visit the creek in that locality again at night to find out, and all his appointments to go fishing at night have been cancelled.

RIOT IN DETROIT.

Twelve Citizens and Five Policemen Were More or Less Injured.

Detroit, Mich., May 11.—Fully 10,000 men and boys ran riot in the main streets of this city for more than three hours keeping up a continual running fight with police, both mounted and on foot. As far as known 12 citizens and five policemen were injured. The names of only two citizens are known at present. They are Mike Waldin and Louis Caplin. The heads of both men were crushed by being trampled on by horses of the mounted police in a charge on the crowd.

The police officers injured are Jas. Tuemey, scalp cut by brick; Henry Scott, hit on head with cobblestone; Thomas Murphy, cheek cut open with brick; George Moore, badly cut about head by brick and taken home in an ambulance; Barney Roonan, hit with a brick.

The riot began when Superintendent of Police Frank Andrews, who recently superseded the old police board through the passage of the ripper bill by the legislature, issued an order to the police to allow no one to stand about the wagon of "Tom" Rawden, a local single tax exhorter, who had incurred the ill-will of the police director by the extraordinary nature of his remarks on so-called wealthy "tax-dodgers."

VALLEY FLOODED.

A Cloudburst Wrought Considerable Damage at Tarentum, Pa., and Vicinity.

Pittsburgh, Pa., May 11.—A cloudburst in Tarentum and vicinity did many thousand dollars damage. Rain fell in torrents for an hour, barns were washed down off the hills, and in some cases were upturned against residences. Bridges were washed away. The railroad bed was washed away at Creighton. The railroad track was covered with three feet of water for more than three miles. Telegraph and telephone poles and trees were washed down onto the tracks for a long distance, and at least 700 cellars were flooded. People were panic stricken, and many moved their furniture from their homes. It looked as though the whole town would be washed away from the rise of waters, and even on the higher grounds houses were endangered.

Before the storm abated the rain turned to hail, and inside of ten minutes more than an inch of hail covered the ground for miles. Big landslides are reported from up the road and across the river on the Valley railroad, but it is not known here just what the loss will be. No loss of life has been reported.

A CLOUDBURST.

Considerable Property Was Destroyed in the Vicinity of Wheeling, W. Va.

Wheeling, W. Va., May 11.—A cloudburst west of Wheeling caused the overflowing of Peters, Chapels and Woods runs, tributaries of Wheeling creek. At Triadelphia, the Baltimore and Ohio tracks were covered with water for several hours, and trains were held up, including two passenger trains. At Greggsville a little child, name unknown, is said to have been washed away and drowned. Between Greggsville and Heatherwood, a suburb, the wall of water came down ten feet in height, taking bridges, outhouses and logs. It is feared several lives were lost, but nothing definite can be learned. In Wheeling the rain fall was 1.1 inches in 40 minutes.

CARPENTERS STRIKE.

Those Employed at the Exposition Grounds Refused to Work With "Unfair" Lumber.

Buffalo, N. Y., May 11.—Six hundred and fifty carpenters and joiners employed at the exposition grounds went on strike. Unless the men's demands are granted by the exposition company the walking delegates threaten to call out every man employed at the exposition grounds Saturday morning. They do not ask for higher wages. The trouble is over what the carpenters call "unfair" lumber, which, as interpreted by the union men, means material furnished by mills employing non-union men. The present strike is the outgrowth of the recent strike of mill hands. Most of the mill owners settled with their men, but a few are still holding out.

THE NICKEL PROCESS.

Government Controls the Method of Hardening Armor Plate.

Past Issues Have Been Definitely Settled and Future Trouble Avoided—Price Was Between $30,000 and $60,000.

Washington, May 9.—The government has compromised the issue over the use of the nickel process for hardening armor plate for warships in such a way that in the future this process may be used by the government itself if it should undertake the manufacture of its own armor, or by any private concern furnishing armor for American ships. Claims have been pending for years, and in settling them the government not only closed up past issues, but insisted on clearing the way of possible complications in the future. The claimants sought to limit the adjustment to the armor furnished by the two concerns heretofore furnishing to the government. Foreseeing, however, that the government itself might wish to make armor at some time, or that competition might extend to other large concerns, Secretary Long insisted that the release be broad enough to cover armor making by the United States or by any concern working for the government. The points were finally conceded. The compromise figure paid by the government was between $30,000 and $60,000.

A GIFTED AND BEAUTIFUL GIRL

Threatened With Nervous Prostration, PROMPTLY SAVED BY PE-RU-NA.

MISS ROSE CULLEN, OF BUTTE, MONT.

Miss Rose Cullen, President Young Woman's Club, of Butte, Mont., writes from 921 Galena street, as follows:

"Peruna has many friends in Butte. I cannot say too much in praise of it. While finishing school I became very nervous and exhausted from over-study. I was weak and sick, and could neither eat, sleep, nor enjoy life. A couple of bottles of Peruna put new life in me. I find that having it in the house and taking a dose off and on keeps me in fine health.

"A large number of my friends place Peruna at the head of all medicines."— Miss Rose Cullen.

How Peruna Quickly Cures Backache, the Base of Womankind.

MRS. G. W. HEARD, Hempstead, Texas, writes:

"We have moved recently, and I must have lifted something that was too heavy for me in straightening things up, for I had such a backache and could hardly stand on my feet at all. Beside, I was so tired all the time. My face was spotted and I was very thin. I took one bottle of Peruna and was soon real well. When I feel tired and all run down I take Peruna and feel all right before I finish one bottle. I know it is a wonderful medicine, and both myself and husband praise Peruna.

"There has been a great deal of sickness through this part of the country, but, thanks to Peruna, which we use freely, our own family has escaped with almost no sickness at all.

"Could you but see our baby Ruby (to whom we gave Peruna for bowel trouble), you would see from her robust looks that you need no better advertisement in this little town. She is so fat and rosy, is nearly five years old now, and is a great believer in Peruna."—Mrs. G. W. Heard.

Given Up to Die—All Doctors Failed—Is Proved to be Catarrh of Stomach and Was Cured by Peruna.

W. A. Mitchell, dealer in general merchandise, of Martin, Ga., writes:

"I wrote you some time ago concerning my wife's case. She had tried all of the best doctors, and we got to where we thought all they did was against her. She weighed about 190 pounds when she was in good health. When she commenced with our family physician in April, 1898, she weighed about 130, but kept going down all the time. She went to Atlanta, Ga., and took treatment, but it did her no good. Then she went to Harmony Grove, Ga., and took treatment from the best physician there for three months. She kept going down under his treatment, although he was considered the best physician in the county. She went down from 130 pounds to 68, and we saw she could not live long. She was a skeleton. We consulted an old physician who told her to use Peruna. She gradually improved and got stronger. She has gained 38 pounds since she has taken Peruna, and is gaining every day, and does her own housework.

"She was well known when she was so low, and now everybody wants to know what cured her. She had indigestion and catarrh of the stomach. It is as good for children as for grown people. We haven't had to have a doctor for one of our children since 1898."—W. A. Mitchell.

If you do not derive prompt and satisfactory results from the use of Peruna, write at once to Dr. Hartman, giving a full statement of your case and he will be pleased to give you his valuable advice gratis.

Address Dr. Hartman, President of The Hartman Sanitarium, Columbus, Ohio.

CHAMOIS AS COASTERS.

Animals in the Alps Enjoy a Swift Slide Down the Steep Mountain Side.

Nearly all animals are fond of play, and sometimes their play is almost a systematic game. If you should come across a lot of goats playing football, with chosen sides, captains and all that sort of thing, you would be speechless with amazement, and yet a tourist saw something on the Alps that is scarcely less astonishing, says the New York Herald.

It was in summer, and a flock of chamois had climbed up to where the snow never melts, evidently to play on it. Their movements were so peculiar that he watched them carefully. They had found a steep, snow covered incline, to the upper end of which they went in a body, just like a party of boys intent on coasting.

And that is precisely what the chamois intended, for two or three of them at a time would crouch down at the beginning of the descent, work all four legs to get a start, and slide over the surface of the snow to the bottom. When they reached the bottom they would rise, shake themselves and climb up the incline again, only to repeat their trip down. This they did time and again, their comrades at the upper end watching them with great interest until it came their turn to coast.

The coasting ground was about 150 yards from top to bottom, and the chamois would shoot down it with the speed of sleds, the snow rising about them in a powdery cloud.

There could be no doubt whatever that they did it for sport, and they seemed to enjoy it as much as boys enjoy coasting down a well-packed hill.

Progress in Aerial Navigation.

THIEF CAUGHT BY TURTLES.

The Snappers Grabbed the Man's Hand and Held Him a Close Prisoner.

The pickpocket who tried to "pinch" a likely looking man's pocketbook and found his fingers in the grasp of two snapping turtles was a Japanese. A native traveler in Japan had bought the turtles, and, being afraid that he would be charged heavily for their transportation as live animals on the train, he placed them in a small portable trunk which he carried. When he got on the train he held the trunk so carefully under his arm that a thief who was in the crowd was sure the man had something valuable in the box. So he got into the same car and took an adjoining seat. Taking the first opportunity, he cut a small hole in the trunk with a sharp knife and slipped in his hand.

About this time the turtles concluded that there was "something doing" and they took hold of his fingers in a hearty way. Gritting his teeth, the thief tried to withdraw his hand, but he couldn't. Then he howled and the owner of the trunk seized him and turned him over to the train people, who at the next station gave him to a policeman. The incident, however, wasn't closed until the traveler was punished for violation of the railway regulations.

Cannon as a Teacher of Science.

M. Maurice Levy, the president of the French Academy of Sciences, remarked in a recent address that the cannon is one of the most instructive laboratories that science possesses. It was the modern cannon, he said, which suggested the application of explosive gases to the driving of engines. The experience of the immense pressures obtained in cannon also led to the use of pressures in steam machines, which a few years ago would have been regarded as impracticable. Thus experiments intended primarily for the purposes of war had resulted in the advance of the triumphs of peace.

MRS. M'KINLEY ILL.

Her Condition Said Not to Be Alarming, But She Is Worn Out By Her Long Journey.

Los Angeles, Cal., May 10.—From a broad blue canopied pavilion, surrounded by the members of his cabinet, Gov. Nash, of Ohio, and notables from many states, President McKinley Thursday reviewed the floral parade of the Los Angeles carnival. The city was packed. The population of Los Angeles, according to the census, is over 100,000, but the streets must have held almost twice that number Thursday.

The president rode at the head of the parade in an open carriage drawn by six white horses, with yellow satin harness. At the head of each horse walked a Spanish caballero in green velvet trimmed in gold braid. The carriage was a mass of white and yellow blossoms. A troop of cavalry with yellow horse-hair plumes waving above their helmets and wreaths of flowers across their shoulders and blanket rolls of red carnations behind their saddles, headed by a band playing "The Star Spangled Banner," preceded the president's carriage to the reviewing stand. As each carriage reached the reviewing stand the ladies in it saluted the president, who was kept on his feet most of the time returning these charming greetings. He apparently enjoyed the experience greatly. Each lady carried a bag of rose leaves, and after saluting the president, she threw a handful of the soft petals into his box. Before the parade was over he was ankle deep in rose leaves.

In the morning previous to the floral parade, the president and party were driven through the resident section of Los Angeles. Thursday afternoon the ladies of the president's party went to Pasadena and took a drive through, while the president made a trip to the National Soldiers' home near Santa Monica. It is 18 miles distant, and he made the journey in electric cars. Three thousand of the president's old comrades of the civil war greeted him there. The old soldiers gave the president a remarkable demonstration.

Considerable excitement was caused by the discovery, after the speaking, that a pickpocket, who had been at work in the crowd, had relieved two members of the party, Secretary Wilson and Col. Chas. A. Moore, of their pocketbooks. Later the thief was arrested.

Del Monte, Cal., May 13.—Owing to the state of Mrs. McKinley's health the president and Mrs. McKinley, accompanied by Dr. Rixey and Miss Barber, the president's niece, left for San Francisco at 11:30 o'clock Sunday. They will go to the residence of Henry T. Scott there, and it is hoped that the complete rest will have a beneficial effect upon Mrs. McKinley. Her condition is said not to be alarming, but she is worn out by her long journey and it was considered wise to take her to San Francisco, where she could have proper nursing, and where specialists could be consulted if necessary.

The programme for the party between here and San Francisco will be carried out as originally planned, and the president expects to be able to join the party at San Jose Monday afternoon if Mrs. McKinley's condition warrants it. The trip to San Francisco will be made in four hours.

San Francisco, May 13.—At 9 o'clock Secretary Cortelyou gave the following bulletin:

"Mrs. McKinley stood the trip from Monterey extremely well, and is resting comfortably at Mr. Scott's. Her attack of indigestion, it is believed, will yield promptly to rest and remedies, while the bone felon on her hand is healing nicely. Dr. Hirschfelder, of San Francisco, is in consultation with Dr. Rixey."

Jacksonville, Fla., May 13.—The relief association is doing stupendous work particularly in the commissary and labor departments. There is abundant work for everybody who can do manual labor, but difficulty is experienced in getting the colored men to work.

STRIKE THREATENED.

About 150,000 Machinists Throughout the Country May Go Out.

It Is Expected to Take Place on May 20 Unless Some Arrangements Can Be Effected in the Meantime.

Washington, May 13.—A general strike involving directly 150,000 machinists and indirectly 500,000 men in metal-working trades is expected to take place on May 20 unless some arrangement is effected in the meantime. This is the statement made Sunday night by President James O'Connell, of the International Association of Machinists, who has his headquarters in this city. The demands of the men, the refusal of which threatens to precipitate the strike, Mr. O'Connell said, are for a working day of nine hours and an increase of 12½ per cent. in wages, or in other words, ten hours pay for nine hours work. The matter, he said, has been under consideration for some time, and every effort has been made by the Machinists' association to avoid resorting to a strike, but such action, he says, is now necessary if the workmen hope to attain the end they are striving for. Some time ago, through the efforts of the international association, the latter secured from the National Metal Trades association the employers of about 25 per cent. of the men who would be affected by the strike concessions by which a general work day of nine hours was to become operative on May 20 of this year.

The question of an increase of wages, however, or its equivalent, the granting of ten hours pay for nine hours work, remained unsettled. Saturday the representatives of the Metal Trades association and the International Association of Machinists held a conference in New York, at which an attempt was made to reach an agreement on the wage matter so that the strike proposed for May 20 could be avoided. Mr. O'Connell, however, says that the employers refused to arbitrate the question of wages nominally, but that they expressed a willingness that this matter should be settled by employers locally, each individual case to be treated as such. This method is unsatisfactory to the representatives of the Machinists' association, who express the opinion that this would prolong indefinitely the settlement of the question.

Upon his return to the city Mr. O'Connell promptly prepared the order for the strike, and it was sent out by mail Sunday.

Mr. O'Connell says that about 200 firms whose employes represent probably 20 per cent of the 500,000 men who will be affected by the proposed strike have signed agreements for the reduction in hours of labor and the increase of pay so that the agitation on the subject already has benefitted them materially.

For prudential reason the executive committee has determined not at this time to apply the strike order to the railroads.

Whether it will be done in the future will depend altogether on developments.

TEXTILE INDUSTRIES.

All Men and Women Employed Will Be Members of One Great Labor Organization.

Boston, Mass., May 13.—As a result of the textile workers' convention, which concluded its sessions at the Quincy house Sunday night, 750,000 men and women employed in the textile industries of North America will be members of one great labor organization, to be known as the United Textile Workers of America. Representatives of the International Union of Textile Workers and the American Federation of Textile Operatives were present, with James Duncan, vice president of the American Federation of Labor, acting as chairman.

Both organizations decided to amalgamate and apply for a charter under the title named. After that is secured, the Mule Spinners' union and the Loom Fixers' union will affiliate themselves with the organization, which will eventually mean a membership of 300,000, and an amicable understanding between textile employes in the north and south.

WEALTHY FARMER'S DEED.

Killed His Wife, Assaulted His Stepson, and Attempted to Take His Own Life.

Bloomington, Ill., May 13.—Merritt Chism Sunday killed his wife on his farm in White Oak township, this county, stabbed his stepson, Harvey Freeland, and then tried to kill himself. The attack upon Mrs. Chism was made with all the ferocity of a mad man. As she was about to start to church Sunday morning in a buggy, accompanied by two of Chism's little daughters, her stepdaughters, a quarrel arose. Chism jumped into the buggy, and with a knife repeatedly cut his wife in the face and on the neck. Then he threw her into the road and began to jump upon her almost lifeless body, stabbing her also, over and over. The woman's 12-year-old son, Harvey Freeland, attacked Chism with a baseball bat. The man took the bat away from the child, and turning to the bleeding woman in the road, he struck her on the head three times, smashing in her skull and scattering her brains on the ground.

When he started again to stab the woman young Freeland grappled with him and tried to hold the hand in which Chism held his knife. In the unequal and brief struggle which followed the boy's fingers were almost cut off and he was stabbed by Chism in the arm.

Chism then fled across the fields and jumped into a stock well. The water was not deep enough to drown him, and, climbing out, he went to the house of his son, where he tried to kill himself with a pistol. The son prevented him from taking his life, and went with him to Bloomington, where he gave himself up to the sheriff.

Chism is one of the richest farmers in this county, having inherited a hundred acres of land and $200,000.

BIG UNDERTAKING.

The Largest Bridge in the World Will Be Erected From Hoboken to Manhattan.

New York, May 13.—William J. Amend, counsel for the North River Bridge Co., and one of its directors, Sunday made the definite announcement that the Pennsylvania railroad is back of the company's scheme to build a bridge from Hoboken to Manhattan.

He said that contracts were now being negotiated between the bridge company and the various railroad companies whose traffic will be accommodated by the bridge.

As soon as these could be executed, he said, work on the structure would be commenced. It is estimated that the bridge can be completed within four years.

The bridge is to be only for the transportation of passengers, and the plan involves the erection of an enormous terminal, bounded by Sixth and Seventh avenues, Twenty-fourth and Twenty-eighth streets. The bridge will be the largest in the world. There will be 16 tracks for railroad trains, and the strength of the structure will be such that they can be run at full speed.

The estimated cost of the bridge with its approaches and the passenger terminal is $80,000,000.

STATE ITEMS OF INTEREST.

CHURCHILL DOWNS.

The Feature of the Card Was the Juvenile Stakes—There Were Four Starters.

Louisville, Ky., May 9.—The threatening weather kept away the crowd from Churchill Downs Wednesday afternoon. Heavy rains had made the track a veritable sea of mud, and this contributed as much as anything else to the upset of many betting calculations.

The feature was the Frank Fehr stakes at one mile, and eight starters faced the flag. Robinson's entry, Chorus Boy, and Mr. Phinizy was made favorite and opened at 2 to 1. The heavy play that came in on the entry quickly forced the price to 8 to 5. Ben. Mart Gary had a strong backing at 11 to 5. Chorus Boy got off well to a good start, and made a show of his field. At the half he was leading by four lengths, and he passed the judges' stand first by two lengths under a pull. Reccie came strong in the stretch and finished second, with Mr. Phinizy third. Chorus Boy ran the distance in 1:45¼.

Louisville, Ky., May 10.—The weather was still cloudy Thursday and the track at Churchill Downs very muddy. There was no stake event to draw a large crowd, so, probably in deference to threatening skies, but 1,500 people turned out. Favorites and well backed second choices captured five of the events, while the fourth was taken by a 25 to 1 chance, Teckla, who beat the odds-on favorite, Bat Garrett, all the way round. The feature of the day was the handicap at six furlongs. His Lordship and Lady Schoorr were scratched and this left Ben Mac d'Hui, Senator Beveridge and the Star of Bethlehem to face the barrier. Ben Mac d'Hui, held at 15 to 20 in the books, got off well to a good start and was never in trouble, winning easily from Senator Beveridge and the Star third.

Louisville, Ky., May 11.—The track at Churchill Downs Friday afternoon was again in very bad shape, a heavy rain just before the first race making it still deeper in mud. The feature of the card was the Juvenile stakes at five furlongs and four starters went to the post. The issue was supposed to lie between Jordan and the Schorr colt, John Peters, and they were held at 11 to 10 and 2 to 1 respectively. Hans Wagner and Harry Beck had a small following. Jordan got off rather poorly but Cochran quickly took him to the front and he won with ease by two lengths, with Harry Beck a length in front of Hans Wagner for the place.

The crowd, however, probably took more general interest in the third race, which was for the gentlemen's cup offered by the jockey club. There were five starters, and Mr. Hickman, putting up a beautiful ride on Piramo, landed his mount winner, with King Elkwood, Mr. Hudson up, second. Don Clarencio, ridden by Mr. Howard, got third place.

Newport, Ky., May 11.—A committee, representing the Latonia track, which is a member of the Western Jockey club, called on Manager Fowler, of the Newport track, Friday, looking toward a compromise to prevent a clash between Latonia and Newport during the next two weeks. Louisville, Ky., May 10.—W. L. Royse, a student at the Kentucky School of Medicine, was stabbed to death there late Thursday afternoon by John Withers, colored, assistant janitor at the school. The crime was committed because Royse remonstrated with Withers for being drunk. The Negro escaped after being chased through the streets for some time by a large crowd of Royse's fellow students. Royse lived at Sharpsburg, Ky.

Louisville, Ky., May 11.—Guarded by 11 stalwart policemen, John Withers, colored, was presented in the police court Friday morning, charged with the murder of W. L. Royse, student and interne at the Kentucky School of Medicine. The presence of 300 angry medical students caused Chief Hagar to take every precaution to prevent an outbreak of mob violence in the court room. The examining trial was passed until Monday.

Early Friday morning the classmates and fellow students of the murdered man began to gather around the city hall. All wore the old gold and purple of the school, and over the colors was pinned a bit of crepe. The police outwitted the waiting students by taking the prisoner to jail through a secret passage seldom used.

TAYLOR COUNTY.

United States Marshal's Posse May Be Sent to Collect a Bonded Indebtedness.

Louisville, Ky., May 9.—If the bonded indebtedness of Taylor county, created in favor of the Chesapeake and Ohio road, is not paid, a United States marshal's posse will be sent to the county, as was done when Muhlenberg county failed to pay judgment rendered against it by United States Judge Barr, who later compelled the county to pay the expenses of the posse in addition to the judgment. Taylor county originally voted $200,000. A compromise effected with the bondholders for $80,000 was repudiated by the county.

Marcy Hubbert brought suit in the United States court and was given judgment to the amount of $2,933 and $359.96 in costs against the individual taxpayers.

United States Marshal James is in possession of the assessment books of the county, and the levy will be made in accordance with the prorate of the special commissioner of the court, Dave May.

THE OUTLAW RULE.

T. P. Hayes Brings Suit Against the New Louisville Jockey Club For $50,000 Damages.

Louisville, Ky., May 10.—T. P. Hayes filed suit Thursday afternoon in the Jefferson circuit court for $50,000 damages against the new Louisville Jockey club. The suit is based on the action of the Western Jockey club in declaring Hayes' horses outlaws.

Hayes, in his petition, says that the Louisville Jockey club, which organization, he alleges, is a conspiracy to control racing in the south and west. By Rule 208, owners that race on tracks not members of the Western Jockey club are barred from its tracks. Hayes says he raced at Little Rock and Nashville, and was, therefore, outlawed.

M. Taylor, of Louisville, and Mail Agent Chas. Young, of Kuttawa, were badly hurt, and several passengers received painful injuries. A safe car and coach burned. Fast running to make up time is supposed to have been the cause.

Child's Leg Amputated.

Madisonville, Ky., May 11.—John Price, the six-year-old son of R. L. Price, a merchant of Providence, was severely injured, and it was found necessary to amputate his leg. Raised Granite Shaft to Memory of Felix Moses.

In "Stringtown on the Pike" there is one character whose actual life the author has seen fit to portray without a single touch of the pencil of imagination. Not even his name is disguised and the narrative of Felix Moses is a realistic chapter in the existence of one of the most unique characters of those stirring times. When John Uri Lloyd's novel, containing the story of this warm-hearted Jewish peddler and confederate soldier, was published it awakened, after long years, a desire to fittingly honor one who, though but a private in the ranks of life, was the peer of kings, a credit to his race, to his country and mankind.

Through the efforts of the Jewish ladies of this city a fund was raised to erect a monument over the long neglected grave in the United Jewish cemetery on Walnut Hills. Sunday afternoon with impressive ceremonies the monument was dedicated. At the Grand Hotel Sunday Prof. Lloyd entertained at dinner thirty-six of the comrades-in-arms and old time friends of Felix Moses. Many anecdotes and stories in the life of him in honor of whose memory they had met were told, and in many an eye there gleaned a tear when his kindly deeds were recalled. Several of the guests are thinly disguised characters in the story of Stringtown, and they are proud of it. At 2:30 o'clock the guests repaired in a body to the Jewish cemetery, where the dedication exercises were held. Rev. David Phillipson opened with prayer and Prof. John Uri Lloyd related the simple story of Felix Moses. Rev. Howard A. M. Henderson, a colonel of the confederacy, and an orator of distinction, delivered an eloquent address. [illegible] spoke on "The Blue and the Gray" and Judge Soule Smith, of Lexington, eulogized the Jewish race and paid tribute to the memory of the soldier dead of both armies. The exercises were of the highest order and the chapel was crowded to its utmost with Jew and Gentile, Confederate and Federal, gathered to do honor to Felix Moses, the friend of all.

At the grave the exercises were simple. Each of the old friends and veterans laid a small Confederate flag upon the mound and the Daughters of the Confederacy handsomely decorated the stone and grave with a profusion of flowers. Mrs. Thos. Worcester, regent of the Ohio chapter of the D. of C., delivered an address. The stone is a small granite block, simple and rough cut, typical of the man whose grave it marks. It bears this inscription: "Felix Moses, a Confederate Soldier and a true friend. 1827-1886.— Times-Star, May 6th.

SPIRITUAL WORKERS

Urges All Christian Workers to Increased Fidelity and Tells How Much Effort at Doing Good Fails.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

In this discourse Dr. Talmage urges all Christian workers to increased fidelity and shows how much effort at doing good fails through lack of adroitness; text, Genesis, 10:9: "He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."

In our day hunting is a sport, but in the lands and the times infested of wild beasts it was a matter of life or death with the people. It was very different from going out on a sunshiny afternoon with a patent breechloader to shoot reed birds on the flats, when Pollux and Achilles and Diomedes went out to clear the land of lions and panthers and bears. Xenophon grew eloquent in regard to the art of hunting. In the far east people, elephant mounted, chased the tiger. Francis I. was called the father of hunting. And Moses, in my text, sets forth Nimrod as a hero, when it presents him with broad shoulders and shaggy apparel and sun browned face and arm bunched with muscle, "a mighty hunter before the Lord." I think he used the bow and the arrows with great success practicing archery.

I have thought if it is such a grand thing and such a brave thing to clear wild beasts out of a country if it is not a better and a braver thing to hunt down and destroy those great evils of society that are stalking the land with fierce eye and bloody paw and sharp tusk and quick spring. I have wondered if there is not such a thing as Gospel archery, by which those who have been flying from truth may be captured for God and Heaven. The Lord Jesus in His sermon used the art of angling for an illustration when He said: "I will make you fishers of men." And so I think I have authority for using hunting as an illustration of Gospel truth, and I pray God that there may be many a man enlisted in the work who shall begin to study Gospel archery, of whom it may after awhile be said: "He was a mighty hunter before the Lord."

How much awkward Christian work there is done in the world! How many good people there are who drive souls away from Christ instead of bringing them to Him! All their fingers are thumbs—religious blunderers who upset more than they right. Their gun has a crooked barrel and kicks as it goes off. They are like a clumsy comrade who goes along with skillful hunters. At the very moment he ought to be most quiet he is crackling an alder or falling over a log and frightening away the game. How few Christian people have ever learned how the Lord Jesus Christ at the well sent from talking about a cupful of water to the most practical religious truths, which won the woman's soul for God! Jesus in the wilderness was breaking bread to the people. I think it was very good bread. It was very light bread; and the yeast had done its work thoroughly, Christ, after He had broken the bread, said to the people: "Beware of the yeast or of the leaven of the Pharisees." So naturally a transition it was and how easily they all understood Him! But how few Christian people there are who understand how to fasten the truths of God and religion to the souls of men!

The archers of olden time studied their art. They were very precise in the matter. The old books gave special directions as to how an archer should go and as to what an archer should do. He must stand erect and firm, his left foot a little in advance of the right foot. With his left hand he must take hold of the bow in the middle, and then with the three fingers and the thumb of his right hand he should lay hold the arrow and affix it to the string—so precise was the direction given. But how clumsy we are about religious work! How little skill and care we exercise! How often our arrows miss the mark! I am glad that there are institutions established in many cities of our land where men may learn the art of doing good—studying spiritual archery and become known as "mighty hunters before the Lord!"

In the first place, if you want to be effectual in doing good you must be very sure of your weapon. There was something very fascinating about the archery of olden times. Perhaps you do not know what they could do with the bow and arrow. Why, the chief battles fought by the English Plantagenets were with the longbow. They would take the arrow of polished wood and feather it with the plume of a bird, and then it would fly from the bowstring of plaited silk. The bloody fields of Agincourt and Solway Moss and Neville's Cross heard the loud thrum of the archer's bowstring. Now, my Christian friends, we have a mightier weapon than that. It is the arrow of the Gospel; it is a sharp arrow; it is a straight arrow; it is feathered from the wing of the dove of God's spirit; it flies from a bow made out of the wood of the cross. It has brought down 400,000,000 of souls. Paul knew how to bring the notch of that arrow on to the bowstring, and its whirr was heard through the Corinthian theaters and through the courtroom until the knees of Felix knocked together. It was that arrow that stuck in Luther's heart when he yelled out: "Oh, my sins! Oh, my sins!" If it strike a man in the head, it kills his skepticism; if it strike him in the heel, it will turn his step; if it strikes him in the heart, he throws up his hands, as did one of old when wounded in the battle, crying: "O Galilean, thou hast conquered!"

In the armory of the earl of Pembroke there are old corselets which show that the arrow of the English used to go through the breastplate, through the body of the warrior and out through the backplate. What a symbol of that Gospel which is sharper than a two-edged sword, piercing to the dividing asunder of soul and body and of the joints and marrow! Would to God we had more faith in that Gospel! The humblest man in the world, if he had enough faith in it, could bring a hundred souls to Christ—perhaps 500. Just in proportion as this age seems to believe less and less in it, I believe more and more in it. What are men about that they will not accept their own deliverance? There is nothing proposed by men that can do anything like this Gospel.

Again, if you want to be skillful in spiritual archery you must hunt in unfrequented and secluded places. Why does the hunter go three or four days in the Pennsylvania forests or over Raquette lake into the wilds of the Adirondacks? It is the only way to do. The deer are shy, and one "bang" of the gun clears the forest. From the California stage you see, as you go over the plains, here and there a coyote trotting along almost within range of the gun—sometimes quite within range of it. No one cares for that. It is worthless. The good game is hidden and secluded. Every hunter knows that. So many of the souls that will be of most worth for Christ and of most value to the church are secluded. They do not come in our way. You will have to go where they are. Yonder they are down in that cellar. Yonder they are up in that garret—far away from the door of any church. The Gospel arrow has not been pointed at them. The tract distributor and the city missionary sometimes just catch a glimpse of them, as a hunter through the trees gets a momentary sight of a partridge or roebuck. The trouble is we are waiting for the game to come to us. We are not good hunters. We are standing on some street or road expecting that the timid antelope will come up and eat out of our hand. We are expecting that the prairie fowl will light on our church steeple. It is not their habit. If the church should wait 10,000,000 of years for the world to come in and be saved, it will wait in vain. The world will not come.

What the church wants now is to lift its feet from damask ottomans and put them in the stirrups. The church wants not so many cushions as it wants saddlebags and arrows. We have got to put aside the gown and the kid gloves and put on the hunting shirt. We want a pulpit on wheels. We have been fishing so long in the brooks that run under the shadow of the church that the fish know us, and they avoid the hook and escape as soon as we come to the bank, while yonder is Upper Saranac and Big Hopper's lake, where the first swing of the Gospel net would break it for the multitude of the fishes. There is outside work to be done. What is it that I see in the backwoods? It is a tent. The hunters have made a clearing and camped out. What do they care if they have wet feet or if they have nothing but a pine branch for a pillow or for the northeast storm? If a moose in the darkness steps into the lake to drink, they hear it right away. If a loon cry in the midnight, they hear it. So in the service of God we have exposed work. We have got to camp out and rough it. We are putting all our care on the comparatively few people who go to church. What are we doing for the millions who do not come? Have they no souls? Are they sinless that they need no pardon? Are there no dead in their houses that they need no comfort? Are they cut off from God to go into eternity, no wing to bear them, no light to cheer them, no welcome to greet them? I hear to-day surging up from the lower depth of our cities a groan that comes through our Christian assemblages and through our beautiful churches, and it blots out all this scene from my eyes today, as by the mists of a great Niagara, for the dash and the plunge of these great torrents of life dropping down into the fathomless and thundering chasm of suffering and woe. I sometimes think that just as God blotted out the churches of Pergatira and Corinth and Laodicea because of their sloth and stolidity he will blot out American and English Christianity and raise on the ruins a stalwart, wide-awake missionary church that can take the full meaning of that command: "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature. He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved, but he that believeth not shall be damned"—a command, you see, punctuated with a throne of Heaven and a dungeon of hell.

I remark, further, if you want to succeed in spiritual archery you must have courage. If the hunter stands with trembling hand or shoulder that flinches with fear, instead of taking the catsmount the catsmount takes him. What would become of the Greenlander if when out hunting for the bear he should stand shivering with terror on an iceberg? What would have become of Du Chaillu and Livingstone in the African thicket with a faint heart and a weak knee? When a panther comes within 20 paces of you and it has its eye on you and it has squatted for the fearful spring, "Steady there!" Courage, O ye spiritual archers! There are great monsters of iniquity prowling all around about the community. Shall we not in the strength of God go forth and combat them? We not only need more heart, but more backbone. What is the church of God that it should fear to look in the eye any transgression? There is the Bengal tiger of drunkenness that prowls around, and instead of attacking it how many of us hide under the church pew or the communion table? There is so much invested in it we are afraid to assault it. Millions of dollars in barrels, in vats, in spigots, in corkscrews, in gin palaces with marble floors and Italian top tables and chased ice coolers, and in the strychnine and the logwood and the tartaric acid and the nux vomica that go to make up our "pure" American drinks. I looked with wondering eyes on the "Heidelberg tun." It is the great liquor vat of Germany, which is said to hold 800 hogsheads of wine, and only three times in 100 years it has been filled. But as I stood and looked at it I said to myself: "That is nothing—800 hogsheads. Why, our American vat holds 10,200,000 barrels of strong drinks and we keep 300,000 men with nothing to do but to see that it is filled."

Oh, to attack the great monster of intemperance and the kindred monsters of fraud and uncleanliness requires you to rally all your Christian courage. Through the press, through the pulpit, through the platform you must assault it. Would to God that all our American Christians would band together, not for crack-brained fanaticism, but for holy Christian reform! I think it was in 1793 that there went out from Lucknow, India, under the sovereign, the greatest hunting party that was ever projected. There were 10,000 armed men in that hunting party. There were camels and horses and elephants. On some princes rode, and royal ladies under exquisite housings, and 500 coolies waited upon the train, and the desolate places of India were invaded by this excursion, and the rhinoceros and deer and elephant fell under the stroke of the saber and bullet. After awhile the party brought back trophies worth 50,000 rupees, having left the wilderness of India ghastly with the slain bodies of wild beasts. Would to God that instead of here and there a straggler going out to fight these great monsters of iniquity in our country the millions of membership in our churches would band together and hew in twain these great crimes that make the land frightful with their roar and are fattening upon the bodies and souls of immortal men! Who is ready for such a party as that? Who will be a mighty hunter for the Lord?

I remark, again, if you want to be successful in spiritual archery you need not only to bring down game, but bring it in. I think one of the most beautiful pictures of Thorwaldsen is his "Autumn." It represents a sportsman coming home and standing under a grapevine. He has a staff over his shoulder, and on the other end of that staff are hung a rabbit and a brace of birds. Every hunter brings home the game. No one would think of bringing down a roebuck or whipping up a stream for trout and letting them lie in the woods. At eventide the camp is adorned with the treasures of the forest—beak and fin and antler.

If you go out to hunt for immortal souls, not only bring them down under the arrow of the Gospel, but bring them into the church of God, the grand home and encampment we have pitched this side the skies. Fetch them in; do not let them lie out in the open field. They need our prayers and sympathies and help. That is the meaning of the church of God—help. O ye hunters for the Lord, not only bring down the game, but bring it in.

If Mithridates liked hunting so well that for seven years he never went indoors, what ardor thusiasm ought we to have who are hunting for immortal souls! If Domitian practiced archery until he could stand a boy down in the Roman amphitheater with a hand out, the fingers spread apart, and then the king could shoot an arrow between the fingers without wounding them, to what drill and what practice ought we to subject ourselves in order to become spiritual archers and "mighty hunters before the Lord!" But let me say you will never work any better than you pray. The old archers took the bow, put one end of it down beside the foot, elevated the other end, and it was the rule that the bow should be just the size of the archer. If it were just his size, then he would go into the battle with confidence. Let me say that your power to project good in the world will correspond exactly to your own spiritual stature. In other words, the first thing in preparation for Christian work is personal consecration.

Oh, for a closer walk with God,
A calm and heavenly frame,
A light to shine upon the road
That leads me to the Lamb!

There is in a forest in Germany a place they call the "deer leap"—two crags, about 18 yards apart; between them a fearful chasm. This is called the "deer leap" because once a hunter was on the track of a deer. It came to one of these crags. There was no escape for it from the pursuit of the hunter, and in utter despair it gathered itself up and in the death agony attempted to jump across. Of course it fell and was dashed on the rocks far beneath. Here is a path to Heaven. It is plain; it is safe. Jesus marks it out for every man to walk in. But here is a man who says: "I won't walk in that path. I will take my own way." He comes on up until he confronts the chasm that divides his soul from Heaven. Now his last hour has come, and he resolves that he will leap from the heights of earth to the heights of Heaven. Stand back now and give him fair swing, for no soul ever did that successfully. Let him try. Jump! He misses the mark, and he goes down, depth below depth, "destroyed without remedy." Men, angels, devils! What shall we call that place of awful catastrophe? Let it be known forever as the soul's death leap.

ZULUS OF THE RAILROADS.

Queer Title Given to Men in Charge of Blooded Stock—Are Not Natives of Africa.

"Do you know what a Zulu is?" said an old railroad man, according to the Chicago Inter Ocean. The traveling man who was waiting for his train smiled in a way that was meant to indicate he knew all the species of Zulus that ever existed, and told the railroad man about the Africans, called Zulus, who maintained that continent's reputation for fighting before the Boers stepped in.

Little was doing in the railroad man's line just then, so he listened.

"Well, they may be Zulus all right enough," he remarked, "but they are not the sort of Zulus that travel on railroads. There is the kind that runs into these yards," and he pointed down the track, where a box car stood.

A stove pipe protruded through a hole in the door. The pipe was at an angle of about 35 degrees. A cloud of smoke was coming from it. Four blooded horses and a man were the occupants of that. The man was the Zulu. Taking care of valuable stock en route from one market to another was his business. He was a type of class that railroad men on every line have named the Zulus. They fit up the center of the cars for a sort of living-room, and there in the midst of their animals live as happily as the road's president who passes them in his private car.

WHAT WE HEAR FROM ASSINIBOIA, WESTERN CANADA.

"Don't Think of Coming, But Come."

To the Editor:

The above is the emphatic manner in which a friend in Yorkton writes to a friend near St. Paul, Minnesota, and it is pretty nearly right, too, when the advantages that Western Canada offer to those seeking homes. The Assiniboia district is one of the best. The writer from whose letter we quote goes on to say:

"John, if you miss this chance you are foolish, for you can get out cheaper when there are so many coming, and I would not tell you to come if I thought you could not do well, and if you don't come in the spring you will have to go away back, for you do not want to think that there is no one living out here but us. I saw nicer buildings out here than I ever saw before, and if the country was no good what would they want them for? John, if you sold everything you have and come out here you would be worth more than ever you were before, and if you can bring your team, you can get anything you want on tick, and when they do that with strangers they are not afraid they can't make enough to pay for it. I saw as nice wheat as I ever saw in my life and if they could not grow grain what would the flour mill be for, and it cost $20,000."

Now this was what Mr. Thomas Fitzpatrick, of Yorkton, Assiniboia, Western Canada, wrote to a friend.

There will be opened up this summer new districts in Saskatchewan and Assiniboia, at low prices, particulars of which can be had of any agent of the Government of the Dominion of Canada, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in the columns of your paper.

Yours truly,

PERIODS OF PAIN.

How Three Women Found Relief.

While no woman is entirely free from periodical suffering, it does not seem to have been the plan of nature that woman should suffer so severely. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound is the most thorough female regulator known to medical science. It relieves the condition which produces so much discomfort and robs menstruation of its terrors.

The three letters here published should encourage every woman who suffers:

Aug. 6, 1898.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have suffered since the age of sixteen with painful menstruation. I have been treated for months, and was told that the womb had fallen a little. The doctor says that is now in place again, but I still have the same pain. Please tell me what to do."—MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 113 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Jan. 10, 1899.

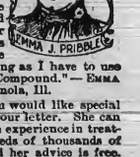
"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—After receiving your reply to my letter of Aug. 6 I followed your kind advice, and am glad to tell you that I have been cured of the severe pain at time of menstruation through the use of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I have taken six bottles of it, felt better after the first bottle, and after a while had no more pain or womb trouble.

"I had doctored from the age of sixteen to twenty-six, and had lost all hope, but your medicine has made me well.

"I would like to have you use my testimonial, so that others may see, and be inspired with hope, and take your medicine."—MRS. EMMA KUEHL, 113 Trautman St., Brooklyn, E. D., N.Y.

Feb. 20, 1900.

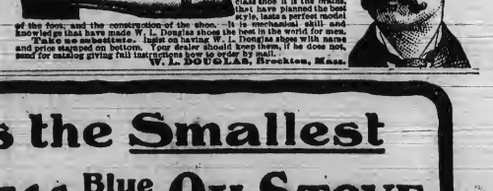
"I saw your medicine so highly recommended I thought I would write to you for advice.



"My menstruation occurs every two weeks, lasts a week, and is painful. I have been troubled in this way for some time. I suffer from side headache and backache all the time, appetite poor, sick at stomach every morning, everything I eat hurts me, am very weak, thin, and sallow.

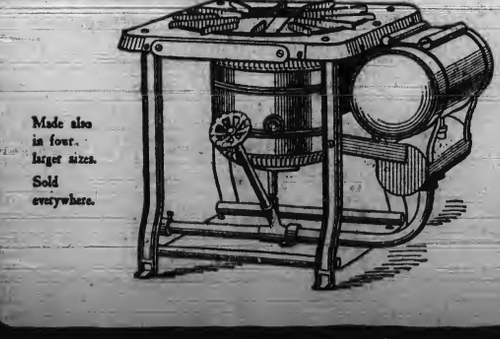
"I have tried a doctor, but he did not seem to do me any good."—MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

April 23, 1900.



"Since receiving your answer to my letter I have been taking your Vegetable Compound, and it has done me more good than any medicine I have ever taken. My menses are all right now, and appear once a month, and I feel so much stronger. I shall always praise your medicine."—MISS MAGGIE POLLARD, 319 So. 4th St., Richmond, Va.

"I was troubled with female weakness, irregular and painful menstruation, and leucorrhoea. The doctor's medicine did me no good. I have taken one bottle and a half of your Vegetable Compound, and thanks to your medicine, my pains are gone. I advise all women suffering as I have to use your Vegetable Compound."—EMMA J. PRIBBLE, Indianola, Ill.



If there is anything about your case about which you would like special advice, write freely to Mrs. Pinkham. No man will see your letter. She can surely help you, for no person in America has such a wide experience in treating female ills as she has had. She has helped hundreds of thousands of women back to health. Her address is Lynn, Mass., and her advice is free. You are very foolish if you do not accept her kind invitation.

$5000 REWARD.—We have deposited with the National City Bank of Lynn, $5000, which will be paid to any person who can find that the above testimonial letters are not genuine, or were published before obtaining the writer's special permission. LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO.

ENORMOUS GAMBLING.

Wall Street Games That Have Been Favored by Republicans in Congress.

The speculators and stock gamblers in New York are running wild with the mad desire to get other people's money. In one day the exchanges at the clearing house reached in round figures the enormous amount of $547,000,000, beating the previous high record by nearly $102,000,000, or about 23 per cent. The Bank of Manhattan alone turned in close to $64,000,000 in checks, etc. In past years it would have been safe to foretell that a panic would soon follow such abnormal dealings and the accompanying rises in the prices of stocks and bonds, but as all the great financiers, Morgan, Rockefeller, and the great banking houses, with billions of ready money, are supporting this bull market and nearly all the leading and wealthy bears have joined in the saturnalia or are bankrupt, it is impossible to say when it will all end and normal conditions be restored.

It is stated that until Morgan has unloaded the watered steel stock the boom is to continue.

The ordinary speculator has no show in such a market, as by a word from the princes of finance the market can be swayed either way and wipe out any ordinary margin.

It would seem that this excitement would be enough to satisfy the most inveterate gambler, but a special telegram to the Chicago Chronicle says: "Three of a party of five men toyed with the fickle game of hearts at the Waldorf-Astoria Monday night until they arose from the festive board with an aggregate loss of nearly $60,000. The game of hearts is now understood to be the most popular of card amusements indulged in by patrons of the hotel, and nearly every night in one or two of the cardrooms a pretty stiff game of the elusive pasteboards may be found in operation. It is reported that several members of the recently formed giant steel corporation, who make their headquarters at the hotel, have been the heaviest losers at the game, but who the winners have been none will ever hazard to guess.

These gamblers are the men who have been favored by the republicans in congress with special legislation to aid them in robbing the people of their millions of dollars. Even the door of the white house is open to them or their emissaries for like services. Cabinet officers are appointed in their interests, to-wit, the new attorney general, who has been, and perhaps now is, the attorney of the steel trust. Strong objections were made to his appointment on the ground that it would injure the party and prove the contention of the democrats that all talk of curbing the trusts was buncombe and only an attempt to fool the people. McKinley ignored the advice, and it is thus fair to assume that the great majority of his party are either controlled or under obligations to these gamblers and trust magnates."

A STARTLING DEPARTURE.

Municipal Ownership Gets a Boost from Hanna, McKinley and Dick.

The victories of Tom Johnson in Cleveland, Jones in Toledo and the three-cent-fare ticket in Columbus has aroused the republicans to the fact that the people favor municipal ownership. Charles W. Dick, chairman of the republican state convention of Ohio, who is the chief henchman of Hanna and the president, made a speech at Columbus before the Presidential Postmasters' association, in which he marked out some startling departures from the usual republican campaign issues and indicated what to expect in the next republican state platform. Dick said he favored government ownership of all means of communication and that he fully indorsed the postal savings system.

"Sooner or later," he said, "the telegraph and telephone lines of the country will be owned and operated by the government; and it is proper they should be, for if the government can send a message by wire for five cents it has no right to permit a private corporation to extort 25 cents for the same service."

Dick betrayed no sign that this was the first time he ever spoke on the municipal ownership side of the question, and the postmasters, recognizing it as a new slogan, applauded the sentiment vigorously.

It is also stated that an important conference of Ohio republican leaders was held, at which it was decided to get into the field first with the declaration for municipal ownership.

This sudden change of mind of republicans on the issue they have always been fighting brings to mind the declaration against trusts in the Ohio republican platform of two years ago, and the turning down of Attorney General Monett, the only man in their party who had shown any effort to curb the trusts. That Hanna, McKinley or Dick really favor municipal ownership is too absurd to even be swallowed by an Ohio granger from the back counties, for they have for three or four years been ardent supporters of Public Policy, a Chicago publication that is published in the interests of corporations that own municipal franchises.

The perfection of the republican machine in Ohio is brought to the light by this meeting of republican postmasters, who are owned and entirely under the control of Hanna, McKinley and Dick, and of course are expected to applaud any programme that may aid in keeping them in office. They would applaud free trade, anti-imperialism, free Cuba or free anything. They are patriots who only wait to be told what the people want, and they espouse the cause.

TRUST PROTECTION.

A Question That is Going to Give the Republicans a Great Deal of Trouble.

Near the close of the last congress the chairman of the republican congressional committee, J. W. Babcock, introduced a bill to abolish the tariff on iron and steel. This was just after the formation of the steel trust was announced. This apparent lapse of Mr. Babcock from the dogma of protection caused considerable talk, and he was interviewed by the newspapers. In one of these interviews he is reported to have said: "It was to forestall similar action by a democrat." No action was taken by the committee to whom the bill was referred. Mr. Babcock evidently did not expect it, he was merely playing to the galleries; in fact, his bill did not abolish the duty on iron and steel, it merely pretended to. It provided for the repeal of the iron schedule, but did not repeal or change section 193, which provides for an ad valorem duty of 45 per cent. on iron and steel not specifically provided in the act. The steel trust would doubtless be quite satisfied with this 45 per cent. tariff.

Two or three democrats at the first session of the Fifty-sixth congress had introduced bills repealing all duties on trust articles, but the committee on ways and means never considered them, the republican majority being opposed to such action. Mr. Babcock, therefore, did not forestall the democrats, who are pledged by their national platform against trusts and the Dingley tariff, and will certainly introduce a bill to that end when the Fifty-seventh congress assembles. This will again try the faith of those republicans who feel that the trusts should be curbed.

If the steel trust is to be legislated against, why not the sugar trust, the tin trust and the hundred and one other trusts and combines. But to do this would require nearly every schedule of the tariff law to be repealed, and the whole fabric of protection would be wiped out. This would leave the republican party with but imperialism as a living issue and with the greatest source of its campaign funds cut off without a countervailing fountain to draw from.

A large majority of the republican senators and representatives have received, and are receiving, favors from the trusts, combines and corporations, many of them are owned by the trusts, and relief to the people from them is unlikely and almost impossible.

But there are other troubles for the protectionists. The state department and the diplomats have become interested in the tariff discussion. The countervailing duties on Russian beet sugar has been met by that country with a large increase of duty on American goods, so that door is closing against us. Germany and France are also said to be intending retaliatory measures, and even many of the English politicians are talking the same way.

Then we have a colonial tariff question that must be settled and our new possessions may soon be supplying us with sugar and some kinds of tobacco. Free sugar from Porto Rico and the Philippines would cut off the revenue from that source, wipe out the American sugar plantations, and free tobacco would ruin the protected Connecticut wrapper grower.

The whole tariff is a complicated but frail structure, and, like the children's house of cards, a finger or a breath will cause a wreck. When you have local politics, loot and diplomacy all taking a hand and inherited faith in the doctrine they have taught their rank and file to worship to beware of one cannot envy our republican friends the job of tariff revision they must soon enter upon.

The democratic plan of tariff for revenue will have to be adopted sooner or later.

PARAGRAPHIC POINTERS.

——No bank embezzler need feel safe in jail after William McKinley gets his benevolent eye on him.—N. Y. World.

——By a careful perusal of the average republican machine organ, nowadays, the republican legislator will find himself possessed of unsuspected virtues.—Albany Argus.

——Expansionists declare that the Cubans are very "ungrateful" if they do not accept the Platt amendments. If they are to give value received why should they be grateful? Give them independence that is independence, and see whether they are not grateful.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——The public need expect no relief through the republican party from the exactions of the trusts. Even the republican leaders themselves pronounce such a thing outside the range of reason. If there is to be any change in conditions it will have to come through the democratic party.—Butte (Mont.) Miner.

——It is thought worthy of telegraphic notice, from Washington, that Mark Hanna is opposed to all movements looking to a change in the management of the democratic national committee. Pretty soon they will be asking us to pay tolls on the discovery that Hanna knows when he is well off.—Albany Argus.

——Tariff reform ought not to be attempted in patches. Duties should be revised and cut down all along the line. In all places where the tariff enables the manufacturers of trust goods to sell cheaper to the foreigner than to the home consumer it should be abolished, and such articles as trusts produce should be placed on the free list.—Kansas City Times.

THOSE ANGEL CHILDREN.

One of Them Gives a Specimen of Her Ability as a Mischief and Trouble Maker.

When young Sellshoes called the other evening, Miss Ohfudge, in a flannelette wrapper, was reading an intensely absorbing novel in her room upstairs, and so she sent her angel sister Fanny, aged six, downstairs to inform Mr. Sellshoes that she'd be down in a few moments. The angel sister carried the information to Mr. Sellshoes in the parlor, and then hovered around, waiting for an opportunity to deliver herself of a few bright little sayings of childhood, relates the Washington Star.

"Mr. Sellshoes," she remarked, after awhile, in a shy manner, twisting her hands coyly, "have you got many bureau drawers where you live, and do yon hunt in them much?"

"Well—er—I dunno," replied Mr. Sellshoe, hesitatingly. "Why?"

"Oh, nuthin'," replied the angel child, "'cept that sis she began t' hunt, 's soon's you came, through the bureau drawers fr a piece of stickin' plaster t' cover up a big pimple she's got on her chin, an' she said she jes' wishet you had t' rubber an' hunt through all your bureau drawers an' then you wouldn't be so willin' t' put folks out so. Do you often have t' hunt through your bureau drawers?"

Young Sellshoes flushed slightly, then paled slightly and made an inaudible reply. The angel child pretended to fix the rug in front of the grate fire for a moment, and then she opened up again.

"Oh, Mr. Sellshoes," she exclaimed, "what a funny hat yon must wear. Do let me see it, won't you?"

"Why, it's just like all other hats," replied young Sellshoes, in a muffled, choked sort of tone. "Why do you wish to see it?"

"Oh, nuthin'," replied the angel child, turning around and drumming the piano, "'cept that sis she says that you talk through your hat, an' I thought it must be a funny-looking hat."

Young Sellshoes twisted some more in his seat, and half rose to go, but, thinking better of it, again stared hard out of the window. The angel child drummed on for a couple of minutes, and then she once more wheeled about on the stool.

"And, oh, Mr. Sellshoes," she prattled, in her sweet, innocent little voice, "please, sir, tell me what you won't do?"

"Won't do?" repeated young Sellshoes, hoarsely. "Why, I don't think I understand what you—"

"Well," cut in the lovely little prattling lamb, "I heard sis say yesterday, w'en she was talkin' 'bout you, 'He won't do jes' like that, an' I thought that—"

The rest of it was drowned in the tum-tumming of the angel child's angel little paws on the piano.

Then young Sellshoes went out into the clammy night without waiting for Miss Ohfudge, and three minutes after he left the angel child of the Ohfudge household was learning things about the back of a corrugated sterling silver hairbrush that she had never dreamed of in her young and joyous life before.

TEACHING THE TEACHER.

When It Came to Baseball Talk She Certainly Needed a Few Suggestions.

A teacher in one of Detroit's public schools was giving an object lesson to an advanced class, says the Free Press.

"Take, for instance," said she, "the game of tennis. Now you can't play tennis without a racquet, you can't play croquet without a mallet, and you can't play ball without a—a knocker."

The teacher was perceptibly annoyed at the ripple of merriment her remarks caused, and Johnny Batterup, the captain of the baseball team, who was most hilarious in his demonstrations, was required to explain his unseemly conduct. Johnny produced a slang dictionary and entered into an elaborate explanation of the term "knocker," which was described as a person that makes unkind and belittling remarks intended to be hurtful to fellow beings on promising enterprises. One or more "knockers," explained Johnny, constitute an "anvil chorus."

"While "knockers' are not necessary to the baseball game," he said, "they are very prevalent, especially in Detroit."

After school hours Johnny called the teacher aside and explained to her that she should have said "bat" or "club." He was given several credit marks, and his next school report will no doubt read "excellent."

New Kind of Hulled Corn.

A substitute for the old-fashioned hulled corn, of which many persons are fond, may be produced in the following way: Use the cracked corn (the yellow variety, if possible), and soak one cup of it overnight. In the morning add one-quarter of a teaspoonful of bicarbonate of soda, and cook till well done. The soda gives the peculiar flavor which hulled corn made in the old way has, and is perfectly harmless. The flavor referred to was produced, under the old-fashioned method, by the wood ashes used to free the corn of the hulls.—N. Y. Post.

Sentiment Crushed.

"After I am dead," sighed the rejected lover, "you may look into my heart and see your image graven there."

"Tut, tut," said the frivolous female, who had just given him the sister talk, "you men would keep me busy holding post-mortems if I took you all at your word."

A Letter from Dewey.

Some time ago when Mr. S. F. Dewey was living in Carrolton, Montgomery County, Ohio, he wrote: "No physician has done me one hundredth part of the good your Lotion has in relieving me of Barber's Itch, with which I had been afflicted more than nine years." Palmer's Lotion Soap possesses all the medicinal properties of the Lotion and in all cases should be used in connection with it in preference to any other soap. In some cases it may be used temporarily in place of the Lotion. If you druggist doesn't have them, send to Solon Palmer, 374 Pearl Street, New York, for samples of Palmer's Lotion and Lotion Soap.

Of Mixed Nationality.

The usual humorous incidents were not lacking in the recently taken British census. An emigrant in New Zealand stated to the authorities that his mother was a Kaffir, his father an Irishman who had become a naturalized American, but afterward served in the French army, and that he himself was born on the passage between Yokohama and Colombo in a Spanish vessel. "Put him down a Scotchman!" was the official decision.—Chicago Chronicle.

A FAMOUS OLD HOUSE.

The house of Walter Baker & Co., whose manufactures of cocoa and chocolate have become familiar in the mouth as household words, was established one hundred and twenty-one years ago (1780) on the Neponset River in the old town of Dorchester, a suburb of Boston. From the little wooden mill, "by the rude bridge that arched the flood," where the enterprise was first started, there has grown up the largest industrial establishment of the kind in the world. It might be said that, while other manufacturers come and go, Walter Baker & Co. go on forever.

What is the secret of their great success? It is a very simple one. They have won and held the confidence of the great and constantly increasing body of consumers by always maintaining the highest standard in the quality of their cocoa and chocolate preparations, and selling them at the lowest price for which unadulterated articles of good quality can be put upon the market. They welcome honest competition; but they feel justified in denouncing in the strongest terms the fraudulent methods by which inferior preparations are palmed off on customers who ask for and suppose they are getting the genuine articles. The best grocers refuse to handle such goods, not alone for the reason that, in the long run, it doesn't pay to do it, but because their sense of fair dealing will not permit them to aid in the sale of goods that defraud their customers and injure honest manufacturers.

Every package of the goods made by the Walter Baker Company bears the well-known trade-mark "La Belle Chocolatiere," and their place of manufacture "Dorchester, Mass." Housekeepers are advised to examine their purchases, and make sure that other goods have not been substituted.

An attractive little book of "Choice Recipes" will be mailed free to any housekeeper who sends her name and address to Walter Baker & Co., Ltd., 158 State Street, Boston, Mass.

NEIGHBORHOOD NEWS.

WALTON.—At the election on the 4th inst., for trustees of the Graded Common School, T. F. Curley and Wm. Ransler were chosen.

The foundation for the graded school building is nearly completed—will be ready for the brick masons in a couple of days, and the work on the new building will be pushed from now on.

The Commencement Exercises of the Walton High School will be held at the Christian church, Friday evening, May 24th, at 8 o'clock. The graduates are Misses Gertrude Curley, Blanch Dyas, Lena Hedges and Mattie Hudson. Misses Cleveland and Teal, of Cincinnati, and Miss Riggs, of Erlanger, will have charge of the music. The Baccalaureat sermon will be preached by the Rev. Moss at the Baptist church Sunday morning, May 19th, at 11 o'clk. The closing exercises of the grades from the first to the sixth will be held at the public school building, Friday afternoon, May 17th, at 1:30 o'clock.

A decided sensation was created in our village, last Saturday. Dr. Jacob Cleek dropped a small wad of paper money in the postoffice and a moment later ventor Benj. Mitchell, of Lagrange, so Mr. Lute Rouse says, picked it up and almost immediately left, and went to his stopping place, the King Hotel, and proceeded directly to the water closet. The Dr. in the meantime had discovered his loss, then Mr. Rouse (who had just been paid some money by Taylor Crowe) calling to Crowe to know whether he had lost any money, caused Cleek to feel in his pockets and to find his little roll was gone. The circumstances were gone over and Cleek demanded his money. Mitchell indignantly denied having it—that they search him, which was done by Marshal Hance, Mott Rouse and another person in the office of the Phoenix Hotel. Mitchell then got into a buggy with Robt. Hughes and was driven to his place. Cleek, accompanied by Crowe and Rouse took the route Mitchell had gone when he left after the money was picked up, and in the water closet found the wad of money answering the description given by the doctor of what he had dropped, $17—being three dollars less than it takes to send a man to Frankfort.

Mr. A. O. Mundhink, of West Alexandria, and Dr. M. Schofield, of Marion, O., were visiting Miss Clara Hossman, last Thursday and Friday.

While we see reports from different parts of the county where the spreading adders have made their appearance, we have seen no accounts of anybody being bitten by a kissing bug yet.

We came through Taylorsport, last Saturday evening, and found the citizens somewhat agitated and excited over a mad dog scare that their town had experienced that morning. The particulars as far as we could learn, were that as Ed Rouse was going to work very early that morning, he discovered a strange dog of the Mastiff species, or, rather, the dog discovered him. Mr. Rouse being a dog fancier rather took a fancy to his canineship, and began to call and make over him. The dog's actions were strange, and Mr. Rouse learned his bloodshot eyes and frothing mouth on him, he began to realize the danger he was in, and proceeded to make himself scarce. His object was to avoid the rabbid animal was to jump a seven foot paling fence (up hill at that) which he dexterously accomplished without any difficulty, except his being frightened some. By this time the town was thoroughly alarmed. The cry of mad dog was sounded through the streets. Women and children hurried off the streets in doors. The Mastiff passed on snapping, growling and biting everything it came in contact with. Fortunately none of the village dogs nor stock of any kind were bitten, altho some narrowly escaped. Before the Mastiff had reached the old Dr. Grubbs residence a posse of men and boys, armed to the teeth, were in pursuit. Someone wiser than the rest, procured Ed Rouse's big gun, which has a record of killing farther and deader than any other gun in the vicinity, and on the first opportunity gave the unfortunate canine a load from it, killing it in its tracks. Where the dog came from is a mystery to some, the Jake Fox says he is satisfied that it came down from the mountains of Virginia in a drift pile that landed at the mouth of Elijah's creek, and has been subsisting so long on water that hydrophobia was the result.

BRADFORD BROS.,

FLORENCE, - - KENTUCKY.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

After the 1st day of March, 1901, I will build buggies for $50 up. The vehicle will have first-class wheels, B grade, with celebrated Gotier steel tire, drilled and bolted between spokes. The axle will be the celebrated Winchester 1000 mile axle, nothing neat and strong. The gearing will be of my own make and pattern, which I claim has no equal. The body will be good, seasoned yellow poplar; sills and risers good seasoned ash and hickory—not Cottonwood as the factories are now using. Notice the corners of a factory body and you find them bursting out, something I guarantee my work not to do.

Trimming.

TRIMMINGS—Bows of second growth ash, steel socket of the improved Cleveland pattern; top to have leather sides quarters buffed, not split, roof and curtains 30 ounce rubber; lining, 14 ounce cloth any color you wish; back and cushion, leather or cloth as you wish; storm apron large enough to cover two people and turn water; rug carpet will be something neat, full length, well bound, as will also the toe pad. I also build a two-seated, three spring

Pleasure Wagon for $67.

In fact Carriages, Phaetons, Surreys or any kind of a vehicle as cheap as any factory work, and I know a great deal better. I build this work on orders only. I carry no stock, so you can order what you want.

Carriage Repairs.

You ask me if I can shoe a horse. I answer, yes If you give me time enough I can make the shoe as good as anyone, but when it comes to paring the foot and driving the nails, I would lack the judgment—I could not level the foot and would prick your horse, and then how quick you would remove the shoe and do what you could for him, and all I could say would be too late. The same way with an axle or any other parts of a carriage. If they are on a train, or a wheel that is dished out of shape I will fix it for you. No cure, no pay. Notice some

Prices on Wheels.

I will cut your wheels down, put on new XXX beveled rims and heavy steel tires for $6 69, and everything else in proportion.

Painting.

There are a great many ways to repaint a job. My prices are in reach of all. Following are my prices for 1901: $5, $8, $10 and $12. On my $10 and $12 jobs I give a written guarantee. If you can buy the paint and varnish and stripe your job and do the work for $5, I have nothing more to say on a $5 job. Come and see, learn and be convinced I mean just what I say.

The man who gets the first one of my buggies will sell more for me. Now come on. My place of business is one-fourth of a mile west of T. J. Childress' toll-gate.

It is stated that the total pack of fruit and vegetable was $15,000,000.

IT has been many a long day since one of Boone's sons was honored by as important an office as that now held by Judge Lassing, and having waited so long for an office of importance and honor, the Democrats of Boone are exceedingly anxious to see Mr. Lassing elected to the office of Circuit Judge this fall. Boone believes that the Democrats of the other counties in the district will concede to her the right to hold one of the district offices in the course of several generations, and will assist her to nominate and elect John M. Lassing this fall.

The rapacity of the so-called Christian nations in assessing their indemnity upon China seems likely to meet some obstacle in the fact that an increase of the customs to a point thought necessary to raise the revenue may be so high as to cripple trade with the very nations demanding the excessive indemnity. In this situation the Powers will find it incumbent to do some fine figuring in order to fix a tariff that will at once yield the required revenue without inflicting serious damage on foreign trade—in other words, to enable China to salve the hurts of the Christians by filling their pockets on one side without lightening their pockets on the other side.—Courier-Journal.

JUDGE JOHN M. LASSING.

The Governor's appointment of John M. Lassing to fill the vacancy in the office of Circuit Judge in this Judical District until the next regular election was hailed with delight in this county, of which Mr. Lassing is and has been for many years a prominent citizen. Few men at his age, 36 years, have achieved the political distinction Mr. Lassing enjoys. Fifteen years ago he graduated with honor from Central University at Richmond this State, and at once chose law as his profession, and in 1888 he began practicing in the courts of this and adjoining counties. He soon developed an admiration for politics, and shortly after becoming eligible to the office he was elected County Attorney, the duties of which he performed so entirely satisfactory that he was made his own successor without opposition, and was holding that office when appointed to the judgship last week.

Six years ago he was chosen a member of the State Democratic Executive Committee, since which time he has been prominent in the party organization, devoting much labor and contributing liberally of his means for party success. He was one of the personal advisers of the lamented William Goebel in his memorable campaign, and when the party was lining up for the great struggle for supremacy in the State in 1900, Mr. Lassing was selected as member of the campaign committee for the Sixth Congressional District, and he was unanimously elected secretary of the committee, to the arduous duties of which he devoted his entire time without compensation, and it is conceded by all his associates on the committee that his efficient work contributed largely to the party's success at the polls last November. In the work of raising campaign funds Mr. Lassing excelled any member of the committee the aggregate of the contributions raised by him being largely in excess of that of any other member of the campaign committee.

From the standpoint of party service Mr. Lassing eminently deserved the appointment the Governor bestowed upon a college chum, who is endowed with all the qualifications necessary to an able, fearless and competent Judge, which attributes have distinguished the Circuit Judges of this district in the past.

Mr. Lassing is the first Circuit Judge, or district official, that ever hailed from Boone county, while Owen had the office of Circuit Judge 15 years; Grant the office of Commonwealth's Attorney, 8, and Carrollton 6 years. As Mr. Lassing will be a candidate for election next November, he should have no opposition as a recognition of his faithful party service, and for the further fact that his county has never held either of the district offices, while she has always contributed her share to party success.

Mr. Lassing's canvass for the judgship will not be a personal fight against any of the able jurist in the district who may aspire to the office, but his claims for election will be based on his qualifications for the office, his long and faithful party service, and the further fact that Boone county has never before asked the district for an office. These are good, substantial reasons why he should be given the nomination, and are strengthened by the further reason that the district should endorse, by his nomination and election, his appointment by Governor Beckham.

FOR Circuit Judge Boone presents as her candidate, her leading and ablest attorney, Hon. John M. Lassing, than whom there is not better material in the district for the position, and she believes the other four counties in the district will concede that she is entitled to the circuit judgship at least occasionally, and will assist in Mr. Lassing's nomination.

Prominent Chinese are divided as to the ability of China to pay the indemnity demanded by the Powers. The proposition of the United States to reduce the amount meets with little encouragement. The Protestant missionaries, also, refuse to reduce their claims. The Catholics reduced their claim and settlement has been made.

Fine weather for cut-worms.

First Assistant Postmaster-General Johnson is to be credited with a movement of practical value to the cotton growers, in seeking to have the American-made cotton twine replace the jute twine now used for tying up mails in the Postoffices of the country. About 1,600,000 pounds of jute, it is stated, are annually used for the postal service, and the change would call for an equal amount of cotton. As the low-grade cotton would be employed and the market for such cotton is usually dull, the new demand for it could not fail to effect the price of that grade considerably, to the corresponding benefit of the growers.

To get the full value of our wool it must be washed. The difference between the prices of washed and unwashed wool is so great that it pays the grower every time to wash it. Good Delaine wool will not shrink one-third, which prices quoted in the market seem to indicate. There are many ways of washing, however, which do not prove successful. I have seen some housed breeding ewes washed so that the discoloration which appeared only in patches before the operation was distributed all through the wool, practically injuring its quality to a considerable extent. By distributing the color all through the wool it was given a dingy appearance which immediately excited the suspicions of the buyers.

Nevertheless, the careful preparation of the wool for market is as essential to-day as any other feature of the business. In the northern wool-growing sections, cold weather and cold water often make the work late in the season, and this sometimes proves quite a disadvantage. Probably what is needed as much as anything else in every good wool-growing section of the country is a co-operative scouring house. This would solve the problem and save to the farmers a considerable part of the profit that now goes to the commission men. It would cost little to send the wool to such a house and have it scoured ready for market. Scoured wool sells so much higher that the profits in some instances would be increased from 20 to 50 per cent. Such a scouring house could be conducted in almost any good sheep raising district on the commission plan. It would pay both the farmer and the commission men. The two could agree on a fair commission for scouring the wool, and the farmers could easily keep such a house running. In fact, it would draw upon a wide neighborhood, for it would pay the growers to have their wool scoured at home on a fixed basis, and then ship it to market in this condition. As it is now the unscoured, unwashed wool is always purchased at such low prices that there is a very wide margin of profits left for somebody to make before the wool is finally made up into cloth.

There are too many middlemen who must get their pay. By disposing of a few of these the grower would receive mort, and the consumer would actually be charged less for his manufactured product. A good scouring house would save washing, which is sometimes an expensive process, and also save loss in other ways. A house of this kind located right in the heart of a wool-growing country could easily calculate upon handling from ten to fifteen million pounds of wool annually.—W. E. Edwards, Illinois.

EVEN the North seems to be settling down to the belief that it is better, after all, to let the South settle the negro suffrage problem after its own fashion.

The members of the several lodges will meet at the hall of Boone Union Lodge in Union at 1 p. m., from which place they will proceed to the grave.

J. M. Lassing received his commission as circuit judge, last Friday evening, and early Saturday morning he appeared before J. C. Revill, a notary public, and took the oath of office. This proceedings created a vacancy in the office of county attorney, and in a few hours that vacancy was supplied by Judge Roberts opening the county court and entering an order appointing D. E. Castleman, who will fill the vacancy for the remainder of the term.

As Tony Bentler and wife and Master Eddie, were returning from the dedication at Erlanger, Sunday evening, they were caught by the rain, when Tony attempted to raise his buggy top, which frightened the horse and it began kicking. Mrs. Bentler and Eddie jumped out of the buggy, Eddie having received a slight kick on one hand, while Mrs. Bentler was badly bruised on one of her lower limbs. The dash board was kicked out of the buggy. It was a narrow escape from a serious accident.

At the annual election for trustees of the Walton Graded School, May 4, T. F. Curley received 106 votes, Wm. Ransler, 59 and Dr. A. M. Jones, 59. Mr. Curley was given a certificate of election, and Mr. Ransler was appointed to fill vacancy, after which the board was reorganized, Mr. Curley being elected president and W. O. Rouse, secretary. By the law governing the graded free schools of Kentucky in all cases of a tie vote, there is no election, and the board of trustees must fill the vacancy. It may be as well to state here, that in the recent election Dr. Jones did not wish to be a candidate, but his friends were determined to have a contest, and as the result showed each knew that they were in a race to the finish.

ABOUT AMUSEMENTS.

Dr. Talmage Lays Down Some Guiding Principles.

How to Decide Whether Any Recreation Is Right or Wrong—Sport a Means, Not an End—Warning to Young Men.

[Copyright, 1901, by Louis Klopsch, N. Y.]

This discourse of Dr. Talmage is in accord with all innocent hilarities, while it reprehends amusements that belittle or deprave; text II. Samuel ii. 14: "Let the young men now arise and play before us."

There are two armies encamped by the pool of Gibeon. The time hangs heavily on their hands. One army proposes a game of sword fencing. Nothing could be more helpful and innocent. The other army accepts the challenge. Twelve men against 12 men, the sport opens. But something went adversely. Perhaps one of the swordsmen got an unlucky clip or in some way had his ire aroused and that which opened in sportfulness ended in violence, each taking his contestant by the hair and with the sword thrusting him in the side, so that that which opened in innocent fun ended in the massacre of all the 24 sportsmen. Was there ever a better illustration of what was true then is true now—that which is innocent may be made destructive?

What of a worldly nature is more important and strengthening and innocent than amusement, and yet what has counted more victims? I have no sympathy with a straitjacket religion. This is a very bright world to me, and I propose to do all I can to make it bright for others. I never could keep step to a dead march. A book years ago issued says that a Christian man has a right to some amusements. For instance, if he comes home at night weary from his work and feeling the need of recreation, puts on his slippers and goes into his garret and walks lively around the floor several times there can be no harm in it. I believe the church of God made a great mistake in trying to suppress the sportfulness of youth and drive out from men their love of amusement. If God ever implanted anything in us, he implanted this desire. But instead of providing for this demand of our nature the church of God has for the main part ignored it. As in a riot the mayor plants a battery at the end of the street and has it fired off, so that everything is cut down that happens to stand in the range, the good as well as the bad, so there are men in the church who plant their batteries of condemnation and fire away indiscriminately. Everything is condemned. But Paul the apostle commends those who use the world without abusing it, and in the natural world God has done everything to please and amuse us. In poetic figures we sometimes speak of natural objects as being in pain, but it is a mere fancy. Poets say the clouds weep, but they never yet shed a tear, and that the winds sigh, but they never did have any trouble, and that the storm howls, but it never lost its temper. The world is a rose and the universe a garland.

And I am glad to know that in all our cities there are plenty of places where we may find elevated moral entertainment. But all honest men and good women will agree with me in the statement that one of the worst things in these cities is corrupt amusement. Multitudes have gone down under the blasting influence never to rise. If we may judge of what is is going on in many places of amusement by the pictures on board fences and in many of the show windows there is not a much lower depth of profligacy to reach. At Naples, Italy, they keep such pictures locked up from indiscriminate inspection. Those pictures were exhumed from Pompeii and are not fit for public gaze. If the effrontery of bad places of amusement in hanging out improper advertisements of what they are doing night by night grows worse in the same proportion, in 50 years some of our modern cities will beat Pompeii.

I project certain principles by which you may judge in regard to any amusement or recreation, finding out for yourself whether it is right or wrong.

I remark in the first place, that you can judge of the moral character of any amusement by its healthful result or by its baleful reaction. There are people who seem made up of hard facts. They are a combination of multiplication tables and statistics. If you show them an exquisite picture they will begin to discuss the pigments involved in the coloring. If you show them a beautiful rose they will submit it to a botanical analysis, which is only the post-mortem examination of a flower. They have no rebound in their nature. They never do anything more than smile. There are no great tides of feeling surging up from the depths of their soul in billow after billow of reverberating laughter. They seem as if nature had built them by contract and made a bungling job out of it. But, blessed be God, there are people in the world who have bright faces and whose life is a song, an anthem, a paean of victory. Even their troubles are like the vines that crawl up the side of a great tower on the top of which the sunlight sits and the soft airs of summer hold perpetual carnival. They are the people you like to have come to your house; they are people I like to have come to my house. If you but touch the hem of their garments you are healed.

Now, it is these exhilarant and sympathetic and warm-hearted people that are most tempted to pernicious amusements. In proportion as a ship is swift it wants a strong helmsman, in proportion as a horse is gay it wants a stout driver, and these people of exuberant nature will do well to look at the reaction of all their amusements. If an amusement sends you home at night nervous, so that you cannot sleep, and you rise up in the morning not because you are slept out, but because your duty drags you from your slumbers, you have been where you ought not to have been. There are amusements that send a man next day to his work with his eyes bloodshot, yawning, stupid, nauseated, and they are wrong kinds of amusement. They are entertainments that give a man disgust with the drudgery of life, with tools because they are not swords, with working aprons because they are not robes, with cattle because they are not infuriated bulls of the arena. If any amusement sends you home longing for a life of romance and thrilling adventure, love that takes poison and shoots itself, moonlight adventures and hair-breadth escapes, you may depend upon it that you are the sacrificed victim of unsanctified pleasure. Our recreations are intended to build us up, and if they pull us down as to our moral or as to our physical strength you may come to the conclusion that they are obnoxious.

Still further, these amusements are wrong which lead you into expenditures beyond your means. Money spent in recreation is not thrown away. It is all folly for us to come from a place of amusement feeling that we have wasted our money and time. You may by it have made an investment worth more than the transaction that yielded you hundreds of thousands of dollars. But how many properties have been riddled by costly amusements.

The first time I ever saw the city—it was the city of Philadelphia—I was a mere lad. I stopped at a hotel, and I remember in the eventide one of these men plied me with his infernal art. He saw I was green. He wanted to show me the sights of the town. He painted the path of sin until it looked like emerald, but I was afraid of him. I shoved back from the basilisk—I made up my mind he was a basilisk. I remember how he wheeled his chair round in front of me, and, with a concentered and diabolical effort, attempted to destroy my soul, but there were good angels in the air that night. It was no good resolution on my part, but it was the all encompassing grace of a good God that delivered me. Beware, beware, O young man! "There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof is death."

The table has been robbed to pay the club. The champagne has cheated the children's wardrobe. The carousing party has burned up the boy's primer. The tablecloth of the corner saloon is in debt to the wife's faded dress. Excursions that in a day make a tour around a whole month's wages, ladies, whose lifetime business it is to go "shopping," large bets on horses, have their counterparts in uneducated children, bankruptcies that shock the money market and appall the church and that send drunkenness staggering across the richly figured carpet of the mansion and dashing into the mirror and drowning out the carol of music with the whooping of bloated sons come home to break their old mother's heart.

I saw a beautiful home where the bell rang violently late at night. The son had been off in sinful indulgences. His comrades were bringing him home. They carried him to the door. They rang the bell at one o'clock in the morning. Father and mother came down. They were waiting for the wandering son, and then the comrades as soon as the door was opened threw the prodigal headlong into the doorway, crying: "There he is as drunk as a fool! Ha, ha!" When men go into amusements that they cannot afford, they first borrow what they cannot earn, and then they steal what they cannot borrow. First they go into embarrassment and then into lying and then into theft, and when a man gets so far as that he does not stop short of the penitentiary. There is not a prison in the land where there are not victims of unsanctified amusements.

Merchant, is there a disarrangement in your accounts? Is there a leakage in your money drawer? Did not the cash account come out right last night? I will tell you. There is a young man in your store wandering off into bad amusements. The salary you give him may meet lawful expenditures, but not the sinful indulgences in which he has entered, and he takes by theft that which you do not give him in lawful salary.

I go further and say those are unChristian amusements which become the chief business of a man's life. Life is an earnest thing. Whether we are born in a palace or hovel, whether we are affluent or pinched, we have to work. If you do not sweat with toil, you will sweat with disease. You have a soul that is to be transfigured amid the pomp of a judgment day, and after the sea has sung its last chant and the mountain shall have come down in an avalanche of rock you will live and think and act, high on a throne where seraphs sing or deep in a dungeon where demons howl. In a world where there is so much to do for yourselves and so much to do for others God pity that man who has nothing to do.

I go further and say that all those amusements are wrong which lead into bad company. If you go to any place where you have to associate with the intemperate, with the unclean, with the abandoned, however well they may be dressed, in the name of God quit it. They will despoil your nature. They will undermine your moral character. They will drop you when you are destroyed. They will not give one cent to support your children when you are dead. They will weep not one tear at your burial.

I had a friend in the west—a rare friend. He was one of the first to welcome me to my new home. To fine personal appearance he added a generosity, frankness and ardor of nature that made me love him like a brother. But I saw evil people gathering around him. They came up from the saloons, from the gambling hells. They plied him with a thousand arts. They seized upon his social nature, and he could not stand the charm. They drove him on the rocks, like a ship, full winged, shivering on the breakers. I used to admonish him. I would say: "Now, I wish you would quit those bad habits and become a Christian." "Oh," he would reply, "I would like to, but I have gone so far I don't think there is any way back." In his moments of repentance he would go home and take his little girl of eight years and embrace her convulsively and cover her with adornments and strew around her pictures and toys and everything that could make her happy, and then, as though hounded by an evil spirit, he would go out to the inflaming cup, and the house of shame, like a fool to the correction of the stocks.

I was summoned to his deathbed. I hastened. I entered the room. I found him, to my surprise, lying in full everyday dress on the top of the couch. I put out my hand. He grasped it excitedly and said: "Sit down, Mr. Talmage, right there." I sat down. He said: "Last night I saw my mother, who has been dead for 20 years, and she sat just where you sit now. It was no dream. I was wide awake. There was no delusion in the matter. I saw her just as plainly as I see you. Wife, I wish you would take these strings off me. There are strings spun all around my body. I wish you would take them off me." I saw it was delirium. "Oh," replied the wife, "my dear, there is nothing there, there is nothing there." He went on and said: "Just where you sit, Mr. Talmage, my mother sat. She said to me: 'Henry, I do wish you would do better.' I got out of bed, put my arms around her and said: 'Mother, I want to do better. Won't you help me to do better. Won't you help me.' No mistake about it, no delusion. I saw her—the cap and apron and the spectacles, just as she used to look 20 years ago. But I do wish you would take these strings away. They annoy me so! I can hardly talk. Won't you take them away?" I knelt down and prayed, conscious of the fact that he did not realize what I was saying. I got up. I said: "Good-by. I hope you will be better soon." He said: "Good-by, good-by."

That night his soul went up to the God who gave it. Arrangements were made for the obsequies. Some said: "Don't bring him in the church; he is too dissolute." "Oh," I said, "bring him. He was a good friend of mine while he was alive, and I shall stand by him now that he is dead. Bring him to the church."

As I sat in the pulpit and saw his body coming up through the aisle I felt as if I could weep tears of blood. I told the people that day: "This man had his virtues, and a good many of them. He had his faults, and a good many of them. But if there is a man in this audience who is without sin, let him cast the first stone at this coffin lid." On one side the pulpit sat that little child, rosy, sweet faced, as beautiful as any child that sat at your table this morning, I warrant you. She looked up wistfully, not knowing the full sorrows of an orphan child.

Oh, her countenance haunts me today, like some sweet face looking upon us through a horrid dream. On the other side of the pulpit were the men who had destroyed him. There they sat, hard visaged, some of them pale from exhausting disease, some of them flushed until it seemed as if the fires of iniquity flamed through the cheek and crackled the lips. They were the men who had bound him hand and foot. They had kindled the fires. They had poured in the wormwood and gall into that orphan's cup. Did they weep? No. Did they sigh repentingly? No. Did they say: "What a pity that such a brave man should be slain?" No, not one bloated hand was lifted to wipe away a tear from a bloated cheek. They sat and looked at the coffin like vultures gazing at the carcass of a lamb whose heart they had ripped out. I cried in their ears as plainly as I could: "There are a God and a judgment day." Did they tremble? Oh, no, no. They went back from the house of God, and that night, though their victim lay in Oakwood cemetery, I was told that they blasphemed, and they drank, and they gambled, and there was not one less customer in all the houses of iniquity. This destroyed man was a Samson in physical strength, but Delilah sheared him, and the Philistines of evil companionship dug his eyes out and threw him into the prison of evil habits. But in the hour of his death he rose up and took hold of the two pillared curses of God against drunkenness and uncleanliness and threw himself forward until down upon him and his companions there came the thunders of an eternal catastrophe.

Again, any amusement that gives you a distaste for domestic life is bad. How many bright domestic circles have been broken up by sinful amusements! The father went off, the mother went off, the child went off. There are to-day the fragments before me of blasted households. Oh, if you have wandered away, I would like to charm you back by the sound of that one word, "home." Do you not know that you have but little more time to give to domestic welfare? Do you not see, father, that your children are soon to go out into the world, and all the influence for good you are to have over them you must have now? Death will break in on your conjugal relations, and alas if you have to stand over the grave of one who perished from your neglect!

THE IDEAL HOUSEWIFE.

One Who Possesses the Best Intellectual Equipment and Is Conscientious in Her Work.

Though household methods are changing as the years go by and manufacturers of various foods now assist the housekeeper in ways that were unknown a score of years ago, the difference between good and bad housekeeping is just as apparent today as it ever was, says the New York Tribune. Even in remote districts of the land the baker's cart now brings bread to the door, and the family are not compelled to subsist on bread which is "a compound of putty and lead" as they were in old times, if the week's baking at home went awry. We store our supplies for the table for a short term, for grocery stores and markets are near at hand; but the housewife who allows her sugar bucket to become empty or finds herself compelled to send for a pound of butter just before dinner is just as reprehensible as in old times when, if supplies ran short, she must sometimes wait weeks for them. The absence of housewifely thought and care is just as manifest, the sense of scrambling and hand to hand methods just as apparent in one case as in the other.

The ideal housewife needs the very best equipment of faculties, intellectual and moral. She must be of the highest type of womanhood in order to fulfill her duties in their highest manner. Bad housekeeping has the smirch of disgrace which belongs to selfishness, want of thought for others, and want of regard for duty which no good woman should willingly attach to herself. It has become the fashion to look down upon housekeeping as beneath the consideration of a fine mind or a noble spirit. This high sounding talk is contradicted by history. That nation is in the highest social condition which has the most perfect homes, where woman's work as a homemaker and conserver of home is most marked. The glory of England is in its homes, where English women are practical housekeepers and active rulers of the household; where servants are so trained and work is so systematized that it is not unbearable drudgery.

A little hard, uncongenial work must fall to the lot of all of us who do our duty faithfully. Neither man nor woman is saved from it, yet we hear vastly more about the drudgery of woman's work than of man's. Yet the average man must find that a great deal of his work is not "worthy of the consideration of a fine mind or noble spirit." It is drudgery pure and simple, but it is work that he must do. Are women quite sure that they are influenced by any more noble motive when they seek to avoid housework than simple indolence and slothfulness?

"The lives good for most people and intended for them," says a great modern writer, "are the lives of sheep and robins, and they may be every evening and morning thankful that they have fields to lie down in and banks to build nests in, and are not called by Heaven to the sorrow of thrones."

COURTESY TOWARD CHILDREN.

Conduces in a Great Measure to Agreeable Association and Pleasure in the Home.

Great injury is done not only to the present happiness of children but to their future character and conduct by lack of politeness in our intercourse with them, says the Ledger Monthly. Their possessions are their own. How often do we forget that! They are ridiculous trifles, they are worthless and in our way, yet we have no right to throw them out and burn them, without warning or consultation. A sister's or an aunt's gentle persuasions will do much to gain pleasant consent to yielding up the treasures which encumber too much space or are laid down in improper places. A box or basket provided to hold these priceless sticks and stones, and once or twice a little pleasant aid in gathering them, and the collector will be gained over to what he sees will surely preserve his property and at the same time the little fellow will have learned respect for other people's property and the proper way to ask leave to touch and handle.

While mothers are busy with their often overwhelming duties, it often happens that to an elder sister much care of the children who are able to amuse themselves is given, and here she will have a delightful chance to help them to acquire the attractive manner which is such a help in future life, and give them practical demonstrations of the comfort and joy of a home governed by courtesy to old and young alike.

Causes of Bad Manners.

The good fortune of the American girl doubtless leads to her want of polite manners. Accustomed to having her "own way," devoid of deference and respect for her parents, or for anyone else, not sensitive to the feelings of others, because she has not been trained to observe them, the American girl goes on her way rejoicing, and does not realize the careless selfishness of her attitude until she finds herself, perhaps, with very few friends and no admirers. There are two characteristics which contribute largely to the development of bad manners. The first is just plain, common, every-day selfishness, a vice shared in by the whole human race. The other finds in our country its peculiar and especial home. I mean irreverence.—Ada C. Sweet, in Woman's Home Companion.

British Joke Machine Made.

An American physician has a baby aged one year old. This bouncing infant has such wonderfully developed muscles that when his father holds a cane in his two hands it will grasp it and draw itself up to its coin three times. Devoted Darwinians could hardly wish for a better illustration of the prehensile powers of babies. They must be very near their monkey ancestors in America.—London Globe.

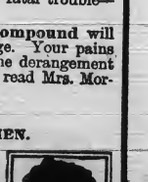
"It Seems as Though my Back Would Break."

Is it not true? Women suffer, feel the very life crushed out of them, grow old before their time. Each morning wake up determined to do so much before the day ends, and yet—

Before the morning is very old the dreadful BACKACHE attacks them, the brave spirit sinks back in affright; no matter how hard they struggle, the "clutch" is upon them and they fall upon the couch crying:

"Why should I suffer so? What can I do?"

The answer is ready, your cry has been heard, and a woman is able to restore you to health and happiness.



Backache is only a symptom of more fatal trouble—heed its warning in time.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound will stop your torture and restore your courage. Your pains come from unnatural menstruation or some derangement of the womb. Let those who are suffering read Mrs. Morton's letter and be guided by her experience.

AN OPEN LETTER TO WOMEN.

"DEAR MRS. PINKHAM:—I have been so delighted with Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound I thought I would write and thank you. My system was entirely run down. I suffered with terrible backache in the small of my back and could hardly stand upright; was more tired in the morning than on retiring at night. I had no appetite. Since taking your Compound I have gained fifteen pounds, and am gaining every week. My appetite has improved, have no backache, and I look better than I ever looked before.

"I shall recommend it to all my friends, as it certainly is a wonderful medicine."—MRS. E. F. MORTON, 826 York St., Cincinnati, O.

When a medicine has been successful in restoring to health more than a million women, you cannot well say, without trying it, "I do not believe it will help me." If you are ill, don't hesitate to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound at once, and write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for special advice—it is free.

NO TINKERING OF TARIFF.

It Now Suits Mark Hanna, Consequently Must Not Be Interfered With.

The evident difference of opinion amongst republicans and republican newspapers on the necessity of tinkering the tariff to down the trusts or to preserve it intact in the interest of those combines, is rather remarkable in view of the fact that the tariff pirates have hitherto all stood together only clamoring that their particular trust or interest might be especially favored. Some of the republican brethren have evidently since the adjournment of congress discovered that their constituents are "against the trusts" and favor the repeal of the schedules that give them special privileges. Congressman Babcock, of Wisconsin, who is chairman of the republican congressional committee, seems to have heard the voice of the people in his district and probably elsewhere. President McKinley wants to dodge the difficulty by reciprocity treaties which, while favoring the trusts, will allow the foreigners to come in and compete with our producers of fruits, oils and wines, etc., and still protect the manufactuer. This was the arrangement in the reciprocity treaty with France which was rejected by the senate.

There is another advantage seen by the president in tinkering the tariff by means of reciprocity treatles. It prevents the matter coming before the house of representatives, where all matters of revenne constitutionally belong, and relegates it to the executive sessions of the senate which are held with closed doors. Thus the people and their representatives know nothing about the matter until it is settled. The czar of Russia and his executive council arrange tariffs and taxes in this way and its initiation by President McKinley and the republicans is one of the strong indications of our near approach to imperialism. Senator Hanna evidently agrees with the reciprocity programme and it is singular that on the same day that President McKinley announced it, on his tour of triumph through the south, Senator Hanna makes a more extended statement of the intentions of the administration in another part of the country. In an interview at Washington, Pa., he said: "I am not cheeky enough to endeavor to speak for the republican party, but I can speak for myself, and as far as I am concerned there will be no tinkering with the tariff. Congressman Babcock's position does not merit serious consideration.

"Although, perhaps, it would make but little difference to take off the metal schedule, do you suppose we are going to do that and allow the Nova Scotia Steel company, for instance, to dump her products into New England? Not much. We may not need the tariff so much any more as far as foreign countries are concerned, but we must protect ourselves against the big institutions which are springing up on our border.

"The Dingley tariff is a most perfect work of human ingenuity, balanced on scientific principles. It must not be disturbed nor must there be any changes in our tariff except on a basis of reciprocity."

The pretended modesty of Hanna is evidently intended as another hit at Babcock for having dared to interfere in a matter that only McKinley, Hanna and the trusts have any business to meddle with. The balance of the republican party, including the republican members of congress, are evidently expected to ratify any action that they may desire, reciprocity or otherwise.

Hanna tells one great truth in his interview when he intimates that the tariff is so ingenuously balanced that it is dangerous to disturb it in the slightest manner or it may fall to pieces. All this tempest may however be allayed when the major returns from his free trip and takes Babcock and his following in hand backed up by the persuasive eloquence of the steel and other trusts. There is plenty of time to arrange matters. Congress does not meet until December.

——While the republican expansionists have come face to face with the fact that protection and their pet policy will not pull in the same harness, the tobacco growers of New England and Virginia, the cane sugar growers of Louisiana, the beet sugar growers of Michigan, California, New York, Nebraska, Colorado, Utah and other places, and the fruit growers of Florida and California are convinced that a tariff for protection is the proper thing. Beet sugar plants, too, are to be erected this year in Illinois and even in Indiana. Taking these facts into consideration, who can say that there will not be a pretty fight in the republican party on the tariff question?—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——If the republican party proposes to treat the tariff as the fetich described by Mr. Babcock and acts on a Dingley-law-or-nothing programme it will find serious breakers ahead. The most extreme believer in a protective tariff cannot indorse schedules that protect trust giants and enable them to fatten at the expense of the American consumer, who has to pay more than the foreign customer; and the party which stands on such a platform will surely go down in defeat.—Atlanta Constitution.

——The president says that we are to solve the problems of the present "untrammeled by the past." It might be well, though, Mr. President, to hang on to the constitution and the declaration of independence.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

IS PROSPERITY UNIVERSAL?

President McKinley Sees Only the Best Side of Things While Touring the Country.

The president in his speech at New Orleans congratulated the people upon sharing "in the universal prosperity and contentment so characteristic at this time of every part of our common country."

There is no doubt that the comfort and elegance of the surroundings of the president, seeing nothing but the best side of the towns he is visiting, gives him the idea that all is richness and comfort, and yet on the same day there were strikes inaugurated in dozens of cities. The very train men who have the care of the sumptuous free train with which the railroad companies are entertaining President McKinley are on the verge of striking for reasons that they think compel them to do so. But then President McKinley may have his eye on the Wall street boom and as nearly all those who accompany him are addicted to the ticker habit, he doubtless hears hourly of vast prosperity, for of course those traveling with a president on an expansion and prosperity tour must all be bulls and big winners.

From another part of the country comes a very different tale and from one of the greatest manufacturing cities at that. The textile trade which suffers periodically from some distemper peculiar to itself, says the Philadelphia Record, is again in a state of stagnation. This is a favorable time, therefore, for renewed speculation as to the cause of those recurring "slumps" in this industry. The general industrial situation seems to be good, and yet the textile business is at a practical standstill in so far as profit taking is concerned. Many mills have been working only part time; large numbers of hands are idle, and although an improvement is momentarily looked for, and has actually come in some of the factories, trade is generally recognized to be in a very unsatisfactory state.

While the reaction affects the industry in all parts of the country, such troubles always strike home with particular force in a great textile center like Philadelphia. Inactivity in the mills means a great deal to labor, and when the workmen are not earning wages regularly the general trade of the city is depressed. The reasons which are given for the present state of things are as numerous as are the men from whom explanations are sought. There are hints as to overproduction; under consumption because of warm winters, competition (in cotton goods) from southern mills, which have lost the Chinese trade; the high price of cotton and wool; the instability of prices; too little protection, and the lack of foreign outlets for the products of our looms. Some Philadelphia carpet manufacturers still believe that their trade is being injured by Chinese mattings.

The chief complaints come from the woolen and carpet factories, which need a plentiful supply of raw materials at steady prices. The woolen manufacturer who looks forward to a time when he can secure foreign markets for his goods, knows that there is no hope for that so long as he must pay protective prices for his fiber. No American manufactured products can be sold abroad in competition with the products of other countries when our manufacturers have to pay higher prices for their raw maferial. Bonuses to western sheep growers in a prohibitory tariff on clothing wools, and to the Chinaman who makes cheap mattings in a tax on carpet wools, which wools we cannot raise in this country, are not making Philadelphia manufacturers or their employes very happy.

COMMENTS OF THE PRESS.

——Many republicans are now talking "a give-and-take-tariff policy, which means to them that others are to give and they are to take.—Indianapolis News (Ind.).

——"We want to make people in distant lands familiar with our products," declares President McKinley. So we do—so we do, and, therefore, let us pull down the bars and trade!—Philadelphia Record.

——American enterprise and capital are quite capable of making the world familiar with our flag, and that without any government favors. But the artificial barriers erected by the McKinley school of economists have first to be overcome or broken down.—Philadelphia Times.

——The Dingley tariff is, as Hanna says, "balanced on scientific principles." Every fellow got his share of the swag, scientifically distributed, and "it must not be disturbed" for obvious reasons. If one of the brethren is despoiled of his share he will pull down the whole house of cards.—Albany Argus.

——There are some general principles which are not subject to change to which the democratic party adheres, as the tariff, strict construction of the constitution, the liberty of the citizen, the foundation of which is government by consent of the governed. These are always and everywhere sound democratic principles. They are perennial.—Dubuque Herald.

——"Why do you permit a tariff to remain on articles which can be produced here cheaper than elsewhere?" This is the question which Representative Babcock, of Wisconsin, himself a republican, says will be put squarely to his party in the next campaign. Steel and iron manufacturers, he says, produce no revenue to speak of, but it is a fact that they can be manufactured cheaper in the United States than in any other country. So with other products of other trusts.—Buffalo Post.

WESTERN CANADA'S DECEMBER WEATHER EQUAL TO THAT OF MAY IN MINNESOTA.

To the Editor:

Thomas Regan and C. Collins, of Eden Valley, Minnesota, went out to Western Canada last December as delegates, to look over the grazing and grain lands that are being offered at such low prices and reasonable terms. This is what they say:

"We arrived in Calgary about the 20th December and although we had left winter in Minnesota and Manitoba, we were surprised to find beautiful warm weather at this point, quite equal to what we have in May in Minnesota. There was no snow nor trace of winter to be seen, and the climate was really splendid. Horses, cattle and sheep were running out, in prime condition, with plenty of feed on the prairie, and really better than that of ours stabled in the south. We are impressed with this country as one of the finest mixed farming countries we have ever seen. The immense tracts of fertile lands, well sheltered and abundantly watered, leave nothing to be desired.

Leaving Alberta we returned east and visited the Yorkton district in Assinibola. We drove out about ten miles at this point and were highly pleased with the splendid samples of grain we were able to see, wheat yielding 25 bushels, oats 60 bushels. Roots were also good specimens. From what we have seen, we have decided to throw in our lot with the Yorktoners —satisfied that this part of the country will furnish good opportunities for anyone anxious to make the best of a really good country. Any agent of the Canadian Government, whose advertisement appears elsewhere in the columns of your paper will give you full particulars of the new districts being opened out this year in Assinibola and Saskatchewan.

Yours truly,

STAYS IN JAIL FOR SPITE.

Pennsylvania Court is Asked to Expel a Stubborn Old Man from Prison.

James Gannon, 68 years old, infirm and gray-headed, declares that you can't make a man leave a jail if he doesn't want to. He has been in the county jail at Scranton, Pa., since 1894, and now says he won't leave. The question that is concerning the authorities is, Can a free man be forced to leave a jail? reports a local exchange.

The old man was sent there seven years ago for refusing to sign a deed disposing of his own property. He was accused of contempt. He declared he would never sign. A bill was passed giving county officers the right to sign deeds of transfer, and Scranton breathed free again. But Gannon won't budge out of jail.

"I've got used to jail life, and I like it," said he. "I guess I won't leave. I'll spite them all."

Then habeas corpus proceedings were started. Gannon refused to sign the petition. Now Scranton waits somebody to come forward with a scheme to get a man out of jail against his wishes.

Willing to Pay Any Price.

Very few people are willing to pay more than the manufacturers' price for any article even though it be remarkably good, like Palmer's Lotion. Such was not the case with Mrs. Martha M. Johnson, of Derby, Connecticut, who wrote: "Please to send me some of your Lotion. I am willing to pay any price for it, for I have heard it highly extolled and seen its wonderful effects. This proves Palmer's Lotion as nearly priceless as any remedy can be. If your druggist doesn't have, it send to Solon Palmer, 374 Canal street, New York, for samples of Palmer's Lotion and Lotion Soap.

Local News.

J. Schofield & Son will receive wool as follows: Bullittsville, May 27, before noon and at Petersburg afternoon; on 28th at Burlington before noon, and at Bellevue afternoon.

Enoch Rouse, of Gunpowder, came along Monday while Bert and Onnie Rouse were worying with their saw-mill, and gave them a big lift. Mr. R. has had considerable experience with a saw mill, and can discover a defect in a mill in an instant.

Following were the applicants for teachers' certificates, last Friday and Saturday: A. M. Yaley, W. K. Souther, C. M. Summers, Henry R. Newton, Bessie Vanuess, Ethel Terrill, Percie Ryle, Sue Gray McWethy, Mary J. Gaines, Lizzie Vest, Ella Norman and Kathrina Clayton.

B. F. McGlasson and W. E. Walton, of the Point Pleasant neighborhood, were in town last Friday. They were in session with A. B. Rouse on matters pertaining to the next exhibition of the North Kentucky Agricultural Association. They are striving to make the next fair the best in the State at the beginning of the new century.

Our friend, Joe Birkle, of Bellevue, passes through Burlington at a certain hour every Friday morning enroute to the city with his produce wagon, returning every Sunday afternoon at the same hour. His appearance here on these trips is so regular the people set their time pieces by him. And he is just as reliable in every other particular.

W. C. Respass, of Covington, was in town Saturday afternoon, enroute to visit R. A. Brady, one of his old Confederate comrades. Mr. R. was looking like a three-year old, and was in excellent spirits. The visit was one of great pleasure to both these old Confeds. Billie and Bob are two as clever gentlemen as can be found in a day's journey.

Shudders At His Past.

"I recall now with horror," says Mail Carrier Burnett Mann, of Levanna, O., "my three years of suffering from Kidney trouble. I was hardly ever free from dull aches or acute pains in my back. To stoop or lift mail sacks made me groan. I felt tired, worn out, about to give up, when I began to use Electric Bitters, but six bottles completely cured me and made me feel like a new man." They're unrivaled to regulate stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. Perfect satisfaction guaranteed by W. F. McKim; Union Drug Store, Union; J. G. Geisner, Florence; H. L. Eskew, Walton; O. N. Grant, Grant.

AT REST.

These small words, so significant in their meaning, are like the "Balm of Gilead" poured on the bereaved hearts of her family, when the imprisoned spirit of Mrs. N. N. Winston left its mortal casket and entered into the rest that remaineth for the people of God, at her home in Smithfield, Henry co., Kentucky, April 24th, 1901, in the 65th year of her age, having been afflicted for two years with an incurable disease. All that skilled physicians and devoted nurses could do was done to alleviate her agony, but her inevitable fate was decided by Him Who chasteneth those He loves in suffering. She prayed for death to release her, for she had no doubt or fear for her eternal future, and gave expression of her resignation "that the Lord's will be done," and "that the Lord has been so good to me," and "ever leaning on His everlasting arms," even in her last moments, testifying to her love for her family.

She was a native of Boone, and was born February 28th, 1837. Her nuptial vows were taken November 29th, 1859, as the loving and faithful wife of N. N. Winston. This union was blessed with four children, one dying in infancy, the others living, are Mrs. Estelle Harter, of Covington; and Harry and Norman Winston. For 45 years she was a devoted member of the Methodist church, and realized how sweet it was to serve God, and be a Christian and "a child of the King." She was of a hopeful and cheerful disposition, loved the sunshine of nature as well as the sunshine in the soul. Loving service was the key-note of her life, for all the gifts of her heart and mind were for her family and friends, and she leaves the memories of a sweet and noble life. To me sacred has been her fellowship, pleasant and sweet our associations of bygone days, and we have the blessed assurance of her enjoying eternal rest in that beautiful Alabama of the soul, and hope to meet her with the blood-washed throng in the great beyond, and join in the Heavenly Choir of the Redeemed.

Clouds must come as well a sunshine both in the natural and spiritual world, yet we can not understand the mystery of God in taking one so beloved, useful and considerate, from her own, where she will ever be missed, yet in her happy exchange of time for eternity, sorrow for happiness, work for rest, she has, by it, secured a citizenship in that city where no storm ever beats on the glittering strand. The reward of her loved ones to emulate her virtues, follow her example and give their faithful service to Him Who hath died for us, will be, in a few years, a united family in that "sweet home beyond the Jordon." Her life, which was so pleasant and beautiful, in her home, was in her death, by her submission to God's will during her intense suffering, far more beautiful. For days she was at the River's brink, waiting for the summons, "child, come home." Then her life's work was done, her debt was paid, her agony was over, the River was crossed, "the gates were left ajar" for her rest.

After the funeral at her home by Revs. Gadby and Theoboid, she was brought to her old home, where those who knew her first and loved her best, mingled their tears of sympathy together as she was consigned to our mother earth in the family lot at Florence, "for there be no dark valley where Jesus comes to reign."

Your loved ones, will miss you sadly, in the passing of the year,
For none like a mother, her own can comfort, and can cheer.
Yet they have the precious promise of Jesus. "some day, some sweet day,"
To help you sing His praises, when the mist has rolled away.

LIZZIE B. WINSTON.

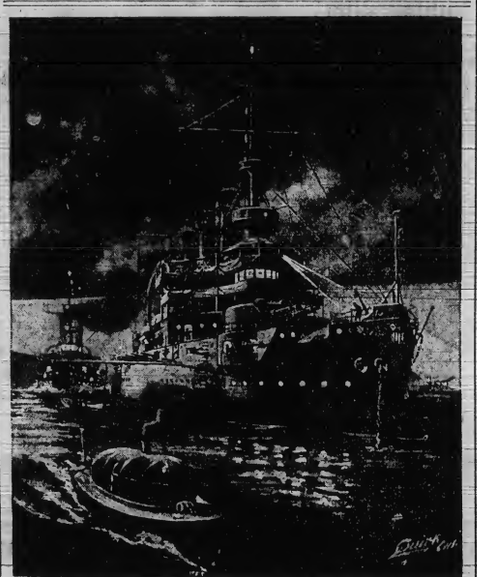
BIG BATTLESHIP OHIO.

The Vessel Launched in the Presence of President McKinley.

Miss Barber, Instead of Mrs. McKinley, Pressed the Button That Sent Vessel Down the Ways.



San Francisco, May 19.—Guided by a lovely Ohio hand, and with a sweet Ohio voice speaking her christening benison, the gigantic red hull of the battleship Ohio, as grim and stern as a warrior of old bathed in blood, at noon Saturday entered the water.

Scarcely had the noon whistles and bells been heard than President McKinley made his way to the stand erected beneath the steel beak of the monster ship. On his arm was his favorite niece, Miss Barber, who had come to fill the place of her beloved aunt. In his train was Gov. Nash and pretty, timid Helen Deshler, the winsome sponsor for the latest and best of the floating fortresses of the glorious flag.

Grouped on the platform was a notable throng of dignitaries, among them the governors of four states. From the timbered depths below comes a shrill whistle. The last prop and stay but one has been cut away and all is in readiness. Obedient to a signal the president and his niece step to the table at the prow, where an electric button gleams. Little Miss Deshler, in her virginal christening gown, is handed the champagne flask. It is wreathed with the national tricolor and hangs from the prow by a band of parti-colored ribbon. Another signal and the Ohio Poetess, Ida Eckert-Lawrence, steps forward to read the ode commemorative of the occasion. The master of the works, Irving Scott, nervous, but resolute, from time to time inspects a chronometer.

At 12:26 the Pacific will be at flood tide and the ship can sweep across the clinging bar. The ode is finished and silence comes down. The shipbuilder suddenly closes his watch and waves his hand. Miss Barber nervously leans forward and places her finger on the button, the president directing her movement. Far from below comes a cracking sound. The electric current has set in motion the mechanism that removed the last prop. The towering, dull-red mass seems to sink down into the christening cradle, and before the awaiting crowd realizes it has begun her dash into the waves.

"I christen thee Ohio," rings out in a girlish treble, and with glistening eye and sure hand the white-gowned sponsor sends the christening flask smashing against the steel wall before her. A cheer goes up as the president waves his hat. Outside a hundred hoarse whistles break into a moaning shriek, and a hundred guns send out a racking, crashing volley. The Ohio is launched, and whether for weal or woe must row buffet and breast the waves. As she glided majestically along the launching course with ever decreasing speed the assembled thousands send up their joyous welcome, and when she at last stops obedient to her assigned place, a mighty shout and renewed blast of whistles marks the close of the ceremony.

PASSED AWAY.

Mrs. Lyman J. Gage, Wife of the Secretary of the Treasury, Died in Washington.

Washington, May 18.—Mrs. Lyman J. Gage, wife of the secretary of the treasury, died at her residence, No. 1715 Massachusetts avenue, N. W., after an illness of nine weeks' duration. With her when the end came were her husband, her married daughter, Mrs. F. F. Pierce, of Evanston, Ill., and Dr. W. W. Johnson, the attending physician. For a time before her death Mrs. Gage suffered considerable pain, but she maintained her bright and cheerful demeanor, and was conscious to the last. Heart trouble, the result of grip complications, was the immediate cause of death.

Mrs. Gage was exposed to the inclement weather for about an hour on inauguration day, but at the time her health did not seem to have been affected. On March 11 she left here for Evanston to visit her married daughter. While there she experienced a chill and took to her bed, but soon recovered sufficiently to return to Washington, where she had been confined to her room ever since. Mrs. Gage was a native of Albany, N. Y., and 58 years of age. She was married to Secretary Gage in Denver, Col., in 1887. There were no children from this union, Mrs. Pierce being a child by a former husband.

The wives of the men quarreled. Saturday morning Conway wrote a letter to Garrison saying he had cheated his father in a trade for a milk dairy. Garrison showed the letter to Conway's father, who upbraided the son.

THE FILIPINO PEOPLE.

Gen. Fred Grant Tells of the Conditions in the Philippines.

We Must Expect Much Robbery and Brigandage and Pillage and Even Murder For Some Time to Come.

San Francisco, May 20.—Brig. Gen. Frederick D. Grant, who returned from Manila on the Sheridan, speaking of the condition in the Philippines, said:

"Everything is settling down and we are getting at the real work of governing and teaching the people. Their peculiar national character makes them hard subjects for the present. You must remember that they were originally pirates; that their civilization is of the 14th, not of the 20th century; and the tendency to brigandage is so bright among them that it amounts to a disease. In many districts the paying of tribute to robbers is considered the regular thing, no more out of the way than taxes. Our task now is to give them good government in their municipalities; to protect themselves against themselves, unless they learn a taste for order, and then withdraw gradually from active interference, leaving the towns one at a time as we see that they can be trusted, but having our troops within striking distance for some time, after we leave any district, so as to insure against a relapse. We must expect much robbery and brigandage and pillage and even murder for a long time.

"It is surprising to see the results that we have obtained in getting law and order into these people in the few months of comparative peace. My district included the provinces of Bulacan, Pampango and Bataan, with the population of 600,000, all Tagalo provinces, and considered the most lawless in the islands. Now there is not a robber band in the whole district, a condition unknown in the whole history of the Filipino people. We have in every town of the district a local government under a local civilian.

"The property-holding class in the islands is composed of persons who are pretty ignorant and who could not quite understand the situation. They are naturally our friends, but were under constant pressure to throw their fortunes in with the insurgent cause, when they heard that a party was coming into power in the United States which was in favor of withdrawing the troops and giving all the government to the insurgents they did not know what to do. If they stood out against the insurrection they would be likely to lose their lives and property as soon as we turned our backs.

"With that kind of people, timid, ignorant, afraid to espouse a cause that might lead to their destruction and with the most unscrupulous element in the islands in charge of the native forces, there was no use in going ahead. I stopped active operations after the nominations and tried only to protect my own men. The cessation of activities had a deplorable result in the slaughter of innocent people by the lawless element, partly sanctioned by the insurgent leaders.

"After the elections, when the natives learned that we were there to stay, the real end of the insurrection came."

The surrender of Lieut. Gen. Mariano Trias had more effect on the Philippine mind, Gen. Grant thinks, than the manifesto issued by Aguinaldo.

Peking, May 20.—Gen. Chaffee at midnight Saturday night issued his farewell order ending the American relief expedition in China. The American troops will board the transports next Wednesday at Taku and Thursday will leave direct for Manila.

M. Pichon, the French minister, left here for home Sunday morning.

A meeting of the foreign ministers will be held Monday but it is not likely that much will be accomplished as some of the ministers have not yet received instructions from their home governments. The ministers, commenting upon the blame attached to them by the people for their slowness, say that as a matter of fact they are powerless to act without orders from home. One of the foreign ministers told a press correspondent that he had been instructed to cooperate heartily with the other ministers. He found upon consultation with his colleagues that their instructions were absolutely different from his. Consequently co-operation was practically impossible.

THE SERVIAN SCANDAL.

Rumors of the Abdication of King Alexander and Banishment of Queen Draga Not True.

Belgrade, May 20.—All rumors regarding the abdication of King Alexander, the resignation of the cabinet and the banishment of Quee Draga, growing out of the recent sensational experiences of the Servian royal family are declared to be without foundation.

Prof. Catazunene of Bucharest, who was summoned with Dr. Wertheim, of Vienna, announces that Queen Draga presents all the symptoms of false or nervous pregnancy, and that the rapid developments of the symptoms was brought about by the advice given her majesty by Dr. Gaulet, who, in urging her to lead a sedentary life, encouraged the queen in the opinion that she was enciente produced an abnormal condition calculated to mislead both herself and her entourage.

The two specialists declare that Queen Draga is suffering from metritis, but that her condition is not serious.

Mrs. Barnes, who is a professional nurse, was engaged in nursing a sick woman at Edina when arrested. She is charged with having had guilty knowledge of her husband's death. She professes innocence. OSTRACISED FOR HUMANITY.

Prince Alphonse, of Bavaria, Given the "Blue Letter" for Being Too Gentle.

As a penalty for being too humane Prince Alphonse, the nephew of the regent of Bavaria, has been given the "Blue Letter." In American slang vernacular this might be interpreted to mean that he will hereafter receive the "marble heart" in select official circles. The "Blue Letter" means official degradation. He is, it seems, too humane for his uncle and the military commanders, and he has been called upon to suffer for his humanity.

He was asked to resign from the Bavarian army for no other reason than that he was too gentle and easy-going with those under his command. He is not severe enough to please the military, and the mistake he made was to manifest too much consideration for the horses under his charge. It was during the last maneuvers. On reaching a steep and stony descent, Prince Alphonse ordered the men to dismount, so that the horses might be spared. It is said that this order completely upset the plan of action. Popular feeling is intense against the authorities who have brought about the prince's dismissal, for he has always been popular with the subjects of his uncle. It is believed to be the first time a Bavarian prince has received the "Blue Letter."

THE CRISIS HAS PASSED

Mrs. McKinley Able to Sit Up Awhile Sunday Evening.

No Definite Date Has Been Decided Upon as to When the President Will Start For the National Capital.

San Francisco, May 20.—Mrs. McKinley's condition was so far improved Sunday evening that she was able to sit up awhile. This welcome news was given out shortly after 5 o'clock.

Gen. Shafter called on President McKinley, and while they were talking, word came down stairs that Mrs. McKinley was sitting up. The president at once asked to be excused and hurried to the sick room. The anxiety caused by Saturday night's bulletin, stating that Mrs. McKinley's temperature was higher, was dispelled at 10 o'clock Sunday morning, when Secretary Cortelyou announced that she had passed a comfortable night, and that the slight fever noted Saturday night had subsided. The president did not attend church, but remained at home nearly all day, only going out for a short walk just before noon. There were many callers at the Scott residence Sunday. There was a general feeling that the crisis had been passed and that Mrs. McKinley would continue to gain strength. No definite date has yet been decided upon as to when the president will start for the national capital, but it is hoped that Mrs. McKinley will be able to travel within a few days.

Secretary Long Sunday morning left for Colorado Springs to visit his sick daughter.

At 9:10 p. m. Secretary Cortelyou gave out the following bulletin:

"Mrs. McKinleys physicians report that she has had a very good day and progress made since morning is satisfactory."

President McKinley is in receipt of cablegrams from the king and queen of England, President Loubet, of France, and many other European potentates inquiring as to Mrs. McKinley's condition.

Among the callers Sunday on President McKinley was Calvin S. Titus, the first American soldier to mount the walls of Peking, who returned Friday on the transport Sheridan.

THE STRIKE ENDED.

Starting of the First Car in Albany Sunday Was the Cause of a Demonstration.

Albany, N. Y., May 20.—The street railway officials and the strikers came to an agreement Saturday, the latter practically gaining all demands.

The incidents of Sunday, the first day of active operations of all the railway lines affected by the great strike have been few because of the heavy fall of rain. The two men shot by national guardsmen in defense of life and property were buried Sunday afternoon, but the pouring rain kept away the thousands of sightseers that otherwise would have marked the occasion with their presence. The departure of the 2nd regiment east, Sunday morning was the second feature of the day, and stirring sermons in many city pulpits aided in closing the incident.

The funeral of Leroy Smith was devoid of incident, except that it was attended by city officials and directors of the street railway people. At the funeral of William Walsh there was nearly a riot. While the services were proceeding in the church the crowd that had been unable to gain admission saw a uniformed soldier coming down the street. Instantly the people were in a state of ferment. A rush was made for the unlucky soldier, but a few wise heads held the crowd back for a minute while several others advised the man to run.

REFINING PETROLEUM.

Weston Howland, the Discoverer of the Method, Died in Fair Haven Mass.

Fair Haven, Mass., May 20.—Weston Howland, the discoverer of the method of refining petroleum, died Sunday night, aged 86. In 1860 he tried his experiments with petroleum which had just been found in Pennsylvania in large quantities and was about to give up the problem. By accident he solved the secret of refining and, convinced that petroleum was to be the oil of the future, he established a factory here. It brought him a fortune and fame.

GOV. NASH ILL.

While at Santa Cruz He Was Poisoned With Poison Oak, and Is Confined to His Bed.

San Francisco, May 17.—The programme for the entertainment of Gov. Nash and the Ohio visitors were declared off Thursday on account of the illness of Gov. Nash. While attending the christening of one of the big trees in his honor near Santa Cruz Monday last, he was poisoned with poison oak. He was partially blinded, and suffered very much while addressing the Union League club Wednesday night. Thursday he had not been out of bed, and is attended constantly by a physician and nurse. While his affliction is not serious, it prevents him from participating in any of the functions that had been arranged in his honor.

Thursday was Ohio day at Golden Gate park. The tallyho rides and the banquet were given, but the open air reception and the speaking were abandoned, as Gov. Nash was not present. At the banquet Gov. Geer, of Oregon, responded for his state, and Messrs. Burkett, Langworth, Allen, Collier, Zerebe, Whiting and others, from Ohio, were called by Toastmaster M. H. De Young, who paid high tribute to President McKinley, Gov. Nash and other Ohioans, and referred to the affliction of Mrs. McKinley as the cause of such general sympathy that no festivities could be participated in. After drinking to the health of the president and Gov. Nash, the party drank to the recovery of Mrs McKinley in impressive silence, while standing.

AT JACKSONVILLE.

The Ending of Martial Law Was No Attended By Any Disorder—The Insurance Loss.

Jacksonville, Fla., May 17.—The ending of martial law Thursday was not accompanied by any disorder. While the civil authorities have resumed their usual functions, troops will be garrisoned in the city for the present to perform police duty, and the withdrawal, when it begins, will be gradual. The number of people fed by the commissary Thursday was 3,294.

A shipbuilding concern which was burned has already resumed operations. The site of the burned Commercial bank building at Laura and Bay streets, 75 feet front on Bay, together with a small lot, with 32 feet front on Laura street, were sold Thursday for $80,000, and it is announced that a handsome building will be erected immediately. A prominent insurance adjuster stated Thursday night that the total insurance loss would perhaps reach $6,000,000, one million more than the estimates which have been heretofore published. Residence losses and many mercantile losses are being paid, and the adjustments in nearly all cases are quick and satisfactory. The New York chamber of commerce and Merchants' association Thursday sent several cars of supplies. One carload of supplies was also received from Chicago through a Chicago newspaper.

MacArthur is prosecuting an active campaign of education in the Philippines comes to the war department in the shape of a number of copies of a condensed "History of the United States of America," which has been published under the military governor's direction and is being scattered broadcast for the enlightenment of the Filipino race. The history is printed in both English and Spanish in alternate pages. The frontispiece is a map of the United States. Then follows a presentation of facts concerning the physical features of this nation, the separation of the American colonies from Great Britain and the nation's growth after independence, both as to territorial and industrial development. The government itself is then taken up and set forth in detail. The volume concludes with the full texts of the constitution, its amendments and the declaration of independence.

PRESBYTERIAN ASSEMBLY.

Report of the Committee on Creed Revision Laid Before Commissioners—Minority Report.

Philadelphia, May 18.—The report of the committee on creed revision was laid before the commissioners Saturday, though it is not expected the subject will be discussed by the assembly before the middle of next week. Surprise was manifested when it was learned that a minority report will be presented. The minority report agrees in all its conclusions except clause B, which recommends that the revision committee be instructed to prepare a brief summary of the reformed faith bearing the same relation to the confession which the shorter catechism bears to the larger catechism. The minority believe that this recommendation is not identical with what many of the Presbyteries requested in their answers to the inquiries and that it erects an additional standard of orthodoxy with the shorter catechism. The report is signed by F. W. C. Humphrey and William McKibben.

SUICIDE IN A PARK.

A Portuguese Artist Shot a Chicago Nurse Girl and Then Killed Himself.

Chicago, May 18.—Lorrie Mandanso, a Portuguese artist, 24 years old, shot Alice Cusack, a nurse, aged 15 years, through the neck and then killed himself in Washington park, which at the time was thronged with people.

Mandanso had made himself disagreeable to a number of people, and complaint being made to the police, an officer started to drive him from the park.

This rendered the Portuguese frantic, and, running up to Alice Cusack, who held in her arms a baby belonging to Mrs. J. H. Lambert, he shot the girl through the throat, inflicting a dangerous, but not necessarily fatal, wound. He then shot and killed himself. The shooting of the girl was wholly without provocation as she was an entire stranger to him.

PRIEST MURDERED.

Father Phillips, Noted Arbitrator of Miners' Strikes, Loses His Life in New York.

New York, May 18.—Rev. Edward S. Phillips, rector of St. Gabriel's Roman Catholic church at Hazleton, Pa., and known all over the world as "The coal miners' friend," was found dead in the apartments of a man calling himself Dr. Kirk Stanley in the rear of No. 730 Ninth avenue.

The priest had been dead probably seven or eight days, and the police are now of the opinion he was lured to Stanley's rooms by a woman who had lived for a year past with Stanley as his wife, and who is said to have been frequently seen at night unescorted in the vicinity of Fourteenth street and Third avenue.

It is the belief of the police that Phillips was enticed into the rooms of the doctor, given a dose of powerful drug, and the body hidden behind the curtains. One man is under arrest.

PHENOMENAL RECORD.

How a Bright Northern Boy, with Southern Sympathies, Built Up a Big Business.

The eleventh annual United Confederate Veterans' reunion, which will occur at Memphis, Tenn., May 28, 29 and 30, promises to be one of the most unique gathering in the history of the association. Scores of men of national reputation will participate in the exercises planned by the various committees, but among all of them none will be entitled to more consideration than Mr. P. P. Van Vleet, president of the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., of Memphis, whose endeavors to bring the reunion to Memphis were backed by a cash subscription of $750, and whose career illustrates most forcibly what a resolute, ambitious boy can accomplish in this country of ours.

Mr. Van Vleet was born in Kalamazoo, Mich., in 1849, the lineal descendant of one of four brothers who emigrated from Amsterdam, Holland, in 1662, and took part in affairs on Manhattan Island long before the English invaded New Amsterdam. After graduating from Kalamazoo college, young Van Vleet, with only a few hundred dollars in his pocket, cast his lot in the south, with whose political aspirations he and his father had always been in sympathy, landing at Memphis for the first time in May, 1871. Shortly afterward he secured a position with the once prominent drug house of G. W. Jones & Co., and has since been identified closely with the social and business life of Memphis. In 1879 he became half owner of the Jones drug house, and in 1884 established the firm of Van Vleet & Co. In 1894 he purchased the Mansfield Drug Co., which he consolidated with his own business, forming the Van Vleet-Mansfield Drug Co., the largest busines of its kind in the south and the largest jobbers of quinine in the United States. The offices of the company will be confederate headquarters during the coming reunion, and Mr. Van Vleet is chairman of the committee on entertainment of general officers.

Mr. Van Vleet is one of the busiest men imaginable, and yet he is always accessible to those who call, whether on errands of business, politics, religion or benevolence. His courtesy is unfailing, and is a marked characteristic of an unusual man.

The home life of Mr. Van Vleet is ideal. He lives in a stately home, "Chetolah," on the hill on Poplar boulevard, built in colonial style, and ornamented with all the modern accessories that travel, art and good taste can supply. His wife is a daughter of Maj. A. N. McKay, known to southerners as one of Jackson's gallant Indian fighters. Two daughters and a son complete a family circle which, in genuine happiness and contentment has few equals even in the south, the land of happy homes.

Caught a White Muskrat.

George Archer Brown, whose house is close to the Canogn marshes, in the town of Fayette, Seneca county, N. Y., has in his possession a white muskrat. Like the white deer, the white robin and the white blackbird, this is a very rare animal, tradition having it that but once before has one been seen in central New York waters. Mr. Brown captured the rat, a full-grown one, during the high-water period upon the submerged Montezuma marshes, where it had been drowned out of its usual haunts by the flood. He succeeded in capturing it alive, and values it highly. It differs from the common muskrat only in color, having instead of a ruddy or dark brown fur almost a pure white.

Baby's Costly Luncheon.

The little granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, of Emporia, Kan., swallowed a $50 bill a few days ago. Mrs. Brown had received two $50 bills in a letter, and had laid them on a table by her while she read the letter. The little girl came in, picked up one of the bills, and began to chew it, and swallowed all of it except the corner on which the figure 50 was stamped. This was taken to a banker to see what could be done to get a new one for it, but he said nothing could be done, as the government required the number of the bill.

Land Division in China.

Agricultural land in China is divided into three classes, each class paying a different rate. First-class lands are in fertile valleys, with a good depth of soil and a good water supply, producing annually two crops of rice or one crop of sugar cane. Second-class lands are generally situated higher up the slopes of hills and have not such a good water supply as the first class. The third-class lands are those situated on still higher slopes and are far removed from a good water supply.

STATE NEWS ITEMS.

KUKLUX BANDITS ROUTED.

George Cook, Notorious Outlaw, Wounded in a Battle With Detectives.

Mayking, Ky., May 16.—A pitched battle occurred between a posse headed by John Wright, the celebrated mountain detective, and the Boone's Forks kuklux gang, which has been terrorizing this section years been terrorizing this section for years on the headwaters of Rock House creek, 12 miles north of here.

The courier arriving here from the scene says a country ball was in progress at the home of Albert Meade, a kuklux sympathizer, when the officers approached George Cook, one of the desperate kuklux outlaws and a son of the notorious Bill Cook, who was leading in the ballroom. The other kuklux members were on the outside. Cook made a desperate resistance, the other kuklux members coming into play with their Winchesters. A pitched battle was fought, at the conclusion of which George Cook lay mortally wounded outside of the Meade home.

The remaining kuklux, Morgan Reynolds, George Mullins, John H. Mullins, George Sullimans and others, fled into the adjacent mountains. After Cook was wounded to the death the officers followed them into the forest and are now on their trail.

It is more than probable that there will be a wholesale slaughter when the opposing enemies meet.

Great excitement prevails throughout Letcher county. None of the officers was hurt in the desperate conflict.
